ABRUZZI COMING?

Royal Aid to Gain Miss Elkins.

Washington Diplomatic Gossip Has It Duke Will Be Ambassador.

King Edward Opposed to the Match Instead of Being Intercessor.

English Ruler Has Set His Heart on Match With Princess Patricia.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The New York World says:

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy will befriend his cousin, the Duke of the Abruzzi, and help him to marry Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of Senator Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia, by appointing him Italian Ambassador to the United States. This is the gossip today in diplomatic circles.

A diplomat explains the reticence of the Italian Embassy as to the movements of the Duke, and also accounts for the repeated visits of Italian warships to this country, as well as the recent appointment of an Italian military attaché, which office has been vacant at Washington for several years.

By becoming Italian Ambassador, the Duke would relinquish his titular rights to the vice-admiralty of the Italian navy, but this is according to his personal wishes. He has decided to abandon a career that removes him from all possibilities of a home of his own. Behind this announcement, which is really not so surprising when considered at close range, there is a precedent. It is a return to the customs of the past, when all ambassadors were the male members of a ruler's immediate family.

DUKE AS LECTURER.

The Duke will come again to the United States next spring by way of Japan, and he will lecture under the auspices of the National Geographic Society at Washington, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. He is at present in Asia.

Royal Ambassador to the United States would be no precedent for Italy. Something like fifteen years ago an Italian prince went to Germany as an ambassador. He was a special ambassador, and his mission did not cover a long period.

If the royal Duke should come to this country on a diplomatic mission it would be with unusual powers, not exactly understood by the informant.

It is well known here that Mayor Des Planches, the present Italian Ambassador, is nearing the end of his term in Washington. The relations of Italy with the United States have increased in importance in the last few years on account of the great number of Italians in this country.

KING EDWARD OPPOSED.

According to your informant, no foundation exists for the report that King Edward will intercede in behalf of Miss Elkins. Not only is he opposed to the match, but it was he who first spoke the dissenting voice. His hostility has been so marked that Mrs. Elkins, now traveling in Europe with her daughter, omitted from her itinerary all places which the British monarch might visit during their stay abroad.

This antagonism is marked, and not unselfish; therefore, no influence on the part of Lady Granard or any other favored hostess will change King Edward's attitude. He has set his heart on a match between the Princess Victoria Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, with the Italian nobleman, and he deems this union of far more importance—socially, politically and diplomatically—than could result from her marriage to King Manuel of Portugal, who has also been considered a matrimonial possibility.

HEAT FATAL IN ST. LOUIS.

Seven Die and Eighteen Are Seriously Prostrated—No End in Sight.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Seven deaths and eighteen serious prostrations was the record of today in sizzling St. Louis. The maximum temperature was 96, two degrees less than yesterday.

The forecast issued tonight does not promise any relief from the present hot wave for at least two days. A feature of today was the number of horses that dropped on the streets, the first general prostration of horses that has occurred this year.

The present hot wave is the most serious St. Louis has had for eight years. Saturday being a half holiday reduced the number of prostrations, for there was little work done in the afternoon.

ALLIGATORS GUARD MELONS.

Reptile Policeman Catches Thief in Patch and Holds Him for the Owner.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CAPE CHARLES (Va.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Edward Thompson's watermelon plantation near Horntown, a few miles distant from Cape Charles, is policed by alligators. One of these alligators last night caught John Ellison, a colored youth, 11 years of age, in the act of lifting a juicy melon from the vine. The alligator seized the boy by the leg, and held him fast.

The young negro's screams brought Thompson, who took the thief into custody. Thompson has one of the largest watermelon plantations in Virginia. In recent years depredations of his neighbors have cost Thompson several thousands of dollars. He determined to put a stop to thefts.

Last spring he had a number of alligators shipped to his farm from Florida. The reptiles were established in the melon patches, and their presence was widely advertised to the population. No one but the Ellison boy had ventured into Thompson's patch this season.

FOUND ON STREET, SHOT.

Marshfield Young Man Believed by Father to Have Been Murdered. Verdict Suicide.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARSHFIELD (Or.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Recorder A. Johnson, son of J. D. Johnson, who is one of Marshfield's most prominent citizens was found dead on a principal business street early this morning with a bullet wound through his heart. A revolver which Johnson recently had borrowed from a friend lay near and on this evidence the coroner brought a verdict of suicide.

The dead man's father is not satisfied and declares his son was murdered. An investigation has been set on foot by the District Attorney. Johnson's financial situation was comfortable and there was no known motive for suicide. He had recently declared that attempts had been made to hold him up and gave that as a reason for borrowing a revolver.

His father thinks he was killed by an enemy who had previously attempted his life and it is on this line that the investigation is proceeding.

MR. AND MRS. EVANS MEET.

Leave Vallejo After Conference, But Reconciliation Is Denied by His Friends.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VALLEJO, Aug. 14.—The departure of Mrs. Maud Evans for San Francisco this morning after a short visit here and the subsequent leaving of Naval Constructor Holden A. Evans, also in the direction of the bay city, gave rise to the report that the pair had been reconciled and that the divorce decree Evans had obtained would be annulled.

This was denied by Evans' friends who asserted that the present meeting was by appointment to discuss matters that grew out of the former hearing of charges brought by Evans against Lieut. F. W. Osburn which resulted in a reprimand for the latter while Evans was censured for the publicity given the case.

HEAVY TEMBLOR.

SEVERE EARTHQUAKE KILLS MANY JAPANESE.

Shock Occurs in Central Part of Island, Inflicting Heavy Damage in Nagoya—Twenty-one Are Reported Dead and Seventy Injured.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TOKIO, Sunday, Aug. 15.—A severe earthquake occurred in Central Japan yesterday (Saturday) afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The shock was particularly hard around Kyoto, Osaka, Lake Biwa and Nagoya. All railroad communication with these districts has been interrupted.

Many houses collapsed, and it is feared that many people were killed or injured.

Nagoya, with a population of more than 250,000, and one of the principal cities in Japan, located 170 miles west of Tokio, was badly damaged. Details are meager, because of the interruption of telegraph service with the cities most afflicted. Twenty-one dead and seventy people injured thus far have been reported.

One-fourth of the Shiga prefecture sustained considerable damage. Mount Ibuki, at the northern end of Lake Biwa, an extinct volcano, is reported to have collapsed near the top.

The shock was slight in Tokio.

Princess Will Become a Nun.

Clementine Seeks Refuge from Hopeless Love in the Church.

Youngest Child of Belgium's King Pines for Prince of France.

Passion for Victor Napoleon Survives Insults and Persecution.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BRUSSELS, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Balked in her love for Prince Victor Napoleon, insulted by her father and threatened with excommunication if she so much as sees or speaks to her noble lover, the Princess Clementine, youngest daughter of King Leopold of Belgium, is about to enter a convent. Reports of this last and most pathetic of the developments of a romantic love affair have stirred the court and diplomatic circles of half the capitals of Europe.

Young, beautiful, heiress to the richest monarch in the world, yet Princess Clementine of Belgium has never been happy. She is the only member of the family on speaking terms with her father; but even between them, no love is lost. She was never permitted the freedom that her sunny nature craves, and it is only when absent from home, at her chateau at Spa, or in her villa on the Riviera, that she can be said to enjoy existence.

Only those who know her well and are acquainted with her tragic love romance can answer the question why this charming and beautiful woman remains unmarried today, though courted by many of the wealthiest and noblest men of Europe.

When Prince Victor Napoleon, eldest son of Jerome Bonaparte, came to Brussels two years ago, he met the Princess Clementine. She is considered the most beautiful woman in the Belgian capital and the two fell desperately in love.

Unhappily for the union, the Prince was already married morganatically to a charming French woman. However, even this difficulty might have been surmounted, as the wife of the Prince, actually offered to retire in favor of Princess Clementine, if the latter could obtain the consent of her father and officials of the church. But when the proposal was made that the morganatic wife of Prince Victor Napoleon should return to France and leave her husband to Princess Clementine, such a howl of indignation was raised both by state officials and by the clericals, that the poor Princess and the unhappy Victor Napoleon were almost driven out of Brussels.

King Leopold, though importuned by his daughter and her lover to give his consent to the divorce and remarriage, remained obdurate, and refused to listen to the proposal.

Belgian Ministers alarmed at the notion that their country might be handed over to France through such an alliance, exerted all their efforts to destroy the happiness of the lovers. Scandals concerning the Prince and Princess were circulated. If, by accident, they both chanced to be away from Brussels at the same time, all sorts of unkind rumors were scattered broadcast concerning them.

From the moment it became known that Prince Victor and the Princess were in love there began a species of persecution. Anonymous letters—some of which are said even to have been written by King Leopold himself—poured in upon the wretched lovers, and they became the objects of intrigue on the part of both the state and the clergy. All sorts of attempts were made to drive the Prince from Brussels.

The gracious manners and popularity of Prince Victor Napoleon eventually won him favor, even in the King's eyes, and opposition would have been broken down, had it not been for the tremendous antagonism of the archbishop of Malines.

The archbishop denounced the proposed marriage and threatened excommunication and the lovers abandoned all hope.

AUTOS RUN UP DEATH SCORE.

Fifty-one Persons Killed and Over Thousand Injured in Chicago in Seven Months.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Automobiles have killed fifty-one persons and injured 1018 within the limits of Chicago in the first seven months of the year, according to figures compiled by Sergt. Horace H. Elliott, superintendent of police records.

The figures cover accidents of all descriptions in which automobiles figure. July leads, the deaths for that month being six, with 182 injuries. April and May are tied, with nine deaths. The figures do not include North Shore accidents, which have occurred beyond the Evanston boundary.

Sergt. Elliott points out that the majority of accidents were due to careless and incompetent chauffeurs and car owners who neglect city ordinances and warnings. The average number of deaths per month so far has been 7.28, and of injuries 154.4. There were 1507 accidents of all causes last year.

CHANGES UNIFORM.

CHICAGO GETS A NEW CHIEF.

LEROY T. STEWARD ACCEPTS JOB FROM BUSSE.

Superintendent of Postoffice of Windy City Will Take Up Duties as Head of Police Department—Has Proved His Ability as Executive and Organizer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Col. Leroy T. Steward is to be Chicago's new Chief of Police. Mayor Busse offered him the position several days ago and he announced his acceptance at 10:30 o'clock tonight.

Col. Steward is now and for a dozen years has been superintendent of the Chicago postoffice and is in charge of the city delivery. In this position he is the executive officer, having personal direction over a force as large as that in the city Police Department.

The new head of this most-important branch of this city's government, has had no police experience although his father has had some training along that line. But Col. Steward, through years of experience as an executive and organizer in one field and another, has proved his capability to be intrusted with the administration of the department.

The traits which commend themselves to Mayor Busse in considering Col. Steward for the position, are his executive ability, skill as an organizer and his habit of making himself the absolute master of any situation that confronts him. The new chief is a man who has expected and readily been granted the implicit obedience of those beneath him. He has been a strict, but impartial disciplinarian. He has had years' of experience in military affairs, having occupied leading places in the State militia. He has been familiar with politics, but has not been at all a politician.

SOUNDS KNELL OF "RATS."

Lillian Russell, Back from Abroad, Says There Is Fashion's Ban on "Puffs" as Well.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Lillian Russell returned tonight by the American Line from a trip abroad.

"Do you know, puffs and 'rats' are doomed forever?" she asked. "And you must wear your own hair, parted in the middle, and draped over your ears, and then brought around the head in a coil. It's simplicity itself—that is, if you have the hair. I protested that I did not have hair enough for all that, and was told to go out and buy some."

NEW ENGINE OF DEATH.

Emile Berliner Invents Aerial Torpedo to Attack Ships from Above.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A gigantic weapon of destruction, which will be more effective than the submarine torpedo and more far reaching than the heaviest gun, is the aërial torpedo invented by Emile Berliner of Washington. The invention is an evolution of the fish torpedo into a winged engine of warfare. The transformation is effected by the addition of small aëroplanes and by changing from marine to aërial propellers. The machine will be provided with horizontal motors or specially designed gyroscopes for keeping it balanced in air.

An attack by such a torpedo would be directed to the upper parts of a ship. It would not produce such vital wounds as the submarine but would be infinitely more deadly in its toll of human lives.

The cost of construction would be small and thousands could be built for the amount that covers the cost of a battleship, Berliner says. A speed of 100 miles an hour is possible, according to the inventor.

OSAKA FIRE.

SAVING OF SHRINE IS CONSIDERED MIRACLE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) Aug. 14.—When the steamer Empress of India, which reached port this afternoon, was leaving Kobe, sufferers from the fire that burned over five square miles at Osaka, causing thirteen deaths and injuring 300 persons, were strung out over the main road around the bay and making their way by junk and sampan to Kobe for succor.

The fire started at Tamadas hosiery factory in Nichomo northward, shortly before daylight on July 31, and spread rapidly, licking up the wattle and bamboo houses, across six streets, while the firemen from the Osaka waterworks were using water drawn with buckets from wells until the soldiers came from the Osaka garrison and began dynamiting houses in the path of the fire.

The main building of the great Tennoji temple was saved, and superstitious Japanese declare that this was due to miraculous intervention. The flames reached the temple at 10:30 a. m. While the crowds of priests were scurrying to rescue the art treasures, remarkable scenes were witnessed in the temple ground. Finally, when the rear gate was burned, a priest called upon the spirits of the dead to stay the flames. Soon afterward the wind veered, increasing in force and diverting the flames toward Horikawa, a wide canal connected with the Yodo River, on either side of which Osaka is built.

The Shinto priests were all garbed in their ceremonial white robes and were assisted by 300 troops of the Osaka garrison, sent to aid them to convey the temple treasures to another temple at Nakanoshi Park, on an island in the middle of the river. Here Gen. Issu and his troops from the garrison in Osaka castle, safe from the flames, had their headquarters.

It was hoped that the flames would be stayed at the Konkawa canal, where a great fight was made, but at 12:30 o'clock the fire leaped the canal and spread toward the Ume Dai station, the great station on the Tokkaido Uma. Thence it pursued its course southeasterly to the commercial museum and still further westward, burning the museum, the Osaka Court of Appeals and the northward district office, a newspaper office, the rice exchange, a commercial school, a girls' high school, the meteorological station, the Governor's official residence, the Kaisei Hospital and the Northern Yoshiwara, beside a very large number of private buildings.

Field hospitals were established by the militia and many injured were brought in for treatment. The proprietor of the hosiery factory where the fire started, and his wife, were stopped by the police from attempting to throw themselves in the flames, shouting that they did so to atone for the church.

In the afternoon four battalions of engineers came from Takatsuki, a suburb, with dynamite and began blowing down the houses in the Northern Yoshiwara on a large scale to try to stop the fire, but they were driven back. The iron fort served to split the path for the flames. Street cars on Dodjim were stopped, passengers ordered to alight, and were rushed through the burning area to the car sheds.

Failing utterly with the scant water supply, the troops toward evening devoted all their energies to aiding citizens save goods and to assisting children and the old and feeble to places of safety.

Most of the large factories which are in the suburbs escaped the flames.

The Nippon and Fukushima cotton mills were endangered, but were saved. The fire destroyed in all about 15,000 buildings.

Osaka is divided into four wards, with very narrow, but regular streets. Kitah-Ku, the north ward which covers four and a half miles, was almost wiped out. The east ward, which escaped, is the richest, containing the residences of the upper and middle classes. The offices of the banks and leading commission companies were located there and most of these were saved. The Tokio Mainichi says various fire insurance companies have lost so heavily that they will not be able to make payments.

Refuses to Lowe Greek Flag.

Island Government Formal Notifies Powers of Determination.

Turkish Fleet Anchored O Near-by Island, Ready for War.

French Battleships Hurri from Toulon to Avert Threatened Clash.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES

LONDON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive D patch.] A dispatch to the Cent News Bureau from Paris, stat that the Cretan government h informed the consuls of the p tectory powers that it will lower the Greek flag that floated from the fortress of Ca ever since the withdrawal of the int national troops from the island. T government has resigned, after hav announced that the flag must be lo ered by force, if at all.

French warships are to be sent reinforce the French guardships, n in Cretan waters, and, if possible, av the threatened clash. The battles Victor Hugo and another have alrea sailed from Toulon.

The resident foreign consuls will t no action prior to the arrival of battleships, lest it might cause a C tan rising.

A Turkish fleet is now lying off island of Karpathos, ready for w Both the French and British gove ments have urged the Porte not to low the fleet to enter Greek waters.

The Greek flag was hoisted over fortress of Canea on July 27, the after the final evacuation by the int national troops. In May of last y when the powers—Great Britain, R sia, France and Italy—decided grad ally to withdraw their troops, Crete clared for union with Greece; and island has been in a state of exci ment ever since. Turkey has been manding that her rights in Crete sh be maintained.

TURKISH CLAIMS.

The island of Crete, thoroughly Gr in its traditions, became in 1715 a p of the Ottoman empire, after be handed about from one power to other through all its early history. T little country was in almost const insurrection through the ninetee century. In 1897, Greece interven and in a short, decisive war, w beaten by Abdul Hamid, and the h of the Turk on Crete was more firm secured than ever.

About this time the powers took hand. In 1898 they constituted the i and, with its adjacent isles, an auto mous state, under a high commissi er, subject to the suzerainty of T key, but paying no tribute to t country. Since August 14, 1906, t right of the King of Greece to non nate the high commissioner has be recognized by the four powers. Und their sanction, Greek officers ha taken over the direction of the ge darmerie and militia. In May of la year the powers decided gradually withdraw their troops. When t was announced, Crete declared union with Greece.

Early last month the diplomat representatives of the powers at Co stantinople presented a note to t Porte, in which they said the tim was inopportune for the discussion Turkish proposals relative to the f ture of the island, but as each of t protecting powers would station warship in Suda Bay, the supre rights of Turkey would not be a fected.

DISPUTE "SUPREME RIGHT."

The arrangement, however, has n proved satisfactory to any one co cerned. The flags of Turkey and t four powers are in evidence nowhe except on an uninhabited island Suda Bay. The "supreme rights of t Sultan" are in reality merely theore ical. He receives from Crete no tri ute. Even the postage stamps a Greek. The Cretan flag displays th blue and white of Greece. The Gree legal code is in force, and the Go ernor of the island is a former mi ister of Greece. Greece and Crete lik wise are dissatisfied, holding that the should be joined in government they are in race, history, language an religion.

Hence, with the departure of t last of the international forces, Gree saw her opportunity to test the di position of the powers by assertin full authority over the island.

Greece replied on August 4 to th Turkish note, which, although couche in friendly terms, practically demande the recall of the Greek officers servin in Crete. Greece maintained that th question was in the hands of the fou protecting powers of Crete, with whos knowledge and consent the officers i question were sent to the island. Tur key then intimated that her friendl request to Greece would be followed unless satisfaction was obtained, b a more energetic demand.

As No. 8 drew into Husted at about forty miles an hour the crew of the engine saw a light engine standing on the switch north of the station.

Mistaking the engine for the second section of No. 1 the crew did not stop, and went through the station as fast as two engines could draw the thirteen heavily-laden cars. As soon as the train got out of the station, the engineer of the first engine of No. 8 saw another train coming slowly down the incline.

He slammed on the emergency brakes, and shouted to other members of the two crews to jump. But before they had time to move No. 8 had rammed No. 1 so hard that all three engines went into the ditch. Fireman J. A. Gossage of train No. 8 was killed as he was firing his engine.

The members of the other crew escaped serious injuries. The engineer on the first engine of No. 8 is reported to have been working extra and since the wreck has been acting like a madman. He had to be held down by friends.

Smoker No. 572 attached to train No. 8 was the car in which the people were killed. All those badly injured were in the same car. There is not enough left of the car, beyond the frame, to tell that it was formerly a smoking car. The baggage cars on both trains, the smokers and the next cars, were all wrecked. The three engines are total wrecks.

A relief train bearing physicians, surgeons and nurses, was hurried to the rescue from this city. A wrecking crew was sent up from Pueblo. The dead and injured were brought to this city on the special and No. 1, the two arriving shortly after noon. Heroic work in helping the injured was done by women tourists under the direction of H. A. Cameron and C. R. Dowe of Boston, who were going to Denver after a trip to Yellowstone Park. The members of the party turned two Pullman cars over to the injured. Within a few minutes after the collision, the two cars had been turned into a hospital.

NNOUNCEMENT OF CENSUS SUPERVISORS IS HELD UP.

President Taft Cannot Finish Signing Hundreds of Commissions and Delay Follows—Western Trip Now Includes Phoenix and Prescott, But Shortens Stay in Los Angeles—Col. Lyons Forced to Eat Beans.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

EVERLY (Mass.) Aug. 14.—Although President Taft had a long talk with Postmaster-General chcock this afternoon, regarding e disputed census appointments, iouncement of the names of more n 200 supervisors yet to be comissioned was withheld until tomor-he delay in announcing the sucful candidates was due to the inlity of Mr. Taft to complete toy the signing of the commissions. retary Nagle of the Department of nmerce and Labor affixed his sigure to all the the commissions bee leaving today.

ol. Cecil Lyon, Republican Naal Committeeman from Texas, was rried back to Boston last night en the Beverly curfew bell began toll, but accompanied Postmasterneral Hitchcock to the Taft cote today. Lyon said he wanted to k over the President's trip through as next October, but if the Presit should bring up the question of isus supervisors he would be glad converse on the subject with the ief Magistrate.

As a matter of fact, Col. Lyon is ging that all the sixteen census ervisors in Texas be Republicans, d his protest has held up the names the eight Democrats and eight Rebicans named for the Texas offices. Col. Lyon intimated tonight that his guments had made some impression the President.

he President today altered his prensly-announced route through Arina to include Phoenix and Prescott the places to be visited on his stern trip. According to the resed schedule the President will leave Los Angeles on the evening of October 12 instead of the morning of the 13th. After a brief stop at Phoenix on the 13th he will proceed to Prescott, whence he will resume his journey to the Grand Cañon, where he will spend October 14.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock, who is going to the Far West for an outdoor vacation, will join the President at Los Angeles and make the trip with him through Arizona and New Mexico.

At El Paso, the President will be joined by Secretary of War Dickinson.

President Taft took his brother, Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, out on the Essex Country Club golf links today, and "beat him to a frazzle." The President made the course in 93.

The President has learned the Essex links, and is now striking his true form. As these links are rated five or six strokes harder than the Chevy Chase course, the President felt that his showing today was the best he has ever made.

Mr. Taft has found Myopia links almost too difficult, and he will play at Essex again on Monday.

Col. Lyon has anything but a high opinion of Beverly. In the first place, he delayed seeking a place to dine until 7 o'clock, and then found that both of the hotel dining-rooms had closed. With Director of the Census Durand, Col. Lyon had to sit on a high stool at a lunch counter, and eat Boston beans and pie. The Texan thought this bad enough, but when the curfew bell began to toll at 9 o'clock he nearly collapsed.

"Well, you must admit, colonel, that Beverly is better than Oyster Bay," interposed one of his friends.

"Yes, better in one way," replied the colonel; "there are more trains to leave it, and me for the next one."

DELAY.

LOODLESS GAME OF WAR WAITS COMING OF TRANSPORT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—The beginning of the bloodless war which is to be waged in Southeastern Massahusetts during the coming week was ostponed unexpectedly tonight until omorrow morning. All preparations ad been made by the defending or blue army" to resist an attack, and ven to take the initiative in action. There was much disappointment hen Brig.-Gen. William A. Pew, in ommand of the defenders, got word ate tonight that on account of the ailure of one of the enemy's transorts to arrive, the entire maneuvers ad been postponed for eight hours.

The announcement came to Gen. Pew's headquarters from Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the Department of the East and the chief mpire in the war game.

Tonight the headquarters of the "blue army" were near Robin's Pond, about six miles east of Bridgewater, with the right of the line a little west of Bridgewater and the left a little east of Halifax. The whole line is about twelve miles long.

Dynamite and fuses are to be carried, and are to be actually placed in position under bridges in readiness to be set off. But when all is in readiness to blow up a bridge, instead of igniting the fuses, as would be done in real warfare, the placards are to be placed on the bridges to notify the "enemy" that "theoretically" the bridge is no more, and that he will either have to build a pontoon bridge or ford the shallower streams.

Dispatches received in the city during the day brought the news that a large part of the invading army had landed from the ships somewhere on the coast of Buzzard's Bay. According to the rules of the war game, all telegraph and telephone lines were supposed to have been cut immediately after the first news was flashed from the south shore to Boston that that city was threatened with attack.

The news of the landing places of the invaders was, by the rules of the game, supposed to be learned by the army of defense only by means of the field telegraph, or by scouts, possibly by the use of balloons.

Gen. Wood arrived at New Bedford during the day, and established his headquarters on the White farm in Rochester, ten miles from that city.

and France—has been presented to the Turkish government.

It promises that the powers will see that the objectionable flag hoisted by the Cretans is removed permanently.

EUROPE NOT AFRAID OF TURKISH BLUSTER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In this capital today there is but one opinion as to the Cretan crisis. This is that Turkey cannot possibly go to war with Greece, no matter how much the Porte may bluster or how strong may be its demands on Athens.

That the Turkish aggression has been beyond all reason is evident. The four protective powers—England, France, Russia and Italy—will force the Cretans to haul down the Grecian flag, and the ministry of King George has said in exemplary fashion that the matter is entirely in the hands of this international alliance. Its formal note breathed good will to Turkey in every line.

That these pacificatory utterances have been received with truculent growls in Constantinople has amazed Europe.

The first impulse was to credit the Kaiser—the continent's bogy man—with playing some devious part in the game. It appears, however, today, that the German and Austrian Ambassadors are working hard to bring the Turks to reason.

The probable inspiration of the Turkish restiveness lies in the internal affairs of the country. When Austria coolly took away from the Crescent the Balkan provinces, popular resentment inspired a revolt that almost overthrew the "Young Turks." The Constitutionalists are now straining every nerve to blot out the memory of this national humiliation, and it may well be acting on the belief that a display of rampant jingoism over Crete will accomplish this purpose.

In this way it is easiest to account for the ugly hints of war that have come out of Constantinople. But as one French observer said tonight:

"There can be no war, because the moment that Turkey attacked Greece insurrection would inevitably break out in the rear of its armies. The Albanians would want no better opportunity than this."

VOLUNTEER BALLOON CORPS.

Charles J. Glidden Hopes to Have Massachusetts Organization Recognized by Militia.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—Massachusetts is to have the first "volunteer balloon corps" in the world, according to the announcement made today by Charles J. Glidden, the well-known aëronaut and automobilist, who is now making plans for organizing the Aëronaut Corps this fall.

Recognition from the State militia will be sought. The volunteer corps will consist of men of prominence who are interested in aëronautics and will be made up of two divisions, pilot and meteorological. The pilot division will include the leading balloonists now making ascensions in Massachusetts for pleasure.

Those who have been invited to join the meteorological section are Prof. W. H. Pickering and Prof. A. Lawrence Rotch of Harvard, Prof. David Todd of Amherst and Prof. H. Helm Clayton, formerly of the Blue Hill observatory.

INSINGER IRRIGATION CHAIRMAN

Executive Committee of Congress Elects Officer and Board of Governors Is Chosen.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SPOKANE (Wash.) Aug. 14.—Robert Insinger of Spokane has been elected chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Irrigation Congress.

Arthur Hooker, permanent secretary of the congress, has been made secretary of the committee, composed of one member from each State delegation.

The congress has appointed R. Insinger of Spokane, Dr. W. J. McGee of Washington, D. C., secretary of the Inland Waterways Commission; Fred J. Kiesel of Ogden, Utah, and Harper S. Cunningham of Guthrie, Okla., to act with President Fowler, Secretary Hooker and the chairman of the local board of control of Pueblo, as the board of governors.

BALLOON COMES TO GRIEF.

Airship City of Oakland in Grip of Gale Dragged Across Barbed Wire Fence.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, Aug. 14.—The monster balloon "City of Oakland," with two passengers, Prof. A. Vonder Naillen, Jr., president of the Oakland Aëro Club, and Capt. P. A. Van Tassell, as navigator, started on its initial voyage under the most favorable conditions this morning.

It came to grief, however, in Livermore Valley this afternoon at 2:45 o'clock.

After leaving Oakland the balloon struck a fifty-mile-an-hour gale and the balloon sunk and drifted across barbed-wire fences and through trees until it collapsed.

Capt. Van Tassell, the pilot, was slightly injured. Prof. Vander Naillen, the passenger, escaped without injury.

The balloon was only partially destroyed.

Thousands witnessed the impressive ceremony of christening the airship, which was performed by Miss Jeanne Vonder Naillen, daughter of the president of the club.

FIERCE STORM KILLS THREE.

Chicago Swept by Furious Wind and Rain.

Two Babies Are Drowned in Flooded Basements.

Unidentified Man Believed Hurled from Yacht.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Three lives were lost, many persons were injured, houses were set on fire by lightning and crops were damaged heavily today in the severest storm that has swept Chicago and vicinity in months.

The dead:

MICHAEL FINNEY, Jr., 1 year old; rolled out of bed in the basement of the Finney home into two feet of water that had poured in, and was drowned.

BEATRICE RYCHLOCKI, 3 years old, drowned in two feet of water in the basement of her home.

An unidentified man, 45 years old, taken out of the lake.

Many children throughout the city, especially in the poorer quarters, narrowly escaped death.

Mrs. Rychlocki had missed her daughter and, fearing that the little girl had become lost, notified the West Chicago-avenue police. Having occasion later to go into the basement, which had been flooded, she found the child drowned.

The Finney child was tossing in his sleep during the storm. When Mrs. Finney awoke she missed the baby. Then she discovered water in the rooms. For ten minutes the hysterical mother groped about in the water before she found the lifeless body of the infant.

The drowned man's name is believed to have been B. G. Hill. A letter bearing that name was found in a trouser's pocket, but the address had been effaced.

The victim is believed to have been hurled from a yacht by the storm.

CLOUDBURST.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LACROSSE (Wis.) Aug. 14.—A cloudburst, officially registered as 3.53 inches, swept this district today, washing out railroads, crippling telephone and telegraph service and damaging farms.

Delegates from the Federation of Men's Clubs, the Y.M.C.A., the Laymen's Missionary movement, the Church Laymen's Union and similar organizations all over the country will attend a conference at Silver Bay on Lake George, N. Y., next week to see how overlapping of work in the various cities can be prevented. Among the speakers will be Gov. Hughes, President Capen of the American Board of Missions, General Secretary Carleton of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and Judge Selden P. Spencer of St. Louis.

TO RESTORE MORE LAND.

Large Tract Will Be Subject to Settlement and Entry in Fall.

Another tract of land will soon be restored to entry under conditions favorable to irrigation. June 23, last, the acting Secretary of the Interior vacated a former order of withdrawal under the second form of the Reclamation Act in connection with the Colorado River project, and restored to public domain, where not otherwise withdrawn, reserved or appropriated, about 11,520 acres.

The land will be subject to settlement on and after November 4, and to entry, filing or selection on December 4, at the Land Office in this city.

RESIGNS UNDER FIRE.

Col. McDonell, Commander of Third Regiment, Oregon Militia, Offers to Step Out.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Col. Charles E. McDonell, Third Regiment, O.N.G., has tendered his resignation informally as commander of that regiment. Investigation of his financial accounts has been ordered by W. E. Finzer, adjutant-general.

Gen. Finzer asked Col. McDonell for cash on hand tonight and at the conclusion of their conference declared the colonel had turned over every penny due. The investigation, said Gen. Finzer, would proceed notwithstanding.

The protracted meeting of Col. McDonell's brother officers was held today at which the situation in the regiment was discussed.

Those participating decline to give the result of their deliberations and it is not yet known whether Col. McDonell's resignation will be accepted.

Col. McDonell served with the Second Oregon in the Philippines, as captain of a company.

In the last municipal campaign he was one of several candidates for the Republican nomination for Mayor, being defeated by Joseph Simon.

TROOPS GUARD WORKERS.

Strike-Breakers Working at Canadian Pacific Docks Protected by Military at Fort William.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

FORT WILLIAM (Ont.) Aug. 14.—Fifty strike-breakers, who arrived here from Montreal late last night, started loading boats under military protection, at the Canadian Pacific docks, today.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Rifles are still patrolling the streets.

It is now asserted that thirty strikers were wounded in Wednesday's fight.

The Minister of Labor is expected tomorrow or Monday, when an attempt is to be made to arrive at a basis of settlement.

REMEMBERS CARR.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, Aug. 14.—That Fred Carr and Joe Willetts, the Santa Clara bank robbers, had planned the robbery of the Bank of Elmhurst, near Oakland, is the belief of Cashier A. F. Horstman of that bank.

He positively identified Carr from his picture as published in the papers as the man who stepped up to his window Tuesday morning and asked for a roll of new Lincoln pennies.

Cashier Horstman also states that Willetts stood directly behind Carr in the bank. Not having the pennies, the cashier told the men he could not comply with their request.

The two boys stood at the window for at least two minutes, then exchanged a glance, and without saying a word, left the building. They crossed the street and seated themselves in an automobile which was standing directly opposite the bank and started toward San Leandro.

Sacramento Couple Arrange Separation by Filing Mutual Agreement.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After ten years of married life, Mr. and Mrs. Gustave A. Bahran, well-to-do residents of Sacramento, have decided to divorce themselves in a most respectable way, no scandal, no affinities, no lawsuits. Dear, no!

There was filed in the office of the County Recorder today an agreement entered into between the more or less unhappy two, dividing their real estate into equal portions, and including further stipulations: Mrs. Bahran agrees to go to Fort Wayne, Ind. Each agrees not to sue or otherwise disturb the other, to molest or interfere in any way with the mode of life of the other.

Both are to enjoy freedom, to come and go as they desire, and Bahran promises not to offer violence or force or interfere with his wife.

RENO MAN SUICIDE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Edward Welch, familiarly known as "Cap" Welch, committed suicide by hanging himself in a barn adjoining his residence in Gold Hill early this morning. For the last week he had been ill. He lost an eye in one of the mines several years ago and recently the sight of the other became impaired and he was under the impression that he would be blind. His wife found his body. He had tied a rope to one of the rafters and when he fell the rope broke. In early days Mr. Welch was captain of the famous Sarsfield Guards of that city, instituted by the millionaire magnates, Mackay, Fair, Sharon and their associates. He was a noted character during the old Comstock days.

RENO (Nev.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frank C. Kunhiacke's dead body has been found five miles east of Tonopah. Kunhiacke evidently lost his way, and without water or food was forced to sink to the hot sands. His death came shortly afterward. Kunihacke, who is well known in Goldfield, leaves a daughter in Chicago. He was a photographer.

A few minutes later another automobile, also containing Orpheum actors, arrived on the scene and its occupants assisted in carrying Eleanor Gordon and Humphrey to Dibble's roadhouse, from where they were later removed to the St. Francis Hotel.

Strangely, the Orpheum party in the rescuing automobile had passed through an accident a short while before they found the Humphrey party.

In the machine were Herbert Ashley, Sam Tripp, Julius Tannen and three members of the Gibson Girl Chorus. While on their way to the beach and midway inthe park their machine crashed into a tree and all were thrown out and scratched and bruised.

Tonight Miss Gordon will try to appear in her roles at the theater, but Humphrey will be confined to his room at the St. Francis for some time.

After Bradbury's return to jail had been ordered, Attorney Fairall stated that he had received a message from Gov. Gillett saying he would consider the application for a pardon at Eureka on August 23

WESTERN PACIFIC EXTENDS.

STOCKTON TO SACRAMENTO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] For the first time in the history of Stockton and Sacramento, there is rail competition. The Western Pacific has opened its passenger and express service between these two cities. The freight department has been in operation for several weeks, and considerable business is already being handled.

The Western Pacific is also using the old Alameda and San Joaquin line to Tesla for freight and passenger service. As yet, only one train a day is operated between here and the capital city. At present it is an accommodation service, but as soon as the road between here and Oakland is completed a regular passenger service from the bay through to Sacramento, and possibly farther north, as a portion of the lines about Oroville and Marysville are already in operation, will be installed.

The fine $10,000 depot has just been completed, and will be opened in a few days. It is located less than a block from the Southern Pacific, and will be a handy transfer point.

LOTTERY FOR LAND WINNERS.

Holders of Lucky Numbers Will Choose Locations from Map Posted in Land Office.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SPOKANE, Aug. 14.—Superintendent James W. Witten announced, today, rules for the guidance of winners in reservation land drawings.

Each holder of a number will receive a government map showing class and valuation of lands subject to entry. When selections begin, next April, a copy of this map will be posted in the land office, the tracts being checked off as fast as chosen.

When the applicant's name is called, none but himself and one friend or advisor will be permitted to enter the room or to inspect the official map until his choice is made.

All persons holding notices that numbers have been assigned them may go on the reserve to inspect the land at any time, but they are assured that they may rely with reasonable safety on the report of the government commission as to the nature of the land "and are not necessarily required to examine it themselves."

The drawing of names for the Spokane reserve will begin next Monday morning. Only 250 names will be drawn.

COLLEGE GIRL WEDS JAP.

Oregon Musician Elopes to Idaho With Wealthy Oriental—Alliance Shock to Friends.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VALE (Or.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After being refused a license to wed in Malheur county, Miss Marcia Harole, a twenty-one-year-old college graduate and accomplished musician, today eloped with her Japanese lover, known as "Zoe," to Weiser, Idaho, where they were married. The alliance was a great shock to the friends of Miss Harole, who was highly respected.

Miss Harole's home is in La Crosse, Wis., where she completed her college course three years ago. Since then she has taught in Dakota, Montana and Idaho. Her oriental husband formerly owned a curio store in San Francisco and now conducts a restaurant in Vale. He is reputed to be worth $25,000.

DR. CHAPMAN RESIGNS.

Burdens of Head of Anti-Saloon League Divided—Will Take Charge South of Tehachepi.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rev. Dr. E. S. Chapman, who has been at the head of the California Anti-Saloon League for several years, has resigned his charge owing to the weight of years. Dr. Chapman is now more than 70 years old.

The State has been divided into two districts, North and South. Dr. Chapman will continue to look after the section south of the Tehachepi while the Rev. A. C. Bane of San Francisco, will have supervision over the remainder. Warfare is waging against the saloons so furiously, and in so many cities and counties, that the work is now too great for energetic personal superintendence of a single individual.

California is too long to admit of one man keeping in close touch with the center and extremities all at once. The league is not attempting merely to do one thing at a time, but to start things at every opportunity and to keep them moving after the start is made. The conflicts now on are getting fiercer everywhere, and new conflicts are constantly beginning, so the league is strengthening its defenses and preparing for a desperate struggle between now and the time of election.

"We won out in our Plumas fight," said Irving Bristol, the anti-saloon manager for this section, "and one more dry county has been placed on the map. It was a hard fight but worth the while. We are 'going to stay right here in Sacramento until it is a dry city."

CALL BEAUTY TO AID.

Twelve Pretty Barmaids in Wine Booth to Have W.C.T.U. Rivals at State Fair.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "To the left, free wine, served by twelve pretty girlies in peasant costumes" visitors to the fair grounds may expect to hear the spielers say in clarion tones.

"To the right, ladies and gentlemen," will come the rival cry from the topmost seat of the water wagon, "we have the only simon pure, healthful, sanitary, non-intoxicating drink on the face of the earth. Step up, ladies and gentlemen, and have a drink. Our treat."

Whose move next? The temperance people admit check mate with their water wagon booth. Evidently they have little hope of routing the twelve pretty barmaids. Today came a formal request for space to the State Board of Agriculture from Mrs. Emily Hoppin, editor of the White Ribbon Ensign, the official organ of the W.C.T.U.

"We wish to know if there is any space available next to the wine booth of the California Wine Association," wrote Mrs. Hoppin to J. A. Filcher, secretary of the State fair. It is understood the society will have pretty girls dispense the temperance tipple.

Mr. Filcher replies that he will do his best to accommodate Mrs. Hoppin. Meantime the fair people are wondering which booth will have the prettiest girls. The rivalry in this direction promises to be most keen.

NEW ROAD IN MENDOCINO.

Highway from Sacramento Valley to Coast Points in North Being Completed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WILLOWS, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Before winter sets in there probably will have been completed in Glenn and Mendocino counties the first wagon road over which teams and automobiles can make a safe trip between Sacramento Valley points and the Northern California seacoast. This road will be from Willows to Fruto, Alder Springs, Covelo, and thence by several different routes to the Mendocino coast.

Mendocino will complete her portion of this road in six weeks, and Glenn county will begin construction work on her portion within a few weeks at most, having just made a survey of the route for it. It will be completed before wet weather.

This road will be of particular benefit to automobile tourists and will pass through very picturesque country for many miles.

MARRIED AT RENO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Last evening Miss Paula Wright became the bride of Edwin Clark O'Brien, thus uniting two of the best known young people in Reno. The service was read by Father Thomas Horgan of Sparks and was witnessed by the immediate family and a very few of the most intimate friends in the Wright home. Miss Wright was given away by her eldest brother, Fred Wright. Miss Helen Dimmeck of Berkeley was maid of honor. J. M. Anderson was best man. Mrs. Grace Cathers of San Francisco played Mendelssohn's wedding march. Mrs. O'Brien is the only daughter of Mrs. Genevieve Wright, a prominent musician, and her father was the late George F. Wright, a distinguished naval officer. Gen. John Farnsworth, formerly Congressman from Illinois, was her grandfather.

BODY OF STUDENT FOUND FAR DOWN BEETLING CLIF

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YOSEMITE, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The crushed body of Horace R. Logan, the young Berkeley student who disappeared from Glacier Point last Friday afternoon, was found this afternoon lying in a ledge far down the face of the gigantic granite cliff, which towers 3000 feet into the air from the floor of the valley.

An intrepid band of Camp Curry lads scaled the cliff, this afternoon, and lowered the body by ropes to the foot of the precipice. They were the same party which had climbed the cliff for six days searching for the body, risking their lives to solve the mystery and incidentally to earn the $1000 reward which was offered by the relatives of the lost lad.

Although M. Rosecrans, the uncle the lost lad, abandoned the theory t the boy was killed and departed Wawona today to search for him in logging comps in the Big Tree distr the people at Camp Curry adhered the belief that young Logan had his life by a misstep and a fatal plu headlong over the precipice in darkness of last Friday night. T perseverance was rewarded this af noon, when, after exploring two led 400 and 600 feet below the place wh Logan's hat was discovered last M day afternoon, they descended lower and, on reaching a ledge 900 below, they came upon the mangled mains of the ill-fated youth.

Arrangements have been made hold an inquest tomorrow, and the body out of the valley in time the evening train to Berkeley.

TARIFF DELAY COSTS MILLIONS

The delay in settling the tariff question caused the business and trade of the United States to lose heavily, in fact, it is estimated at many millions of dollars. Delays are always costly, especially in regard to the matter of health. Many people keep "putting off" giving the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels the assistance they absolutely require until they are real sick. A big doctor's bill and untold suffering is the penalty. But don't you be so foolish. If you will only keep a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters handy and take a few doses at the first sign of distress, you can save a lot of unnecessary suffering. It is excellent in cases of Sick Headache, Bloating, Sour Risings, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Costiveness, Cramps, Diarrhoea, Biliousness and Malaria, Fever and Ague. BAD BOOZE CONFISCATED.

SSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ICAGO, Aug. 14.—Many Chicago n-keepers who have been emulat- rugal housewives in seeking bar- prices now have in stock liquors which Pure Food Commissioner Jones and his corps of assistants are confiscating and destroying as rapidly as they can get around. Max Strickler, rectifier and wholesale dealer, accused of being the ring-leader in executing the deception, has been arrested on four charges of counterfeiting labels. Other suspects are sought. A big wagonload of counterfeit liquor was hauled out of Strickler's place of business, and raiders corraled a big lot of labels. In several instances, it is said, saloon-keepers begged permission to dispose of it over their bars. They expressed willingness to tell customers "it was not the real thing," and offered to sell at reduced prices to get some of their money back, but the authorities refused.

NEGRO "PUG" MEETS EDUCATOR.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—Booker T. Washington and Jack Johnson, the intellectual and physical giants of the negro race, met at Quinn Chapel last night, while more than 2000 negroes cheered until they were tired. The educator had come to Chicago to tell men of his race to be clean and strong, talking from the platform, while the pugilist sat in the front row, a living example of the doctrine of health and strength that was preached. When a subscription list was started in the audience to raise a debt of $500 on the chapel, the teacher from Alabama gave $15 and the champion heavyweight $10. The other $10 subscription was that sent by Senator Lorimer.

WONDER BERRY OF THEIR OWN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

GALENA (Ill.) Aug. 14.—Horticulturists of this vicinity are excited about a new berry which, if claims made about it are true, may revolutionize the berry-growing industry of the State. The berry, called the raspberry-strawberry, has been grown at Quincy, it is said, and is a cross between the strawberry and the raspberry. It is said to have originated by accident, bees carrying pollen from one berry's blossom to the other. A Quincy farmer who has grown the berries for three years, says the bush is three feet high. It has a more delicate flavor than either the strawberry or raspberry, and there is a lingering after-flavor. No cultivation, it is said, is needed. In the fall or early spring stalks are mowed close to the ground and new shoots that follow bear the fruit, their growth being so vigorous as to kill off the weeds that spring up.

NO RETALIATION.

FRANCE, HARD HIT BY TARIFF, CANNOT AFFORD REPRISALS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Commercial France describes itself as "preparing for war against the impositions of the American tariff." French admirers of America express deep regret that this difficulty will create an inevitable coolness between the two countries for years to come. France, of all the nations of Europe, is hit hard by the new tariff. Yet as time goes on it becomes certain that the policy of reprisals is not the one this country will adopt.

Such a policy, it is admitted, would be a case, if ever there was one, of cutting off the nose to spite the face. For while United States imports from France are mostly luxuries, France buys from America necessaries, and necessaries which are too precious to the poor classes to permit the imposition of a higher duty.

Thousands of French manufacturers and merchants who demand the application of the French maximum tariff, known as the 'tariff générale," forget that this would require the payment of f.80,000,000 ($16,000,000) yearly to the French customhouse, instead of f.42,000,000 ($8,600,000,) as at present, the difference representing the increase in values of the prices of American commodities which now pay the minimum tariff. This would cause such suffering among the poor that even the Minister of Commerce, in an interview yesterday, hinted that the reprisal policy was impracticable.

London Financier Unravels System of Chicago Attorney to Defraud Him on Large Scale.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After many months of ceaseless activity, Henry Walter, the London financier, has unravelled a system of swindling, whereby, he says, for six years, Lobell & Lobell, spurious attorneys of Chicago, have defrauded him on a large scale.

In 1901, Mr. Walter said today, Joseph H. Lobell, whom he afterward learned was an absconder and bankrupt at Birmingham, Ala., and whose real name was Joseph H. Levi, was introduced to him in London. He appointed Levi as his confidential agent in America and the latter purchased a tract of Wyoming mining property for him. In 1907, Mr. Walter says that he learned Levi, who had meantime been operating under the firm name of Lobell & Lobell, in Chicago, had systematically swindled him out of tens of thousands of dollars yearly. He says he paid Lobell & Lobell vast sums of money for assessment work which cost only a few hundred dollars, and was in other ways defrauded. Levi was arrested in Paris recently, in connection with these frauds, and will be brought here for trial.

Declaration of Open Shop on Portland Waterfront Brings Men to Terms.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After tying up all grain shipping on the Portland waterfront with their demands for a wage scale of [illegible] cents an hour, the grain-handlers' union today made a complete backdown in its demands and agreed to go to work at the old scale of 35 cents an hour and 50 cents for overtime. This action has ended the complete tie-up that threatened to extend indefinitely.

Ever since April the exporters have been endeavoring to induce the grain-handlers to accept the exact terms that will now be effective. They persistently refused to sign a contract, but when the exporters declared an open shop they abjectly withdrew their demands.

WOULD TAX WATER POWER.

Wisconsin Committee Will Meet Tomorrow to Form Plans—Legal Battle Sure to Follow.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The special Water Powers Committee will meet at Oshkosh on Monday. At this meeting steps will be taken to formulate a plan for taxing the developed water powers of the State, and for legislation that will enable the State to maintain control over this natural resource, estimated at millions in value.

Owners of water powers have engaged the ablest counsel in this case to fight any taxing project that may be proposed, and litigation that may extend over years is in prospect. The opponents to taxing water powers assert that the riparian rights along streams are vested in the owners of shore properties, and have not devolved to the State or have ever been owned by the commonwealth. In reply, the committee will go ahead working on two plans.

The first is a law that will assert State ownership as paramount and providing for an annual rental of these powers for a definite term of years at a specified sum per horse-power developed. The second proposition includes State control of water powers, and provides for a license fee for the use of the franchise.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—"There is much more 'pellagra' in the country now than at any time since the new disease was discovered, and from information received, is on the increase, especially in the South."

This statement was made by Surgeon-General Wyman today, when asked concerning the visit of Dr. Lavinder, the pellagra expert, to Peoria, where the disease is believed to have developed in the Illinois asylum.

Dr. Wyman stated that Dr. Lavinder was sent to that institution in response to a request from the authorities there, who have under observation fifty patients believed to be affected with the disease.

Independent Company of Norfolk, Va., Files Suit Against Tobacco Trust for Huge Damage.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NORFOLK (Va.) Aug. 14.—Alleging illegal practices by the tobacco trust, designed, it is charged, to destroy the plaintiff's independent business, the Ware-Kramer Tobacco Company has brought suit in the Federal Circuit Court at Raleigh, N. C., against the American Tobacco Company, claiming $17,000,000 damages.

The suit is said to have the support of the independent tobacco manufacturers. It is charged that the trust has brought undue influence to bear on Congress for the passage of laws hurtful to the independent tobacco manufacturers, and that the national tariff bill favors the trust as against the independents.

RAILWAY RECORD.

TWO CENT FARE BEING TESTED.

Attack on Nebraska Act Is Closely Watched.

Fate of Similar Laws Hinges on Outcome.

Roads Also Attack Maximum Freight Rates.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The result of the attack on the Nebraska 2-cent passenger fare enactment is being watched by neighboring States with almost as much interest as it is at home, as on the outcome of the suit to test the validity of the law will in a measure hinge the fate of similar laws elsewhere. John S. Dawson, attorney for the Kansas State Railway Commission, has been visiting Atty.-Gen. Thompson of Nebraska, and conferring with him concerning the method to be pursued in defending the statute when the cases come up for hearing the last of the present month or the early part of September. State officials of South Dakota and Missouri are also interested in the results of the suit.

Along with the attacks on 2-cent fares will be an attempt on the part of the roads in Nebraska to annul other railroad legislation of the 1907 session, including what is known as the Aldrich maximum freight rate law, providing for reductions in principal commodities carried to and from an agricultural State, and possibly the anti-pass law. The act creating the new Railroad Commission and clothing it with greater powers is also looked upon with disfavor by the railroad companies.

All these enactments have been in effect nearly two years, and that their legality has not heretofore been questioned in a court of law is probably due to the coup of Atty.-Gen. Thompson, who, at the first intimation of resistance, applied to the Supreme Court for an order of injunction to prevent the roads from violating the laws.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The Rock Island system soon will place orders for 5000 forty-ton freight cars and fifty locomotives. Two thousand old freight cars now in use will be sent to the scrap heap when the new cars are delivered.

Recent railroad equipment orders are 5000 steel hopper cars by the Chesapeake & Ohio, in addition to the 1500 ordered this year; seventy passenger cars by the Baltimore & Ohio, twenty-five passenger locomotives by the Great Northern, ninety cars by the Atchison, and fifty cars by the Detroit United Railways.

In delivering control of a majority of the stock, J. P. Morgan & Co. stipulate that the price to be paid therefor shall be determined by arbitration at the end of seven years. In the meantime, the controlling stock will be held by J. P. Morgan, E. H. Harriman and Oscar G. Murray as voting trustees.

President of Louisville and Nashville Declares Stock of His Road Contains No "Water."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) Aug. 14.—In a letter to the Courier Journal today, President Milton H. Smith of the Louisville and Nashville railroad takes exception to the call of a newspaper writer to commercial boards in Southern states to prosecute suits "to prevent stock watering of the capital stock of the Louisville and Nashville."

Agreeing that this call is predicated upon news dispatches that the railroad "has accumulated such a surplus that it proposes to increase the capacity from $60,000,000 to $75,000,000 or $100,000,000" and that the present capital stock is "largely water" Mr. Smith says:

"The results of operations of the Louisville and Nashville railroad are matters of public record, and it is known to all who have investigated that there is no water in its stock. There is not the slightest evidence that any one connected with the management of the company has ever considered an increase in the capital stock in the manner indicated."

Mr. Smith further cites a reported decrease of $3,004,685.08 in gross receipts of the road for the fiscal year ending June, 1909, from those during the fiscal year ending June, 1907.

NEGRO PORTER ROBBED MANY.

Mrs. William R. Harper, Widow of University President, Lost $6000 Worth of Diamonds.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That Mrs. William R. Harper, widow of the late president of the University of Chicago, was robbed of several thousands of dollars worth of diamonds a year ago, was revealed today through the arrest of a negro for the recent theft of a chatelaine bag, valued at $150, and $122 in money from Mrs. Henrietta A. O'Day. Both thefts were committed on trains on the Chicago and Northwestern road, and Leonard Martin, the young negro under arrest, who has been in the employ of the Pullman Company as a train porter, has confessed, according to the police, not only to the thefts mentioned, but to a long series of other thefts.

The Harper diamonds were stolen August 12, 1908,, and in her report to the police Mrs. Harper placed the value of the gems at from $6000 to $10,000.

The negro confesses he disposed of the diamonds as well as other property stolen during two years through confederates, and that his share from the sale of the diamonds was $400.

GIRL STILL MISSING.

Father Gets Mysterious Messages, But Says He Is Ignorant of Her Whereabouts.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAKE GENEVA (Wis.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Marguerite Haley, the 13-year-old pupil of Mrs. George Fellows's summer boarding school at Oak Bank on the west shore of Lake Geneva, is still missing. It is said at Williams' Bay that she took the train at that place for Chicago, but mysterious messages said to be from her, show she made an attempt to get into communication with her father, H. A. Haley, who is today at Norfolk, Neb.

A message was sent to Mr. Haley at Norfolk today asking him why his daughter had left Mrs. Fellows's home. He answered:

"Do not know why my daughter left; don't know her whereabouts."

The girl is doubtless in the vicinity of Williams' Bay, whether in hiding or being held. She is said to have no acquaintances about Lake Geneva and vicinity. She is one of a number of pupils whom Mrs. Fellows has in her school. The girls would have little opportunity for acquaintances outside of school associates.

Southern California Delegation Leaves Salt Lake Praising Hospitality of City.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALT LAKE, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Southern California delegation to the Grand Army encampment left for their homes tonight on the Los Angeles Limited, enthusiastic in their praise of Salt Lake City and the treatment that had been accorded them during their stay here.

The last formal act of the Department of California was to unanimously adopt a set of resolutions in which they thanked Salt Lake City and the State of Utah for their reception and entertainment. There were several who went to Seattle to attend the exposition and to participate in the Grand Army day programme Tuesday and Wednesday.

The reports from the passenger department of the Salt Lake route show that there were more than 500 delegates and visitors from Southern California at the encampment.

Mr. Thomas Ladoux, of St. Albans, Vt., Who is 87 Years Old, Recently had his arm amputated near the shoulder. In the serious illness that followed life was sustained and health regained by the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

As a result of a fall in the summer of 1905 a large tumor grew on my right elbow, and I had to have my arm amputated near the shoulder. On account of my advanced age (87 years) my life was despaired of after the operation, but by using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey 4 times a day, as prescribed, I soon began to gain and was discharged from the hospital as well as ever."

HARBOR DEVELOPMENT.

Local Commission Takes Steps for Lower Freight Rates—Drawbridges and Highways.

At a meeting yesterday of the Los Angeles Harbor Commission, action was taken with a view to the immediate development of the harbor of the consolidated cities of Los Angeles, San Pedro and Wilmington. The commission aims to secure lower freight rates to and from the harbor, to compel the Southern Pacific and the Pacific Electric to build drawbridges across the channel leading to the west basin of the inner harbor, to cause early completion of a highway from Los Angeles to the harbor, and to induce adjoining counties to build good roads connecting with the highway system that is under way in this county.

The commission points to the fact that freight is hauled from San Diego to Los Angeles, a distance of 125 miles, as cheaply as from San Pedro to Los Angeles, only twenty-two miles. The secretary of the Harbor Commission has been directed to arrange with the Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles to call the attention of the State Railroad Commission to this matter.

It will be necessary to enlist the War Department in the movement to compel the railroad companies to build drawbridges across the channel leading to the west basin. The attention of the government officials will be directed at once to this situation.

The commission directed its secretary to take such steps as may be necessary to expedite the completion of the highway from Los Angeles to the harbor, a work that already is progressing under the direction of the Highway Commission.

With reference to the question of good roads throughout Southern California, which will make it possible for all the people of this great section to reach the harbor over smooth highways, over which they may transport freight as well as passengers, the commission directed that its secretary get into communication with the Supervisors and Highway Commissioners of the counties of Southern California, and with them endeavor to formulate a plan by which trunk highways shall be constructed, connecting with the main systems of Los Angeles county.

TALKS MUNICIPAL MUSIC.

L. E. Behymer Tells of How Cities Are Promoting It and What He Would Have Los Angeles Do.

An appropriation of $10,000 for a municipal band is all well enough, according to L. E. Behymer, impresario, who has just returned from a tour of the East. He said this in an address before the City Club yesterday, but he would have Los Angeles practice liberality for higher things in music. He told of the advances that Boston, New York, Chicago and Denver are making, and how the development of the musical interest is enhancing the moral and intellectual value of their people.

In symphony enterprise the others are spending greatly more than Los Angeles, and yet this city maintains a high rank with the orchestra that has survived thirteen years with penurious assistance.

"Music in Los Angeles is a bluff," said Behymer. "Who started to run the bluff I do not know, but the symphony orchestra has made its creditable showing all these years on a shoe string."

In Denver, he said, eighty merchants, when asked to become signers on the Hammerstein grand opera tour fund, agreed to draw their checks for $1000 whenever asked for. This was because Denver's merchants found that it paid, not because they love music more than money. The experience of the city with the Democratic convention he said was another big paying investment. These Denverites, he admits, are shrewd judges of the value of advertising.

He praised the development of music in the schools, as begun and fostered by James A. Foshay, and which, he said, is being carried along without proper appreciation or adequate funds. There are now sixteen children's orchestras in the primary schools, bands and choral societies at the High School and the Polytechnic, and one symphony orchestra at the "Poly" and two at the High School.

The city that bends large effort toward musical education is taking a long step toward reducing the percentage per capita of criminality, he declared. Germany, with its music gardens everywhere and its people educated in music, has the lowest percentage of criminality among the nations, except the Swiss.

He thought only four cities in the country can outstrip Los Angeles in becoming a musical center—Boston, New York, Chicago and Denver. It is time, he declared, for Los Angeles to put money into musical development.

Recently, in Boston, he found the newspapers discussing Los Angeles for two things—the aqueduct and the symphony orchestra. And he alluded to the generosity for the one and the parsimony for the other.

HONOR DEPARTING ACTOR.

Member of Stock Company, Long in Service Here, Receives Gift from Associates.

Members of the Burbank stock company waylaid William Desmond as he was on his way to his dressing-room following the fall of the curtain upon the final act of "The Honor of the Family" last night and presented him with a handsome gold watch. The gift, which is appropriately inscribed, is a souvenir of the regard in which the Burbank ex-leading man is held by his stage associates.

The presentation speech was made by H. S. Duffield who, with Mr. Desmond, has been a member of the present Burbank company since its organization.

Mr. Desmond last night completed his three hundred and first week on the Los Angeles stage. During more than five years of that time he was leading man of the Burbank company.

The actor at last night's performance was compelled to make a speech after the third act of the play and after the close was called before the curtain repeatedly, the orchestra playing "Auld Lang Syne."

At noon today Mr. Desmond and his wife will leave for New Orleans, where he is to be leading man of the Greenwald stock company.

TUNNEL PROJECT LAUNCHED.

Hole Wanted from First and Hill Streets to Diamond and Figueroa. Property Owners Meet.

The First-street Tunnel Project Association was safely launched last night at a meeting at No. 108 South Beaudry street by a few interested and the territory lying between West First street and Sunset boulevard.

The meeting was organized by electing M. J. Wheeler as chairman and Mrs. Croker, secretary. No definite plan was discussed, but the consensus of all the speeches was that a tunnel should be built, either on First street, commencing at First and Broadway and ending at First and Figueroa, or commencing near First and Broadway, or at Hill, near First, and ending at Diamond and Figueroa.

Another proposition, and the one which it was thought would serve as a compromise for both the First-street tunnel project and the Second-street tunnel, was that of starting a tunnel at First and Broadway, and running through with a Y, one opening being at Second and Figueroa, and the other opening at Diamond.

Another meeting will be called on Friday evening, August 27, and in the meantime John Dillon and R. W. Young, who were appointed as a committee, will circulate a petition among the property owners in the district bounded by Broadway, Second and Burlington streets and Sunset boulevard, asking the Council to construct a tunnel, beginning near the corner of First and Hill street and ending at Diamond and Figueroa streets, and to assist the district for the cost of it.

The check, signed by the fictitious name of "Frank M. Chester," was drawn on the All Night and Day Bank and was presented to the bank a few minutes after it had PORTLAND, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In order to prevent two of his fast players from being drafted east, Judge W. W. McCredie has just transferred Shortstop Cooney and Pitcher Chinault from the Portland Northwestern club to the Portland Coast League club.

McCredie stole a march on the eastern managers who wanted these men, for the drafting price in the class B league is only $500, while now the players will be held at a stiff price. Cooney and Chinault will be loaned to the Northwestern squad the remainder of the season.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

FRESNO, Aug. 14.—The league leaders pounded Tracy Hoag's delivery for eighteen hits today. Two of these were doubles by Kuhn and Schimpff, and one a home run by Householder.

COASTERS WIN AGAIN.

Defeat Two Boston Men at Tennis Through Overhand Smashes and Extra Good Serving.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In an aggressive, free-hitting match, Maurice E. McLoughlin and George E. Janes, Pacific Coast champions and challengers for the national tennis doubles championship, today defeated two local players, H. I. Foster and H. C. Johnson, on the courts of the Longwood Cricket Club. Three sets were played and the westerners captured all, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5.

The tennis played by the visitors was a far better game than they put up against Beals C. Wright and Johnson, Thursday, and this was largely because the game put up by their opponents was better adapted to the hard hitting play of the Californians. Had Foster and his partner varied their stroke more, so that the visitors would not have known just what was coming next, the home players would have done vastly better.

As it was, the two players from the West worked their overhead smashes wonderfully well and they smashed nearly everything that met their racquets, no matter whether they were in the back court or near the net. Their service, too, was very effective, and it was not until the tenth game was played in the third set that Foster and Johnson were able to break through the service of their opponents. In that game James lost the game on his service, principally on account of his carelessness, and the home players made it five games all, only to lose the next two.

Johnson's Backer Now Declares to a Tired World That He Will Wager Large Sum.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George Little, manager and financial backer of Jack Johnson, will bet $20,000 more on his man against Jim Jeffries under novel conditions.

Little will post a forfeit and sign an agreement now or when Jeff returns to America, if necessary, under the terms of which he will agree to bet Jeff $20,000 on the day of the contest at prevailing odds at that time, any good betting man or sport follower of note to determine the price at that time.

The announcement comes in response to news cabled here from Jeff that he will insist upon having a $10,000 side bet or there will be no fight.

In the preliminary agreement Little and Johnson agreed to bet $5000 in the main stake of the proposed battle, explaining to Berger at the time that it would be the height of folly for them to wager more than this at even money when it seemed a certainty that Jeff would go into the ring a strong favorite at perhaps as high as 2 to 1.

WASHINGTON.

WILEY WARNS WINE MAKERS.

Will Not Permit Adulteration of Product.

Manufacturers Must Abandon Practice.

Declares "Rhine" Wines Must Come from Germany.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, before leaving for the food convention at Denver, announced that he would not stand for the adulteration of wines made from grapes, and served notice that offenders would be prosecuted.

His declaration is due to the alleged practice of American wine manufacturers of adding water and sugar to wine made from grapes, about three parts to one. Wiley holds that this is adulteration and should be stopped.

Another practice to which Wiley objects is the making of a second grade of wine from the seeds and skins of grapes. These are used, he says, merely for flavoring purposes, the bulk of the wine as it reaches the consumer being made of water and sugar.

The department has already ruled that Rhine wine must be made in Germany to be labeled as such.

It is understood the producers will join issue with Wiley, and a contest is in prospect.

PLAN HERCULEAN SHIPS.

Congress May Be Asked to Provide 30,000-Ton Monster With Fourteen-inch Guns.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Congress may be asked next winter to provide for 30,000-ton battleships each with twelve fourteen-inch guns and each costing $12,000,000. It is stated that such a programme has been pretty carefully studied out. After considerable preliminary work, the first fourteen-inch gun has been constructed at the Midvale works and is shortly to be tested at the naval proving grounds at Indian Head. If it is deemed desirable to have guns of fourteen-inch caliber, it will immediately become a question whether there shall be ten or twelve of such guns on each battleship.

The proposition of two years ago, during the Newport conference, was to have ten fourteen-inch guns instead of twelve twelve-inch guns, the former caliber to have a relatively diminished velocity. It was finally decided, however, that when the fourteen-inch gun was developed it should be of a hitting power commensurate with the increase of caliber as compared with the twelve-inch gun. There is an inclination, also, to adhere to twelve guns in the battleship battery and it is possible that with the adoption of the fourteen-inch gun, there will be twelve instead of ten of those rifles, in which event the next battleships to be authorized will be of at least 30,000 tons displacement, estimated to cost approximately $12,000,000 each.

It is likely such a battleship will have the same speed and endurance as the 26,000-ton battleships now building. Much may depend in the determination of this question upon the plans adopted by European navies.

MOONSHINERS BUSY.

Prohibition Wave in South Keeps Revenue Agents on Jump Raiding Illicit Stills.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The internal revenue officials of the Treasury Department are worrying over the fact that the prohibition wave has given an impetus to "wildcat" or "moonshine" liquor. Throughout the mountain States of the South, where "wildcat" distilling is a heritage of generations in the mountain districts, there has been a marked increase noticeable in the manufacture of illicit whisky. The records show that the revenue agents in the South are mostly engaged in continuous raids, first in one section and then another, a record which has not been equaled in recent years.

Georgia furnishes one of the most striking examples of this increase. Although "moonshining" prospers most in the early fall, when grains and fruits are ripe, J. H. Surber, the internal revenue agent stationed at Atlanta, with twelve men under him, has been making almost daily raids for several weeks.

FATAL QUARREL OVER MONEY.

Frenchman Kills Mexican at Fresno; Asserts That He Shot in Self-Defense.

FRESNO, Aug. 14.—Leopoldo Armenta, a Mexican, was shot and instantly killed by Louis Vitret, a Frenchman, about two and a half miles west of Laton, today. The men disputed over some money which Vitret owed Armenta. Immediately after the shooting, Vitret walked into Laton and surrendered to Justice of the Police Smith. He asserts he shot in self-defense.

According to Vitret's story, he approached Armenta and offered to pay him a portion of the money. Armenta refused to accept it, however, demanding all of it. A dispute followed, during which Armenta suddenly seized a club and struck at Vitrat. Vitret warded off the blow and then pulled a revolver and shot.

SATURDAY, as usual, was the busiest day of the week in the scholarship contest. It was the final learance day for coupon votes, and ushels of them poured into The Times ffice. It was impossible to get all the oupons counted in time to include l the points in today's score list. hose left over when the count for he day was closed will be included in he next score list published.

Miss Mary Pearl Pottol of Monrovia ade the greatest gain of the day, ,477 points, and decreased the disnce between herself and her nearest igher-up rival, Alice Capron, very aterially, as Miss Capron's gain for he day was only 3153. Miss Capron emains in third and Miss Pottol in ourth place, the same positions they nished in last year.

MISS TIDBALL'S JUMP.

Miss Edith Tidball of Santa Ana as the second highest scorer of the ay, having registered a gain of 26,507, nd advanced from fourteenth to ighth place, the point she started rom at the beginning of the week. hus, it appears she is not losing any round in the race.

MISS SARGENT'S LUCK.

Miss Hattie Sargent of Garden rove paid her first visit to contest adquarters, and turned in her largest y's vote, 10,368 points, which took r up three numbers, to twenty-sixth ace.

Mrs. W. L. Hale of Fullerton pays ss Sargent the following compliment; believe she is a deserving little rl, and I would like to see her gain scholarship, as she is an orphan beg cared for by her grand-parents, d she will sooner or later be comlled to earn her own livelihood. herman Hall, her only rival for special prize, tried hard to get over 15,000 mark, but fell short of it by more than 5000 points. His gain yesterday was only 1626. A number of persons he counted on for yearly subscriptions disappointed him. Sherman is a very fine lad, the only son of a widow, and if he perseveres the remaining three weeks he may at least win a scholarship, even if he missed getting the $25 that goes to little Miss Henderson.

Hattie Sargent,

Garden Grove orphan, who takes higher rank in the contest.

Edwina Lloyd made a gain of 6690 and remains in fifteenth place.

Florence Pedley made a gain of 6542 and fell from eighth to tenth place.

SPECIAL WEEKLY PRIZES.

Constance Hood has won the $5 special prize in the first division for largest gain during the week, and Ernest Furrer has the $5 cinched for largest gain in the third division. In the second division Florence Pedley, Florence Lambert and Edwina Lloyd are so closely bunched that the uncounted coupons which arrived yesterday may throw the balance in favor of one or the other. The winner of the $5 prize in this division will therefore not be announced until the count of all the coupons received yesterday is completed.

FROM A DOCTOR OF LAWS.

Miss Dorothy Scherer has received a package of votes from George A. MacDonald, LL.D., Everett, Mass., who says: "Here are a few votes for you. Will send you more as I receive them. I always have taken an active interest in contests, and have been instrumental in helping many winners here in the East. I anticipate coming to Los Angeles this fall, at which time I hope to hear that you have been successful in your crusade."

Marion Henderson,

little San Pedro "deputy mother," who has won special $25 prize.

W. W. Robinson of No. 1230 Tennessee street sends coupons for Miss Dorothy Scherer, "in whom," he says, "I am very much interested as to the contest, and would be delighted in seeing her win first honors, as she is a girl of my neighborhood, and seems to be worthy of all interest that could be granted to her success."

FOR MOTHERLESS GIRL.

"A Mother" of No. 140 West Thirty-seventh Place sends fifty-four points for Lela Spencer, with the remark: "I wish I had more to send that motherless girl that is keeping up a home for her father and striving to get an education. I am a stranger to all the contestants, but have taken great interest in watching and reading about the different ones each day. What's the matter with Hollywood? The people that live in that beautiful place would better get a hustle on and not let their girl fall below a scholarship."

Ruth Galloway of Burbank sends eighty-one points for Miss Spencer, and says: "Although I am not acquainted with her, I have taken much interest in her contest work."

Mrs. T. H. Edmiston of Prescott, Ariz., sends forty-three points for Miss Spencer, and says: "My mother's family name was Spencer, and I hope one of that name will hustle and come out a winner."

Hazel Cook, 8 years old, of La Habra has saved eighty-one points for Lela Spencer.

Mrs. Alice Fordyce of Nordhoff sends coupons for David and says: "Later we will renew our subscription to The Daily Times to his credit. Last year we gave our subscription to Margaret Chung."

Among others who have sent in votes for David in the last few days are the following: Mrs. L. J. Merritt, Pasadena; Jennie Murdock, city; Louise A. Beecher, city; Mrs. Willard B. Parker, No. 149 West Fortieth Place.

SOLDIER AND SAILOR, TOO.

Miss Maggie Ballestro of No. 125 North Elden avenue is one of Miss Wagner's staunch friends and helpers.

FOR JOHN KEBLE THURSBY.

"A Church Woman" sends eighty-four points in favor of Master Thursby. Other contributors in his behalf include the following: L. M. Webster, Sierra Madre; Miss Florence A. Marriott, No. 223 South Beaudry avenue.

FOR FLORENCE LAMBERT.

Mrs. G. W. Lee of Covina, who has been doing some effective work for Florence Lambert, writes: "Yesterday I sent a subscription, with coupons, in aid of Florence Lambert. Today I take pleasure in sending a larger one. The Curtises who joined with us before in sending coupons, had determined not to give any subscription, but the winning ways of Dorothy Scherer won four months for her. Now having taken an interest in Miss Lambert, they cheerfully give her six months."

Mrs. M. B. Hutchinson of Whittier writes: "A stranger to all, yet taking an interest in each contestant, or any young person who is eager to get an education, I find it hard to decide which one to help among so many deserving candidates, but have concluded that one can make no mistake in helping the brave little lame girl, Florence Lambert. May she win. My husband intends helping her with a subscription later."

Mrs. A. E. Rush of Corona writes: "Here are ninety-six coupons in favor of Florence Lambert to show how much I admire one who, working under such a disadvantage, is striving so earnestly for a scholarship. Trusting she may be one of the winners, I am her well-wisher."

Kathleen Loly writes: "Enclosed find sixty-three coupons and a credit slip for sixty points, which I desire to be credited to Florence Lambert. Although I do not know her I have taken a deep interest in her efforts to gain an education, and I sincerely think that any girl who has as much ambition as she has when she is so handicapped by her injured leg, deserves all the help and encouragement she can get."

FOR MURREY ROYAR.

Mrs. Sarah A. King of No. 1249 South Grand avenue, in sending coupons to Murrey Royar, says: "I have saved these few votes to help you to win the scholarship, which I hope you win. But if you don't, keep on trying for perseverance is the highway to success. I have never seen you, but know you are a worthy boy. I shall watch with interest your success."

Anabel Richards writing from Pasadena, just prior to starting for her home in the East, wrote Murrey Royar, in part as follows: "I received your nice note of recent date, with pleasure acknowledging coupons. I am glad to see you climbing up and hope the end may find you at the top. With my best wishes for your future welfare and education and for your prosperity as you grow older, I remain sincerely your new friend."

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hartley of No. 410 West Santa Barbara avenue, write to Master Royar: "Having become interested in your effort last year, we have been glad to collect the enclosed coupons for you this year."

A Redlands friend writes to Master Royar: "As you are the Redlands contestant and I am a Redlands resident and reader of The Times, I wish you success in winning your scholarship."

Mrs. W. R. Jones sends fifty points for the "brave, ambitious boy, Murrey Royar."

Mrs. V. E. Holehan of Monrovia sends twenty-five points and the promise of a year's subscription later, for Murrey Royar.

FOR CHARLES YGLESIAS.

"A True Friend, age 10 years," writes from Santa Barbara: "Will you be so kind as to credit to Charles H. Yglesias for these points. It seems a very small amount, but as I wish to see Charles go upward rather than down, I will send even the smallest amount as long as it will help the least bit. I am trying as hard to get points for Charles as I would for myself. I am very interested in the scholarship contest and read it every day. And as Charles is a very old friend of mine, and as I was in the scholarship contest myself once, I know how fine it feels to get points. I hope Charles will go up steadily. Yours truly, A good friend to all children that are trying for scholarships. Many of my friends are saving points for Charles, and all promised to send them in before the first of the week."

"An Arizona Girl" writes: "Please credit five points to Charles Yglesias. I have never seen him, but I like his pictures. I am acquainted with Mr. Hughes, and would have given him all our votes, except that he is much older than C. Y., and therefore more capable of helping himself."

Among others who have sent points for Master Yglesias are the following: Ruth Hambly, Highland; George Riccard, No. 707 Temple street; Mrs. George McNeil, Buena Park; Marie Vega, Lancaster; Mrs. T. A. Bringham, Ocean Park; E. H. Holdredge, Inglewood.

Lillian is one of eight children in one of the most perfect families it has ever been my lot to know. The love and courtesy taught in the home is shown in the lives of these boys and girls. I hope to see Lillian gain the one scholarship she is working hard to win."

Among others who have sent in points for Miss Waite are the following: Mrs. J. N. Lovering, Burbank; Carol M. Green, Avalon; Miss Clara Ferlin, No. 3921 Central avenue; Mildred Fox; Richard Sedwell, a former contestant from San Fernando, who, although he now lives in Los Angeles, does not forget the home of his boyhood and the friends who helped him win his scholarship.

Some of the coupons, Miss Waite has received came from New York, some from the Colorado Delta, and many from people in the East to whom she sent the Elks' week Times. She has received a great many kind and encouraging letters from friends near and afar.

CLOSE TO NATURE.

The Los Angeles Military Academy's Unexcelled Advantages for Boys.

The Los Angeles Military Academy is the pioneer school of its class in Southern California and is well known for its high standard of scholarship, military training, physical development and moral and social advantages. The school was organized in 1895 and during the first thirteen years of its work was located on Commonwealth avenue, on the west side of the city.

After much careful search and investigation, the present location was secured, and during the summer of 1908 the academy removed to Los Angeles Military Academy tract, on Huntington Drive, its new home, in the "hill country," east of Eastlake Park and just beyond the city limits. The boulevard, Huntington Drive, runs along the northern side of the tract, and all cars for Alhambra, Monrovia, San Gabriel, Sierra Madre, Oak Knoll and Pasadena (via Short Line) pass the school, making the new location more accessible and more quickly reached from the business center of the city, as well as from outlying towns and cities, than the old. Moreover, the new home is ideal in respect to environment, being practically rural, and so removed from immediate reach of the many too well-known distracting influences incident to a populous city district.

The campus consists of twenty-three acres, irregular in topography as if Nature had anticipated the purpose of its formation, in generations to come—the level section for athletic and general recreation; the undulating or rolling section for buildings, and the elevated section to form a most picturesque background. Here are all the natural conditions for making the most attractive campus and athletic field in Southern California. This location is protected from the rough winds that sometimes blow from sea or desert, and is singularly free from fogs and extremes of heat or cold. Here one may live the genuine outdoor life almost every day in the year.

The proximity to Los Angeles and Pasadena make an incomparable spot. With all the charm of suburban country living it combines the conveniences afforded a city resident, having easy access to all the literary, musical and other advantages of a city like Los Angeles, and at the same time at its very doors are spots of the most romantic nature. In almost any direction may be reached points of historic interest and surpassing beauty. The mountains, the cañons, San Gabriel Mission, the old lake and mill built by the mission fathers, with the added modern attractions of today, afford many walks and rides of interest and instruction. Here the boy may live close to Nature's heart and enjoy to the utmost an open-air life. Many have already begun to feel that their children would be better if their education were conducted more in the open. This is no new thought. Plato, Socrates and Diogenes in the somewhat similar climate of Greece used to conduct their schools out of doors.

In planning the new buildings it was decided to follow the bungalow style of architecture, combining comfort with simplicity. Four buildings are already completed and two more are to be constructed during the present year. Although a military school for boys and young men, the academy ideal is to surround the boy with an air of beauty, refinement and luxury and to avoid the ugly, coarse and vulgar in appearance, in speech and conduct.

The course of study is designed especially to prepare boys for entrance into colleges and technical schools of the highest grade and arranged in accordance with the requirements of these institutions. It is believed that these courses also furnish the best possible training for those preparing for business or who for other reasons do not intend to take a college course. Special business courses have been arranged for those who wish to pursue a strictly business college course, and diplomas of graduation are issued to those completing the same in a satisfactory manner. Special attention is paid to music, gymnastics, athletics, social etiquette and customs.

Boys may be received at any time when there is a vacancy, and they remain at school during full twelve months if so desired. The summer vacation months are spent in camp at Newport Beach, where the management has secured property and arranged for a permanent location.

At the present writing the academy boys are having one of the most successful of summer camps, the day being divided between study, music and recreation. Rowing, swimming, bathing, polo, shooting, fishing, hunting and excursions to points of interest are favorite forms of recreation.

For a boy who is desirous of making the best possible use of his time in school, who has grown in developing a strong, graceful body, military bearing, correct habits, and those qualities which make for a successful manner, the advantages of Los Angeles Military Academy are unexcelled.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

MRS. EARL LOSES GEMS.

Arrives at Avalon Minus Thirty Thousand Dollars' Worth of Jewelry.

AVALON, Aug. 14.—A pearl necklace and other jewels, valued at $30,000, were lost by Mrs. Edwin T. Earl of Los Angeles Thursday, the day of her arrival here.

When she left her home to go to the railway station, Thursday morning, she carried the precious trinkets in a safety bag pinned underneath her dress skirt. She did not miss them until she reached the Hotel Metropole at 12:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl came over on the steamer Cabrillo. On the voyage Mrs. Earl was sick and retired to a berth. Upon her arrival at the hotel here, she found the safety bag open and the valuables gone.

The necklace was made of selected pearls, purchased by Mr. Earl in Europe and in this country at various times and presented to his wife on the birth of their first child.

A Pinkerton detective is working on the case, but not the slightest clew has been found.

PASADENA.

AUTO WRECKED, THREE HURT.

Hunters Come to Grief Near Lamanda Park.

Driver Is Pinioned Between Wheel and Seat.

Girl Shoots a Large Buck With Revolver.

Office of The Times, No. 7 S. Raymond Av.

PASADENA, Aug. 15.—A hunting expedition came to grief on East Colorado street, near Lamanda Park, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The automobile, containing five men, struck a muddy stretch in the road, skidded, both right wheels gave way, the spokes flying from the hubs, and the machine turned over on its side.

G. O. Eichelberger, who lives at No. 420 Eddy street, San Francisco, owner and driver of the machine, sustained a severe sprain of the back and lacerations about the head.

When the machine turned over he was pinioned between the steering wheel and the seat, and could not extricate himself. A man, supposed to be William Harrison, who was his companion on the front seat, was hurled out and then under the forward side of the automobile, which held him across the hips.

In the rear seat were three men, William A. Chipps, of the Puente Oil Company, and a man named Jones were thrown clear of the machine and were practically uninjured. The third man, named Rose, who, it is understood, works for the Fairbanks-Morse Company in Los Angeles, was struck on the head by the framework of the machine, and also had one rib fractured.

The men were bound for Beaumont on a hunting expedition, and the car was heavily loaded with guns and ammunition. A case of beer on ice also added to the overloaded condition of the car.

The Fairbanks-Morse man was particularly concerned lest the news of the accident reach the paper. He induced the others to decline to give information of the accident or the names of those injured, to the Times correspondent. Two of the men, the Fairbanks-Morse employé and the owner of the car, although suffering severely from their injuries, took a carriage and drove to the Short Line car, which they boarded for Los Angeles. The other injured man was taken to Los Angeles in an ambulance.

GIRL SHOOTS BUCK.

One of the largest bucks of the season was brought to earth by a bullet from a revolver in the hands of Miss Gretna Kessler of Los Angeles, one mile from Switzer's Camp, yesterday.

Misses Gretna and Mabel Kessler, accompanied by Eugene Cordoroy of Los Angeles, left the camp early yesterday morning to spend the day in the mountain bypaths. When one mile away they spied a large buck feeding near the crest of a side ridge of the cañon. Cordoroy stationed the girls at the foot of the hill and by making a detour succeeded in getting within fair range of the game. He wounded the animal in the flank. It rushed blindly down the hill directly toward the young women and apparently did not see them until almost upon them, when Miss Mabel Kessler screamed with fear. Miss Gretna had drawn a 38-caliber revolver and as the big antlers loomed in front of her from the underbrush she fired.

The buck fell at her feet, one prong of the set almost touching her. The bullet from her revolver had crashed through a star on its forehead, killing it instantly. Cordoroy returned to camp for a pack animal and the carcass when placed on the scales tipped the beam at 162 pounds. The head is said to be a beautiful specimen and is to be mounted for the plucky young woman. She says that it was the most exciting moment in her life when the big fellow came charging upon them.

BAD CHECKS CASHED.

Two checks, cashed here at merchandise stores a week ago, drawn on the Bank of Glendora and signed Charles Silent, were returned here yesterday, declared forgeries by former Judge Charles Silent, prominently known in Los Angeles.

The authorities have a fair description of the man who cashed them and expect to capture him, even though he has practically a week's start. The man was dressed in the garb of a laborer and appeared to be in a hurry to get home. It is believed that his attire was simply a disguise and that after cashing the checks, he at once effected a change of clothing and left the city, probably for Northern California, where he may make similar attempts.

C. E. Chamberlain of the Union Feed Company and Manager H. B. Quast of the Great American Importing Tea Company are the business men who cashed the worthless paper. In each case the checks were made out to Thomas Ward and the man so indorsed them. One was for $16.25 and the other called for $12. Chamberlain mistook the man for some one he had known in Glendora and the change for 80 cents purchase of chicken feed was given without question.

At the tea company the forger encountered difficulties, but maintained that his wife bought goods there regularly and that he was sure that he could get the check cashed there and as it was Saturday night he needed the money. Mrs. Quast of this store flatly refused to honor the paper and openly asserted that she thought it was fraudulent. Finally suspicion was allayed and the change was given for a purchase amounting to ——. This was the check for $12.

The man is described as dark. He wore a gray and brown suit, has small blue eyes and is about 5 feet 8 inches tall.

WILL INVESTIGATE DEATH.

An inquest will be held, tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, over the body of J. W. Claudin, who met instant death Friday from an uninsulated primary wire of the Edison Company, carrying 2200 volts.

As the widow is in a serious condition from the terrible shock of the sudden death of her husband, and insisted upon the body being removed to her little home at No. 467 Cypress avenue, the inquest will be held there. A few hours after the accident, Mrs. Claudin demanded that she be taken to the undertaking establishment, where the body was removed immediately after the accident. She was almost crazed by grief, but could not be dissuaded from the trying ordeal. Yesterday morning she again insisted upon going there to choose a casket. Before leaving, she fainted and later fainted again upon going to the office of Constable W. C. Austin. She went there, accompanied by her brother, W. A. Harrington, and her husband's brother, to learn when the inquest could be held. She was taken home in an automobile. As she has been sick for more than a month, her relatives fear she will suffer a relapse. To alleviate her great distress, County Coroner Hartwell finally allowed the body to be removed to the residence.

Officials of the municipal lighting plant assert that the Edison Company violated the law by having a high-power primary line, uninsulated, strung along the street. They also say that the Edison poles lean at bad angles along Elizabeth street, instead of being straight. The Edison people explain that the line was put in there about ten years ago, before later regulations went into effect and that arrangements had already been made for bringing the construction up to date. They were simply waiting for the city to get its wires in.

The result of the controversy will be a sweeping investigation by the city and the probable reframing of an ordinance relative to power lines. Manager Koiner favors compelling the carrying of all high-power wires at least sixty feet above ground, at least three braid insulative on all high-power primaries and possibly the banishment of 15,000 volt supply wires from the city.

It is understood that the city will ask for an injunction to prohibit the Pacific Electric Railway Company from stringing a high-voltage wire through the city to Altadena.

Manager Koiner states further that the employés of the municipal plant are under explicit instructions to use rubber gloves when handling dangerous wires. He says he is at a loss to understand how Claudin came to be working on the primary without gloves. Claudin had been employed by the Sunset and Home Telephone Companies off and on for many months and had worked extra for the city a number of times and was said to be a competent man. The Edison people flatly refute the statement that the wire from which Claudin met his death was grounded, or that it was carrying more than 2200 volts.

WHITTIER WELL GUSHES.

Capped Late in Afternoon and Connected With Tank After Lot of Oil Escapes.

WHITTIER, Aug. 14.—Well number 52 of the Central Oil Company started flowing this morning. At intervals during the day it gushed 50 to 100 feet above the derrick. The oil is of a very light quality, running from thirty to thirty-two gravity. The cañon has been dammed and pumps put in to save some of the oil, but a lot of it got away. It is very gassy and can be heard roaring for some distance before a flow begins. The gas can be detected in the atmosphere half a mile away.

No fires existed in the Central camp today. The forgers were cold and the inhabitants ate cold meals. Late this afternoon the well was capped and connected with a tank and it is supposed the sensational features are over. It is impossible at this time to state how large a producer this well will be, but after a few days an intelligent estimate can be made.

FROM ACROSS BORDER.

CANADIANS TAKE THE SEASHORE.

SHOW LOYALTY IN LONG BEACH TO THE FLAG.

Colors of Two Countries Mingle in the Decorations—Day Largely Devoted to Sports in Which Lacrosse Figures Prominently—Other Athletic Contests Amuse Visitors.

LONG BEACH, Aug. 14.—Loyalty to the American flag and to the country over which it waves, was the sentiment of the twenty-five hundred members of the Canadian Club of Los Angeles, which held its annual picnic here today. This feeling was expressed in a speech made by Col. Merrick of Los Angeles, who lived ten years in Canada. Of course, however, love for the mother country is not forgotten and therefore the British flags also occupied a prominent place in the decorations, as did the emblem of the maple leaves. Buttons were in demand and there was a clamor for small flags of both nations.

The president, Dr. Philips, was active in his endeavors to see that every one had an enjoyable day and was assisted by Secretary Ben Black and the members of the Executive Committee.

Basket dinners were served on the auditorium picnic deck at noon and during the period of feasting the municipal band gave a concert by courtesy of the city, which also furnished gallons of coffee.

After dinner registration books were opened and signed by all in attendance. The afternoon was spent in a series of sports on the beach.

The event of the afternoon was the lacrosse game on the high school grounds at 4 o'clock between the Shamrocks and Los Angeles teams. It was won by the Shamrocks by a score of 5 to 2. The bright particular star of the game was McAteer of the Shamrocks, who made four of the five goals. After the game there was a tug of war between the two teams, also won by the Shamrocks.

The sports were continued tonight with swimming races in the plunge which lasted until a late hour. There was also dancing at the Majestic Pavilion, with prize dancing. Most of the visitors returned late tonight, but many will remain over until tomorrow.

ENDEAVORERS MEET.

The Christian Endeavorers held forth at the Southern California Christian Assembly today. They were welcomed this morning by Miss Linda Robinson and Harry McLean, presidents of the local and intermediate society. President Alice Strang announced her committees, the chairmen of which are: Lookout, Chas. A. Perrin, Pomona; prayer meeting, Katherine Errett, Los Angeles; missionary, Eva Utter, Glendale; social, J. R. Bruning, Los Angeles; quiet hour, Minnie Brown, Los Angeles; tenth legion, Nola Cole, Covina; intermediate, Elmer L. Shirrell, Santa Barbara; junior, Mrs. A. B. Carpenter, Douglas, Ariz. Dr. H. H. Guy of Berkeley spoke on the "Endeavorer of the World" and Miss Mabel Whitice of Los Angeles rendered a solo.

New officers for the Southern California society were elected thus: President, Walter A. Wood, Los Angeles; vice-president, Miss Ida Gunder, Long Beach; corresponding secretary, Emma Goedel, Artesia; recording secretary, Jessie Still, El Monte; treasurer, Leo. F. Eddy, Pasadena.

Following the election addresses were delivered by Dr. Robert Shepard of Pomona and Miss Jeffrey Garriott of Altadena. At the auditorium tonight the new officers were installed and Dr. Tyler delivered a sermon on "Our Pledge, a Study."

SPEAKS FOR DOCK COMPANY.

At a meeting of the Campaign Committee last night President C. J. Curtis of the Los Angeles Dock and Terminal Company made the statement that the company owns a clear title to 800 acres on the inner harbor which cost the company $459,000. Of this amount the company now only owes $35,000 and has more than that coming on payments due. More than $1,000,000 has been spent in developing the harbor and as much more will be expended to complete it. Money was raised by assessment as it was needed and not one dollar of stock has ever been sold for delinquency.

The chance was given Long Beach to acquire water frontage for two reasons, he explained, one because of the loyalty of the stockholders to the city and the other because it would help sell sites to factory concerns which could not afford to buy frontage, but which are assured of cheap dockage on municipal wharves. The committee organized last night and ordered a canvass of the city to see what opposition would be encountered.

DISPEL SUIT MYSTERY.

Just after daylight this morning the watchman of the bath-house discovered a suit of clothing at the foot of American avenue with indications that some one had disrobed and gone into the ocean. The police investigated the supposed drowning and discovered that the clothes belonged to an employé of a local restaurant, who had gone bathing but coming out, lost his bearings in the fog, and, supposing a tramp had stolen his clothing, went to his room and secured another suit.

WANT TO JOIN.

At a meeting of the Board of Education this afternoon a petition was received from the residents of the Cerritos district asking that they be made a part of the Long Beach school district. They have heretofore been connected with the Wilmington district, but since that was absorbed by Los Angeles they were advised to ask union with Long Beach because of it being contiguous territory. The matter was taken under advisement.

SOLDIERS' HOME.

RAPID RISE OF DRUMMER BOY.

STORY THAT BEGINS AND ENDS WITH A SHEEPSKIN.

While Beating One, as Member of Band, Studies Hard and Earns Another, Giving Him Title of Civil Engineer — Ninety-nine-Year-Old Veteran Acts as Guide.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Aug. 14.—From drummer boy, earning less than $25 per month, to the office of assistant engineer of this place, at a monthly salary of $100, is the deserved good fortune of J. L. Kiler. Seven years ago he first pounded the sheep-skin in the Home band, not being ambitious, he employed spare hours between rehersals in pursuit of the knowledge of planes, parallelograms, conic sections and like matters to such good purpose that, after a term in the school for the engineer, he emerged with a sheepskin which could not be beaten, and which entitled him to write after his name, "C. E."

The enormous amount of construction and repair-work now going on in the Home made it necessary for the overworked chief engineer (Dobbings) to have an assistant, and Kiler, who for the past four years has been sighting the transit in and about Los Angeles, just happened along in time to secure the appoinement. He will take up at once the far-a-field work, such as survey for the new pipe-line in Mandeville Cañon, and that for the between two and three miles of iron fence, which is soon to enclose the Home.

Mr. Kiler was recently made civil engineer for the city of Sawtelle.

Calvin Chamberlain, late Co. B, Seventeenth Massachusetts Infantry, is appointed post-fund clerk, vice Fogarty resigned.

Miss Evalina Grohe, stenographer in the quartermaster's office, is granted a three weeks' leave of absence, which, in company with her mother, will be spent mostly in Seattle. Assistant Surgeon C. C. Elliott is already enjoying a fortnight's vacation at the fair.

Mrs. Emma Havens of San Diego, daughter of veteran Capt. Edwin Bailey, was a visitor at the Home on Wednesday. The sturdy old salt, who will be 100 years old, should he live until next March, himself performed the office of guide about the Home.

Mrs. F. J. Finch of Sawtelle is the contralto in the choir in the absence of Mrs. Austill, who has leave of absence for a month.

POMONA, Aug. 14.—Committees are at work among the members of the First Baptist Church for subscriptions to the new church building fund for the $40,000 edifice to be built at the northwest corner of Holt and Garey avenues. The plans have been changed somewhat by Architect Marsh, upon suggestion from the Building Committee.

The funeral of Mrs. Julia A. Manchester, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. E. Hickok, on South White avenue, on Thursday evening, will be held Sunday afternoon at J. E. Patterson's chapel. She lived here for twenty-three years, and was 73 years old. She leaves three children, Mrs. B. F. Caldwell, Mrs. S. E. Hickok and W. H. Manchester.

PALMS, Aug. 14.—The new United Brethren Church will be dedicated tomorrow morning. Rev. William M. Bell, D.D., bishop of that denomination for California, will conduct the ceremonies.

In addition to the dedicatory exercises and the usual evening services, there will be a platform meeting in the afternoon, at which Rev. G. W. Wilson, D.D., chaplain of the Soldiers' Home, and others, will speak.

A free luncheon will be served in the basement of the church by the Ladies' Aid Society.

City Attorney Madden has handed down an opinion regarding the acquiring of the present library by the city. BAGGAGE TROUBLES.

HOPE TO SETTLE BEACH DISPUTE.

SANTA MONICA MATTER IN LINE OF ADJUSTMENT.

Question of Routes and Rates on Trolley Lines to Seashore Town Are Cause of Long Controversy Which Promises to End in Satisfactory Understanding.

SANTA MONICA, Aug. 14.—Complaint is made here that this city is the object of unjust discrimination by the steam and electric railways. It is said today that the matter will probably be adjusted within a week.

The City Council and the Board of Trade have been laboring on the question the past year. The Council has been endeavoring to secure baggage-carrying concessions from the trolley line. The civic organization has carried the investigation to a point having to do with through rates and routes for passengers and freight, as well as the sale of excursion tickets from interior points to this beach the same as are sold to other beach points, and the transportation of baggage on passenger tickets.

When the Southern Pacific's line to the bay passed into the hands of the Los Angeles-Pacific and was electrized the sale of through tickets from eastern points was withdrawn, cheap excursion rates ceased to be issued to this beach, and persons who had baggage to be moved were compelled to have it shipped by express.

The contention was made that, although the Southern Pacific and Santa Fé had ceased to operate trains to this point, the terms under which the original charters had been granted must be complied with by the company operating over the former steam roads. The Southern Pacific held that it was the policy of that company to avoid interchange traffic arrangements with electric lines, and stated that the trolley line did not wish to disturb its arrangements by which the express company handled the baggage.

The transportation committee of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce was appealed to for aid. It was argued that to grant a cheap rate to other beach points was a discrimination against Los Angeles as well as against Santa Monica. The board asked aid in securing the cheap rate for Los Angeles, hoping thereby to secure for this city at least a small proportion of the travelers from the interior who sought to pass a summer by the sea. That committee was met with the reply that the excursion rate was "designed especially for pleasure seekers definitely destined to beach resorts." The committee was given to understand that if any complaint was made as to present conditions on account of discrimination the cheap rate to Long Beach and other points would be cut out entirely.

The State Board of Railroad Commissioners agreed to give the matter a hearing, after having been advised by the Attorney-General that "some of the matters complained of by the Board of Trade of Santa Monica seem to be of sufficient import and character to invoke the action of your board."

Complaints relative to the sale of through tickets and freight routes and rates from points outside the State were presented before the Interstate Commerce Commission. In reply the commission stated that the law governing that body authorizes the commission to establish through routes and rates if it appears that the carriers complained of refused or neglected to voluntarily establish such routes and joint rates, provided no reasonable or satisfactory through route already exists.

"The commission is frequently enabled to secure settlement of controversies," said the commission in its correspondence, "through the voluntary action of the carriers by submitting for their consideration matters complained of by letter, and accordingly I have written to E. P. Clark, president of the Los Angeles Pacific Company, calling his attention to your complaint and requesting that the matter be given careful consideration and that the commission be fully advised as to the conclusions reached in regard to the subject."

The commission sent copies of its findings made in recent months in cases of a similar character, showing that the Federal law makes no distinction between railroads that are operated by electricity and those that use steam locomotives; both are subject to the provisions of the act when engaged in interstate transportation of either passengers or freight and are entitled to equal consideration in any controversy before the commission.

City Attorney Odell has been in consultation with the officials of the trolley company during the present week, and in his opinion all matters complained of will be satisfactorily adjusted within a very few days.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

RAIN NEAR SAN DIEGO.

Inch and Half Precipitation in San Pasqual Valley and Wet Elsewhere.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The east end of San Pasqual Valley, twenty-two miles from this city, was visited this afternoon by a shower. It lasted from 4 to 5:30 o'clock and one and one-half inches of rain fell.

During the precipitation small streams ran through the valley, leaving ponds of water here and there, but no damage resulted.

At Ramona .65 inch fell. The rain was accompanied by lightning, which burned out the switchboard of the telephone exchange.

Rain also fell throughout the back country east of San Diego, but on account of an accompanying electrical storm, telephones were placed out of commission and figures are unobtainable.

IMPERIAL.

OAKLAND WANTS COTTON CROP.

WILL TAKE PRODUCT OF TEN THOUSAND ACRES.

Southern Pacific Makes Special Rate for Shipments—Texans to Lease Large Tract for Next Season. Gin Will Be Installed Soon—Postal Receipts.

EL CENTRO, Aug. 14.—Machinery for the first cotton gin and compress to be erected in Imperial Valley (now designated the American Nile country,) will arrive here from Dallas, Tex., within three weeks. The plant will be completed and ready to begin operations on the first commercial crop of cotton by September 25.

The American Nile Cotton Company has ordered through J. A. Bachman, a prominent cotton expert of Texas, who also is extensively interested in this valley, a two-stand seventy-saw gin and a hydraulic compress of the double box type. It is probable that one of the large cantaloupe packing sheds of El Centro will be secured as a temporary house for this plant, in order to hasten its installation. Next season the company will have buildings of its own on its tract in the southeastern part of this city.

The cost of the machinery at Dallas was $1900. When ready for operation the plant will represent an outlay of $2500. It will have a capacity of twenty-five bales a day.

The California Cotton Mills of Oakland wants Imperial Valley cotton, and is prepared to take the product of 10,000 acres. The Southern Pacific company has made a rate of 60 cents per 100 pounds on cotton from this valley to Oakland, which is 30 cents better than the rate from Texas.

Bachman, who has been spending several days here, has inspected many of the valley cotton fields, and is enthusiastic over the prospect, declaring this district is certain to prove one of the best cotton belts in the United States. He states that he is convinced the fields he has inspected now have fully two bales to the acre, and the growing season will continue for several weeks.

NEBRASKANS BUY ACREAGE.

Dr. J. E. Paul and Dr. N. Matzen, dentists of Holdridge, Neb., have purchased eighty acres of improved land, one and a quarter miles west of El Centro, from C. T. Collier, for $10,000. It is probable they will locate here in the fall.

TEXANS INTERESTED.

Rae Oliver and S. T. Marshall, extensive cotton growers of Woodward, Tex., have been here the past week, investigating the cotton growing in this valley. They are so well pleased with the situation that they propose to lease a large acreage here for next season, and to make arrangements for bringing a large colony of experienced helpers from Texas. O. B. Rush, who is also an experienced cotton planter, has been here the past week on a tour of investigation. He has now gone to Yuma, Colo., to close out his business, but will return here to engage in cotton growing next season.

MORE VALLEY ADVERTISING.

Business men of El Centro have contributed to a fund for the purpose of forwarding to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition 5000 copies of the special edition of the Desert Farmer, illustrated with Imperial Valley views and full of details of development of the valley. An El Centro leaflet will be inserted in each copy. These books are to be distributed under the direction of Frank Wiggins at the California building. John R. Baker, editor of the Desert Farmer, donates the 5000 copies.

Three engines for pumping and a filter with a capacity of 50,000 gallons each twenty-four hours, are included in the plans. The elevated tank will have a capacity of 100,000 gallons and the floor will be seventy-five feet above ground level.

WIFE BRAVELY ROUTS BURGLAR.

FIGHTS MAN WHO CHLOROFORMED HER HUSBAND.

Woman Seizes Intruder by Throat, But He Finally Escapes—Mrs. Hughes Holds Six Workmen at Bay With Revolver—Lad Gunning for Detective.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 14.—While her husband lay under the influence of choloroform, Mrs. Frank Silverthorn yesterday morning put to flight a burglar after a desperate hand-to-hand encounter at her home at No. 2841 N street.

The burglar first entered the room occupied by Silverthorn, and after placing a chloroformed cloth over his face, searched his clothing. He then went into the adjoining room, occupied by Mrs. Silverhorn and her 8-year-old daughter. The woman was awakened, and demanded to know what the intruder wanted. Receiving no reply, she jumped from bed and grasped him by the throat, calling at the same time for her husband to help her.

But Silverthorn was unconscious, and the burglar began fighting the woman. He beat her and attempted to reach into his pocket for a knife, but she grabbed his arms and held on until her strength gave out. When a noise in the next room made the burglar think that Silverthorn was returning to consciousness, he wrenched himself from the wife's grasp and escaped. Detectives have arrested several suspects, but on account of the darkness at the time of the encounter Mrs. Silverthorn was unable to identify any of them.

WOMAN ROUTS SIX MEN.

With revolver in hand, Mrs. Mary L. Hughes yesterday afternoon compelled six men to desist from removing a fence from the line between her own and adjoining property. As the gun looked exceedingly dangerous, the men refused to continue the job of tearing down the fence, although F. L. Hieatt, agent for the property, who employed them, was present. Hieatt said the woman aimed her threats at him, and he caused her arrest, but she was released on her own recognizance. Mrs. Hughes claims ownership to the property of which Hieatt is agent.

GUNNING FOR DETECTIVE.

Domingeo Flores, a 12-year-old youth, was before Judge Puterbaugh in the Police Court this morning on a charge of carrying a revolver. When asked the lad said he intended to kill Detective Jack Warren with it. He confessed he stole the gun from a house on the water front. The detective once arrested him for stealing a valuable collar from a society woman's dog.

Anaheim Men Favor Spending Sixty Thousand Dollars for Sewer Purposes—Costly Paving.

ANAHEIM, Aug. 14.—A well-signed petition has been presented to the Trustees asking them to call an election for the purpose of voting upon the question of issuing $60,000 bonds for sewer purposes. A number of leading business men are in favor of the proposition. The board decided to take no action until the next meeting. It is estimated that the work can be completed and a sewer farm purchased for between $50,000 and $60,000. NO TROUBLE EXISTS.

Division of Upland Fruit Associations Caused by Rapid Growth of Membership.

UPLAND, Aug. 14.—Charles D. Adams, secretary and manager of the Upland Citrus Association, denies that there is any trouble in the ranks of his association. He gives out some facts regarding the big Upland association, which place the forming of the new Upland Heights Orange Association in a somewhat different light. The Upland association was founded and organized by Mr. Adams in 1897. It is the largest of any here, affiliated with the Ontario-Cucamonga Exchange, but it does not control 80 per cent. of the local orange crop. The exchange does that.

Aside from the Upland, there are eight or nine other associations in this district. The membership of the association grew to such proportions it was deemed wise to divide. As a result, the Stewart, as well as the Mountain View, were formed, both being offshoots of the parent organization. Mr. Adams says the concern is again too large, which accounts for the formation of the Upland Heights Orange Association. He denied emphatically that there has been, or is any "row" among the members. Only the most amicable relations exist.

The same condition obtains in Claremont, Pomona and elsewhere, and there, also, new associations are being formed from the older concerns. The Upland Heights Association has purchased one of the best locations for its packing-house in this colony. The acre cost $4000.

Prof. M. E. Hill and family, Miss M. Zoe Westland, Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Wing and E. B. Reynolds and family are among the Upland people who have gone to Catalina for the week's end.

Rev. James Vernon, T. Kirk Vernon, H. W. Slugg and Lee Kerfoot have just returned from a several weeks' outing, spent in Little Bear Valley. Kirk Vernon succeeded in shooting a fine buck.

ACCIDENTAL SHOOTING.

Banning Consumptive Kills Himself. Salt Lake Surveyors Are in Moreno Valley.

BANNING, Aug. 14.—Walter Boyd, recently from Tucson, accidently killed himself with a shotgun, yesterday. Boyd was a consumptive, unable to be about much, and for diversion borrowed a gun for the purpose of shooting birds in his yard. Neighbors found his lying on a cot, with the gun beside him, and an ugly wound in his breast. The county coroner was notified and held an examination. The jury brought in a verdict of accidental shooting. Boyd left a widow.

Interest in the proposed cut-off of the Salt Lake Railroad, from Barstow through Banning to Riverside, has been intensified by the report brought in from the Moreno Valley, of the party of surveyors now running lines in that section. It is believed the ultimate destination of the road is San Diego.

END FIGHT FOR BIG ESTATE.

COURT IN VENTURA APPROVES A COMPROMISE.

Claimants to the Wealth of Leopoldo Schiappapietra Arrive at an Agreement Regarding the Distribution of the Property—Contested by Common-Law Wife.

VENTURA, Aug. 14.—In the Superior Court this morning Judge Clarke allowed the compromise in the contests of the will of the late Leopoldo Schiappapietra. Orders will follow for the immediate settlement and distribution of the estate of the bean grower, estimated as worth $2,500,000.

Under the will, the bulk of the estate goes to the Ross children, minors, nephews and nieces of Schiappapietra's late wife, and to certain Italian heirs, related to Schiappapietra. The will was contested by Dominga Badilla Schiappapietra of Santa Barbara, claiming to be the common law wife of Frederico Schiappapietra, and her five children, and likewise by Arturo Noberasco, a South American, grandson of Joseph Schiappapietra. Frederico and Joseph were elder brothers, both of Leopoldo.

In behalf of the common law wife of Frederico, it was contended that he was the real founder of the Schippapietra fortunes, accumulating his start in a little grocery store in Santa Barbara, years ago; and it was established that a pension had long been paid by Leopoldo to Dominga Badilla Schiappapietra. Noberasco set up the allegation in his contest that Leopoldo was of unsound mind and unduly influenced when he made the will.

The terms of the compromise signed by Judge Clarke, which all the legatees and contestants agree to, permits of the payment to the Ross minors of $75,000; to the executors of the estate of $5000; and to other inheritors under the will of $7750. This makes a total from the estate of $87,750. Of this sum $17,500 goes to Noberasco; $7187.50 each to Astuefo Schiappapietra, Ida Linden, Miguel Schiappapietra and Mina Danner, children of Dominga Badilla Schiappapietra and $7250 to Edith Barber, also a child of Dominga Schiappapietra. The balance goes for lawyers' fees and costs, probably. At all events, these are the terms of the settlement set forth in the various petitions asking for the settlement. As the time for the filing of contest of the will has now passed, this settlement winds up all litigation in connection with the case.

SANTA BARBARA.

SANTA BARBARA, Aug. 14.—By far the most brilliant affair yet held at the new Potter Country Club at Hope Ranch was the barn dance given last evening by Miss Nina Jones in honor of Miss Harriet Alexander of San Francisco. Not only the clubhouse but the driveway and the grounds around the house were arranged to represent harvest time on a farm. With cornstalks, pumpkins and wild flowers the ball-room looked like the scene of a "husking bee." In the dining room tables "groaned" with old time "vittles" ginger-bread, doughnuts, cold chicken, pumpkin pie and the rest. Outside the barn, cider was served from a great crock. Bales of hay about the grounds were used for seats, while the driveway was lined with hay stacks above which were suspended lanterns. The Barn Dance and Virginia Reel were part of the doings, of course. The Van Nuys orchestra played for the dancing and Mr. and Mrs. Milo M. Potter lead the "grand march."

TELLS WHAT WE LACK.

Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Hollingsworth have just returned from an extensive trip through Europe. The veteran realty man declared that Los Angeles never looked so good to him before as it looks now. He avows that there is no European city which offers so much, either to the resident, investor or tourist, as does Southern California, with its unparalleled combination of ocean, mountain and climate. "Occasionally," said Mr. Hollingsworth, "we meet people who are inclined to treat the matter of our climate as a joke, but after one travels about and goes through the inconveniences of the wet, cold and hot weather, he more than ever appreciates our climate. Sunny Italy is very beautiful, but the sun's rays are so piercing that they seem to take away one's ambition. In comparing our Los Angeles city with foreign cities, I find that we lack a great deal in the matter of public fountains, wide boulevards, shade trees and outdoor restaurants and places of recreation. In all parts of Europe you will find the people living in the open as much as possible. Every park is provided with open-air restaurants as well as with excellent bands, which give concerts daily. It appears to me that there is nothing which Los Angeles needs so much as to give a little more time and attention to beautifying the city. It certainly should install some public fountains as soon as possible and connect our parks with boulevards. In Europe, where it is so very hard to cultivate the trees, you will find them planted along the public thoroughfares and cared for by the city. They are so jealous of trees that, in more than one place, I noticed where a street railway company was compelled to build its line around a tree or a small grove of trees, rather than to cut down the tree and straighten the line.

"The eastern part of the United States," he continued, "seems alive to the wonderful growth and the great future of this city. The Owens River project is known and talked of everywhere and considered one of the greatest feats of the present age. Some one was continually asking me about the great consolidation and the future of Los Angeles as a seaport city."

BREVITIES.

To "Liner" Advertisers: Dating June 1st, classified advertising in the Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday. Close calculations covering a period of several months develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1st. Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling ... The present "want" ad rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. MISSTEP.

FALL FROM CAR MAY COST LIFE.

WOMAN IS APPARENTLY FATALLY INJURED IN ALIGHTING.

Tourist from Illinois Trips on Skirt and Plunges Heavily to Pavement, Sustaining Fracture of Skull. Conscious Long Enough to Give Identity and Friends Are Called.

Mrs. Anita B. Stewart, a tourist of Monmouth, Ill., visiting in Los Angeles, was probably fatally injured when she fell from Sixth-street car, No. 887, at Sixth and Figueroa streets, last night, at about 9 o'clock. She sustained a fracture of the base of the skull, and soon after her admission to the Receiving Hospital was vomiting blood. The surgeons said there was little hope of her recovery.

Mrs. Stewart was still conscious when examined by the surgeons, and was able to give her name, but no more, before she lapsed into a comatose state. In her purse was found a slip of paper with directions to the home of H. L. Honck of No. 434 North Occidental boulevard, a receipt for a registered letter she sent from Seattle on June 5 to Mrs. W. E. Lindley of Lemoore, Cal., a Pullman berth check from Portland to Oakland, dated in July, and a receipt for a registered package sent yesterday. At the postoffice it was said that Mrs. Anita B. Stewart had given her address as Monmouth, Ill., when she sent the package.

Mrs. Stewart, who is about 25 years old, was standing on the lower step of the car when it slowed down to let the conductor pull the switch, turning from Figueroa into Sixth street. Stanley Cuhns of the Columbine Hotel, who saw her when she fell, says that she seemed to trip on her skirt in trying to get down from the car, and fell to the pavement backward.

Upon examination of Mrs. Stewart's effects at the Receiving Hospital it was supposed at first that she was Mrs. Honck. When a Times reporter called at the Honck residence, late in the evening, the door was opened by Mrs. Honck. When the situation was explained she said that the injured woman must be one her husband had met at Lemoore a few days ago. Mr. and Mrs. Honck went at once to the Receiving Hospital, where they identified the apparently dying woman.

Mrs. Stewart is said to be a cousin of Rev. Will W. Logan, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of this city.

ALHAMBRA.

ALHAMBRA, Aug. 14.—Rev. J. W. McLean has been appointed to the Holy Trinity Church of this city. He will begin work on Sunday, September 19, and comes from Los Angeles, where he was rector of St. James's. There will be no services at the church during August.

A fair is to be given at the San Gabriel Mission commencing September 16, Mexican Independence Day, and running four days.

The ladies of the West Alhambra Methodist Church held an anniversary social at the home of Mrs. E. G. Marriam, No. 1814 Vine street, Thursday afternoon. A musical programme was rendered, with Miss Alice Roberts as pianist.

The baseball game yesterday afternoon between the business men and members of the fire department resulted in a score of 7 to 5 in favor of the latter.

C. E. Strifler took Mayor Weeks, Councilman Hilton and Street Superintendent Williams in his auto to Upland Wednesday, where they went to examine the big job of paving Euclid avenue, which Rose & Wilson, the Alhambra contractors, have been doing.

ALAMITOS BAY.

ALAMITOS BAY, Aug. 15.—Arrangements have been made by various associations for their outings here on these dates: August 21, Salt Lake Railway employés; August 25, Pacific Electric Railway employés; August 28, Los Angeles laundry employés; August 30, German-American Volks Fest Verein; September 2, Alamitos Bay Fishermen's Club; September 6, Long Beach Boatman's Association.

Chief Justice Edward Kent and mother of Phoenix, Ariz., who have been house guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Ives for a fortnight, departed for Los Angeles yesterday. Wednesday Mrs. Ives entertained friends with an informal luncheon at the clubhouse. Covers were laid for these Los Angeles guests: Mmes. Vickers, Cheney, McClure, Crouse, Bowen, Richard Stott, Plater Green and Johnson. On a previous day, Mmes. Guy Barham and Warren Gillelen were guests of honor at a function given by the same hostess.

LEASE LARGE RANCH.

About ninety acres of the Chapman ranch, adjacent to the Baldwin ranch, have been leased by J. Hunsaker and Edwin G. Hart for a term of four years. The lessees have an option to purchase the property at $76,000. The tract fronts about 800 feet on the Monrovia car line. It boasts of an excellent strip of artesian well land. The owners are Dr. Richard Chapman of South Pasadena, Ruth Chapman of Berkeley and Louisa Evelyn Chapman of this city.

BUYS ON KINGSLEY DRIVE.

W. W. Carruthers has purchased from Frank B. Hardigan a two-story, nine-room residence at No. 666 Kingsley Drive. There are oak floors throughout and the interior finish and tapestry decorations are of the finest quality. A stone porch extends across the front and there is a well-designed porte cochere and a spacious pergola and a large garage. The sale was negotiated by the firm if Edwards & Wildey and the consideration was $8500.

UNDELIVERED TELEGRAMS.

Tuberculosis
"I am convinced that in Mercury we have a specific for tuberculosis." (U. S. Naval Medical Bulletin, Washington, Government Printing Office, 1908.) This statement, which could hardly be made stronger, is occasioned by the almost incredible results obtained at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Las Animas, Colo., where a careful and scientific investigation of the treatment of Tuberculosis by Iodo-succinate of mercury is being conducted. The improvement in many cases is almost startling: In one, death was expected in a few days, but after less than six weeks' treatment the patient had gained 28 lbs. The report adds: "This transformation from a dying condition to one of such marked improvement in so short a period is most gratifying." The latest bulletin (April, 1909,) states that of the 31 patients under this treatment 89.16 per cent. have improved, several discharged cured. "The results obtained by this method of treating tuberculosis have been exceedingly gratifying, both to the patients and to the staff of this hospital." (See report.) As but few of the general public have, as yet, even heard of this treatment, and realizing its great importance, it has been decided to open a department at the Los Angeles Dispensary, 214-215 Columbia Trust Building, 312 West Third street, where a physician will be in attendance from 2 to 4 daily (except Sundays) to explain the method to anyone interested (no fee charged,) and treat those suitable cases who may desire it.

HE'LL GET IT.

BEACH COMEDIANS PESTS OF LIFE LINE.

Aggravating Stunts by a Character Whom Everybody Has Met—Especial Enemy of Fat Ladies and Thin Men—Fate's Sandwich.

IF A MAN with an inconsiderable wisp of blue rag around his otherwise naked carcass should stand on his head in the middle of Spring street; or if an idiot with a whoop of joy should run and push over the people waiting in line at the box office window, or sneak up and bite out a hunk from the middle of a beef steak on some private dinner table at the Alexandria grill. . . .

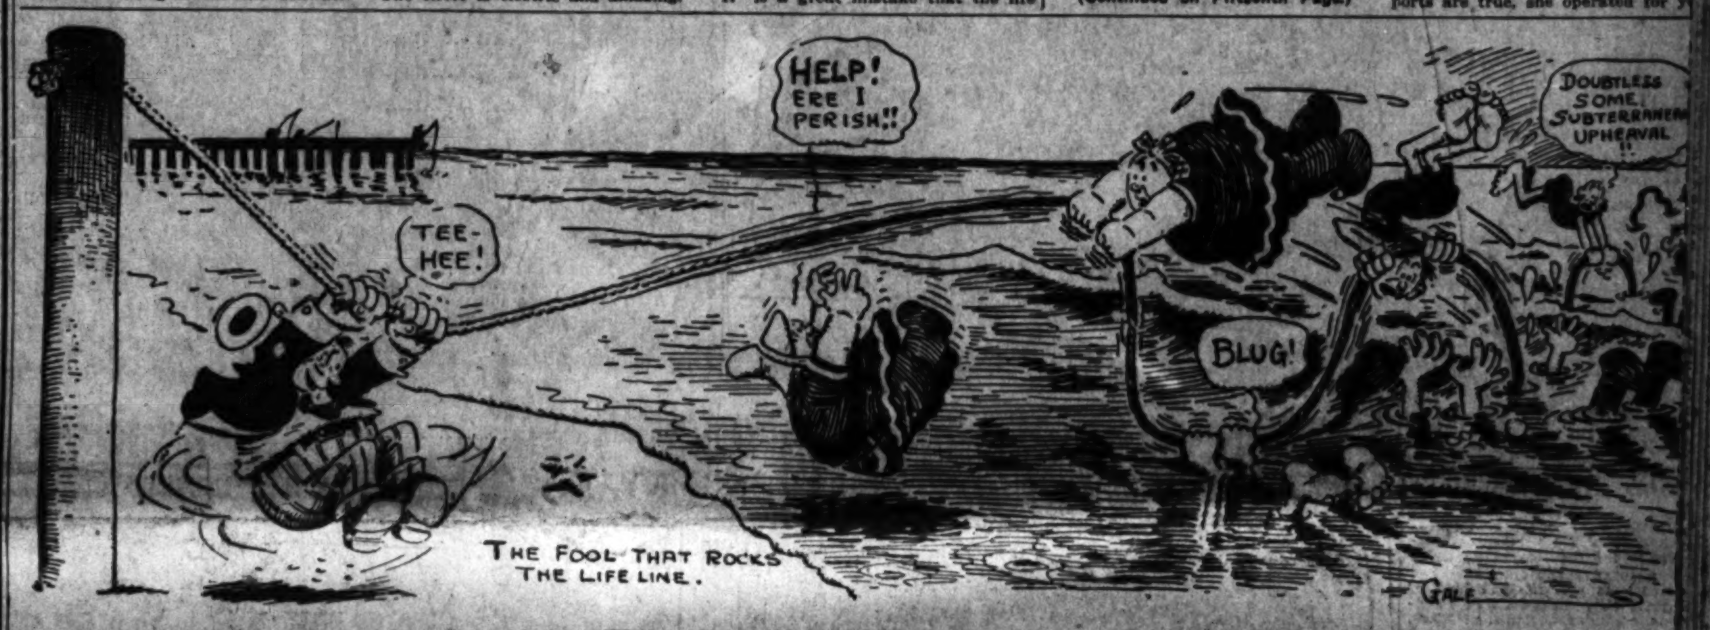
A policeman would beat him, and he would wake up in the drunk cell, and a police justice would send him to the chain gang for life. After that, something really serious would probably happen to him..

But he would only be the sea-beach comedian, moved in overland.

They call champagne "foolish water;" but the imprisoned laughter only induces one to do moderately sensible things, such as standing on a chair in the hotel lobby to make a speech about the secrets of your past life; such as signing checks for money you haven't got; such as weeping on the neck of a stranger and telling him why your wife threatens to leave you.

But something about the seawater and the surf seems to make some men really foolish.



TEE-HEE!
HELP! ERE I PERISH!!
DOUBTLESS SOME SUBTERRANEAN UPHEAVAL !!
BLUG!
THE FOOL THAT ROCKS THE LIFE LINE.
GALE

The most pestiferous of the beach funny men.

That irritating imbecile, the beach comedian, makes his stage entrance with a yelp at the end of the life line.

The proper stage direction for the beach comedian would be, "Enter on a life line." And the proper thing to do with the beach comedian would be to cut the line.

He usually flourishes best on Sunday morning.

By that time, the life line is littered with population. About 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, the life line looks like a stick of taffy in fly-time. Only, instead of flies, fat ladies.

The place on the line nearest shore seems always to be usurped by a heavyweight lary, who would naturally fight in the Jim Jeffries division. And to see her go into the surf reminds one of the leonine boldness with which the "undefeated champion" defies the Zulu Johnson.

She starts for her dash into the surf by carefully grasping the life line about ten feet shoreward beyond the farthest line of breakers..

Working her way ponderously down, hand over hand, she finally gets to the water edge and steps high and cautiously in, never stopping until the waves dash as high as her ankles. Then she grabs the line with desperation, and stands and waits, with the water slushing about her feet, never releasing her death grip until the tide has gone out.

Farther out on the line are miscellaneous assortments of shrieking children, begging piteously for release from their ogre mammas, who are intent on giving them a "nice time," if they drown the whole brood.

Girls with red stocking legs; lean ladies, who get out just far enough to be dragged under, screaming, every time a wave swashes in.

Timorous, shivering, thin gentlemen, who look around with pained reproach every time a wave hits them.

OUT HE COMES.

At 10 a.m. this objectionable idiot, the beach comedian, comes leaping out from the bath-house, and on the life lines sees his prey.

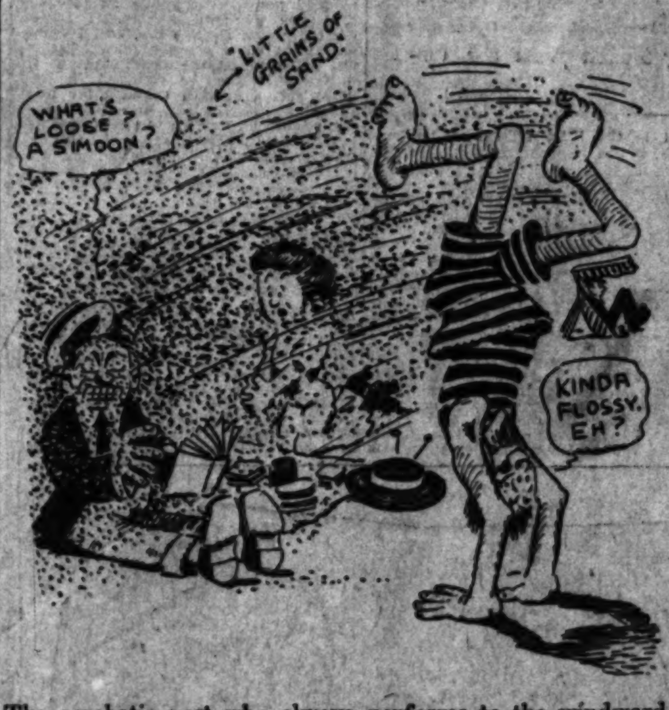
He comes down upon them with a shrill "whee" of joy.

The beach comedian is usually a spindle-shanked man with hairy, blond legs; a big toe that veers across the bows of his own feet with a big, red toe joint; angular knees, that look like an underdone roast and pale eye brows; invariably pale eye brows. If he hasn't these characteristics, together with a voice like a cracked siren whistle, he isn't a real one.

When he runs, he bounds into the air like a yearling calf.

With one of these kangaroo jumps he lands with the whole weight of his carcass on the taut end of the life line.

The effect is electric and amazing.



LITTLE GRAINS OF SAND?
WHAT'S LOOSE? A SIMOON?
KINDA FLOSSY, EH?

The acrobatic pest who always performs to the windward.

The result to the population of the rope is a patent jumping-jack.

Two or three of the bellowing children are jerked off and do parabolas through the air. The lean lady goes down with a yell under the waves, clinging to the rope, her bubbles coming to the surgace with frenzied glugs. Red stockings wave in agony above the billows.

The timorous gentleman is flung out screaching into the deep.

The heavyweight lady on the shore line stands swaying for a moment like a wounded elephant; then her legs kick out from under and she comes down on the sand in a sitting position with a bump that shakes the earth, and sits there frantically clinging to the rope.

Yells and shrieks fill the air; but the beach comedian heeds them not. Mothers snatch their floating progeny; the red stockings claw themselves out of the blue ether, back to earth; the timorous man wades back to shore, crying "Help 'elp;" but the beach comedian don't care.

He is, by this time, using the end of the life line for a trapeze; winding his red, big toes, cut on the bias, about the rope; hanging head down and splashing water on the fat lady, who still sits in two inches of water, clinging doggedly, with Napoleonic determination, to the rope.

This is the début of the beach comedian.

Signal he's on hand and feeling pretty lively.

THE DROP-OFF.

After he's hung by his knees and his toes, he does the "big drop-off," which is achieved by swinging by your knees and suddenly letting go.

As the beach is always crowded, he usually "lets go' with startling effect, smashing some unsuspecting passing one in the stomach with both feet as he makes the grand drop, or falling on some unwary passer when he lights.

On a crowded beach, there are always several comedians of this description. Drawn together by the freemasonry of shaking people off the life line, they get together and do team work.

One of their finest stunts is "making pyramids."

Making pyramids is a classic feat of athletics accomplished by one hairy man standing with his red, misfit toes on the skinny shoulders of another hairy man, and then both toppling over on some innocent picnic party.

They can only reasonably fall directly upon one picnic party; but they can easily scatter sand and shake sea water off their hairy carcasses upon several picnic parties upon a crowded beach.

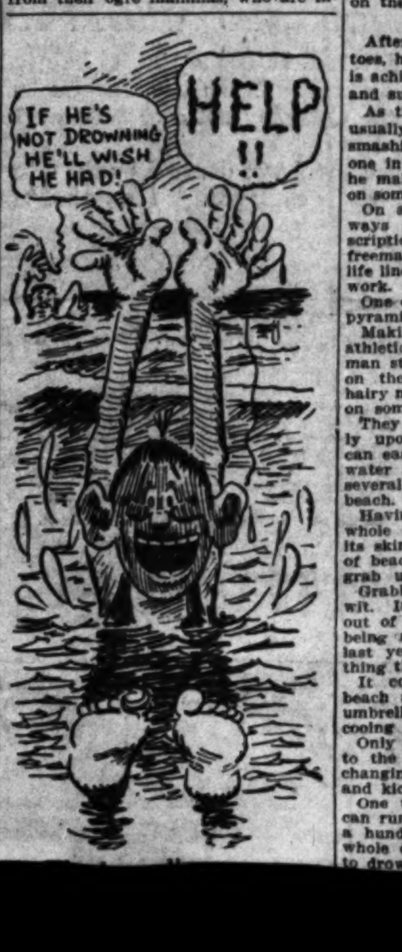
Having done pyramids until the whole beach length has gathered up its skirts and fled in alarm, the team of beach comedians now starts off to grab umbrellas.

Grabbing umbrellas is a subtle bit of wit. It's about as funny as running out of water on the desert. Next to being attached by the Sheriff for a last year's bar bill, it's the funniest thing there is.

It consists in running along the beach and suddenly yanking up the umbrellas that conceal the billing and cooing of engaged couples.

Only quite as frequently they reveal to the curious world a busy mother changing the garments of squalling and kicking infants.

One team of two beach comedians can run along a beach and yank over a hundred beach umbrellas; but the whole ocean doesn't seem big enough to drown the comedians.



IF HE'S NOT DROWNING HE'LL WISH HE HAD!
HELP !!

are not. The life guard foolishly plunges out through the surf, and the Thing that has been struggling and floundering in the surf, yelling help, comes wading out on dry land with a grin, and says, "I was just foolin'."

IS IT WET?

It is a great mistake that the life guards at the beaches are not armed with long, hooked poles, with which to push these creatures under when such good chances come.

Once out in the surf, these comedians really begin feeling funny.

Equipped with red-jointed fingers,

The New Huntington Hall,

which will be an exact reproduction of Le Petit Trianon, intended to be one of the beauty spots of Southern California.

IDEAL and highly artistic are the plans for the new Huntington Hall School for Girls, which will eventually be one of the most magnificent ones of its kind in the West.

Miss Florence Housel has secured a tract of twenty-one acres bordering on Huntington Drive, at Oneonta, on the Pacific Electric Railway, and directly facing the front of the Raymond Hotel. The view from the hotel will be directly into the formal Italian renaissance garden which will form the entrance to the school.

The school and its ample grounds will be an exact reproduction of the Trianon, near Paris, with such additions as the great size of the school will demand.

The site is one of the most beautiful that could be secured, and will be divided into two parks, the west side containing fourteen acres, and the east side, seven. On the fourteen-acre plot there is a sightly knoll, which will be the site of what will be known as "Senior Hall," which will then be a companion piece to the Raymond Hotel, standing on the next eminence north of it.

"Junior Hall," which will be built at once on the flat seven acres, will be a reproduction of the French chateau Petit Trianon, as seen in the picture herewith reproduced, with the addition of a library wing extending from the west side of the building, making a frontage of about 150 feet.

Back of this will be an interior court, 60x80 feet, surrounded by the ing on the court; the class rooms, assembly hall, domestic science department, dining-room, drawing-room, reception-room, office and other departments. The second and third floors will be for the dormitories, each room being provided with a dressing-room and bath.

There will also be delightful roof-gardens and other features in keeping with the glorious Southern California climate. The building will accommodate forty boarders and seventy-five day pupils, while Senior Hall, when built, will be of much greater proportions, and will be of concrete.

Petit Trianon is the chateau that was made famous by the residence there of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, and has been visited many times by Miss Housel, so that she is perfectly familiar with all its appointments, and the drawing-room, dining-room and some others will be finished and furnished exactly as they are in the famous chateau.

On the grounds will be reproduced the Temple de l'Amour, the dairy and other features of the chateau's formal gardens.

Miss Housel has executed a coup for the opening of her school this fall, in securing the privilege of the Raymond Hotel. She will move into the magnificent hostelry on October 14, and expects to have her own building ready for occupancy by Christmas, when the hotel will be opened to the public as usual.

The principal said yesterday that she would have the highest type of school, perfect in its appointments, but where she will expect her pupils to live a very simple and democratic center of the Lankershim district is the little village of Lankershim, which was called in olden times Tuluca. It is reached by the Southern Pacific on a branch line from Burbank, or via wagon road, through the Cahuenga Pass. The district is a part of the great Lankershim ranch, which was acquired fifty years ago by Col. James Lankershim. The original ranch comprised 52,000 acres, and a large part of it is used for grazing and raising barley. The fruit district comprises probably 20,000 acres, which lie just north of the Hollywood mountains. The soil is peculiarly adapted for peaches and apricots. Other kinds of fruit have been tried there but not very successfully. There is plenty of rainfall, so that irrigation is unnecessary. There are about 1200 acres planted to peaches and 700 to apricots.

The crop estimate for this year is about 2200 tons of apricots, of which there will be 500 tons of dried fruit, and about 3000 tons of peaches, of which there will be about the same amount of the dried product. Apricots this year, at the association headquarters, bring about $18 to $20 per ton, green, and 7 to 7½ cents per pound dried, and the peaches will run about the same.

The Lankershim district had always been immune from tree diseases until last spring, when the black peach avis appeared. This disease is very prevalent in Kansas and Missouri.

Both the State Horticultural Commission and the Department of Agriculture advised the immediate cutting down of the affected trees, but two members of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Commission, Erwin Dingle and A. R. Meserve, believed they could effect a cure and accordingly set about it.

The experiment was left to Mr. Dingle. He treated the affected trees by covering the entire tree with a canvas, fumigating it with cyanide of potassium and then making holes around the roots, into which he put about two teaspoonsful of bi-sulphide of carbon. About 1000 trees have been successfully treated and borne heavy crops this year.

prison, and this is especially so in the case of a woman of mature years. But you have been convicted of a serious fault. There is no desire on my part to hold you up to public ridicule or read you a moral lecture. I know what my own feeings are, and I have some idea what yours must be. It is the sentence of the court that you, Gertrude Driggs, be confined in the State prison at San Quentin for five years."

A slight shudder, as if the blow was but a momentary matter—only that. Her escorts wept inconsolably, but the chief actress in the human drama seemed to care but little for what would have crushed an ordinary woman. Her old training stood her in good stead.

ATTORNEY APPEALS.

Attorney Schenck took an appeal from the order of the court in denying a motion for a new trial, and gave notice that the case would be immediately taken to the Court of Appeal for review. The court was also asked to sign a certificate of probable cause that would operate as a stay of execution of the sentence until the matter could be disposed of by the higher court. Judge Davis did not rule on the latter proposition, saying that he would decide the matter Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

On the way back to jail Mrs. Driggs chatted pleasantly with her friends. If her heart was wrung by the judgment of the court, she gave no sign.

The charge on which Mrs. Driggs was convicted was that she had forged the name of the late John J. Charnock, a wealthy and aged bachelor of The Palms, to a lease under which the woman was given the use of a large amount of valuable acreage, with the right to sell it practically on her own terms and to profit greatly by the transaction. Heirs to the Charnock estate alleged that the name of the old man had been forged on the lease, and the evidence presented convinced the jury that Mrs. Driggs was guilty.

FRIDAY NIGHT HAULS.

W. L. Crump of No. 600 East Fourth street reported to the police yesterday that he was held up by two men on Iowa avenue and robbed of $12 Friday night. While J. T. McCarthy, No. 918 West Sixth street, peacefully slumbered Friday night, a thief entered his bedroom and carried his clothing to the lawn. The clothing was searched and $25 extracted.

CONSTABLES LOSERS.

Four Deputies Sentenced for Contempt of Court Get No Relief on Appeal.

The Court of Appeals, yesterday, denied the habeas corpus application of J. C. Corneau, Charles Benjamin, Martin Miklauchitz and Frank Henry, the deputy constables of Justice Summerfield's court, who were sentenced by Judge Davis, Thursday, to five days in the County Jail for contempt.

The decision is that the Superior Court does not lose jurisdiction of contempt committed in the view of the court, and that no formal affidavit or citation was necessary in the case. These were the points relied upon to secure the release of the officers by their attorney, Paul Schenck.

EXPERIENCED PRESIDENT.

The president, Miss Ednah A. Rich, has had charge of Miss Blake's work since its inception. She enjoys the distinction of being the only woman president of a State Normal School in this country. Miss Rich, by right of her office, becomes a member of the State Board of Education. She was elected at the recent meeting of the National Educational Association in Denver vice-president of the section composed of those interested in art, manual training and home economics.

The supervision of the manual training and domestic science in the public schools, from kindergarten through High School, is still in Miss Rich's charge. The practice teaching of the normal students will thus be under her direction.

Miss Mary H. Tracy, graduate of the best school in Boston, with four years principalship of the Anna S. C. Blake Manual Training School, will have charge of the manual arts. This year the normal course will include bench work in wood and paper sloyd from Miss Rich's book of that name.

Those who wish may arrange for sewing also, and all will have their training free, paying only a nominal sum for material.

Miss Nellie V. Welles, A.B., University of Illinois, is director of the home economics department. Those desiring a splendid training in domestic science and domestic art will not be disappointed. The chemistry fee will be small in comparison with the beneficial value to the student, who will go forth to make California children understand food values from a scientific as well as an economic basis.

The future of the school is very bright. With the full coöperation of the five regular normal schools and the two universities, the quality of work and fitness of pupils will give to the schools on the western slope the advantages enjoyed by the East, which has its scores of endowed special training schools.

Dr. Elmer E. Brown, Commissioner of Education, is delighted that California has set the pace, and prophecies that many States will follow the good ing and sloyd have come some of the city's best citizens, who know the value of the right beginning in childhood. Each successive year has brought an increasing number of graduates who have entered the professions or the trades, and the town has appreciated the standard set by the generous woman who "builded better than she knew."

Jacob Riis, in a recent address in Santa Barbara, placed Miss Blake's life before the children as one to emulate, for she had "rather be faithful than famous."

There will be no tuition fees charged at this new State school.

A Ship Canal.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 13.—[To The Times:] Now that Wilmington and San Pedro have consolidated with us, and thereby made Los Angeles a seaport, it is next in order to agitate the dredging of a ship canal into "Nigger Slough." Dredge and improve the slough, and thereby bring the port to within ten miles of the business center of the city. The city could acquire the entire slough with sufficient adjoining land to control it for a reasonable price, and the improvement would give Los Angeles one of the greatest, safest and most unique harbors of the world. It would cost money, but we must dare to do big things, for it would go a long ways toward making a great city. There was a time in the early history of Chicago when it was said that Chicago would dare do what Boston would not, and do it too on Boston money. The result proved what may be logically expected when natural advantages are seized and utilized. Nature has given us this wonderful opportunity, and if we take advantage of it, it will not be many years until Los Angeles will be the Chicago of the Pacific Coast. Let us do it now, and not wait for posterity to look back and wonder what

KNOCKED OUT.

CANNOT MAKE AQUEDUCT "DRY."

LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL, SAYS BAKERSFIELD JUDGE.

He Finds "Joker" in Recent Act of the Legislature and Frees Man Arrested for Selling Liquor in Camps Along the Great Los Angeles Waterway.

BAKERSFIELD, Aug. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Bennett today knocked out the law passed at the last session of the Legislature prohibiting the sale of liquor within four miles of the camps of men engaged in the construction of a public work. He sustained the writ of habeas corpus sued for by A. C. Cuddeback, who was arrested three weeks ago for selling liquor on the aqueduct.

Judge Bennett based his decision on the ground that the law was in conflict with the State Constitution. The "joker" in the law, as it was framed, turned up in the article that exempted parties who had been in business six months before such work was started. Judge Bennett ruled that a law could not deal differently with two parties of equal rights. Cuddeback was ordered released from custody and his bondsmen exonerated. W. W. Dodge, a Los Angeles lawyer, specially represented the aqueduct people and the District Attorney's office.

The effect of Judge Bennett's decision will be that on that part of the aqueduct that lies in Kern county it will be permissible to conduct a saloon, while just over the line, until a similar decision in the adjoining county is rendered, it will be illegal.

THE GREAT ZEPPELIN FACT.

While scientists are engaged in evolving principles to demonstrate theories of mechanical flight and the populace stands agape over the performances of the Wrights and Bleriot, Kaiser Wilhelm and his people are building up a practicable airship business which is just bursting into full significance before the civilized world. Peaceful persons are hailing the Zeppelin type with delight, but foreign war departments are numbed by its full significance and royalty trembles in fear of the future. Here is a huge, tractable monster, paralleling our great ocean liners—a real ship of the air which has proved its capabilities and only hinted at the fulfillment of its possibilities—which has conquered the atmosphere as steamships have the sea, and Germany is its master.

It may take a quarter of a century fully to develop flying machines of the aeroplane type, but the airship is here and within a year or two will be in a high stage of practicability. Only within the last few months has the Zeppelin airship been taken seriously. The Germans have been confident of its success for a year or two, but in phlegmatic reticence have kept their own counsels. The rest of Europe has awakened to the fact that Emperor William is in a position to become a greater than Napoleon, not through his own genius, but through the circumstance that one of his people has evolved a new means of operating engines of destruction with practically no opposition at the present.

Germany has constructed five of these huge airships—two of them 446 feet long—and two of these have been converted into veritable warships, while others may be converted on short notice. Recently the Zeppelin II made a flight covering 850 miles and lasting thirty-six hours without landing. The Zeppelin I with a full military crew made nineteen ascensions in less than a month. The carrying capacity is measured in tons, which includes men, guns and ammunition, and Germans are already figuring on a ship a quarter of a mile long with a capacity of 125 tons. Two semi-military factories have been built, subsidized by the government and backed by the German people in a free-will offering of $1,500,000. Regular lines of airships have been organized and will soon be in operation.

Were war to be declared with France today, the French would be suing for peace within a month, for inside of a fortnight the big war balloons could destroy Paris and possibly border fortresses—not by dropping explosives merely at random, but by shooting them from guns with precision. France has airships and war balloons, but they are mere toys in comparison. Germany's airships are rigid structures which care neither for winds nor rain, as has been shown by experiments. They are capable of hard service and are being improved.

Europe is aghast at the new order of things. It means terrible destruction should wars be declared, or it means universal peace. Shall these great airships be used for war or commercial and pleasurable pursuits? The problem of the age now confronts the civilized world. Its solution can be made a cause of terror and misery, or of great joy and much pleasure. Peoples of the earth generally desire peace, but there are evil and discordant agencies constantly at work. Shall airships serve as saviors of mankind from the devils of mischief and unrest, through their very terrifying effect, or shall they serve as agencies of destruction?

OUR SCHOOLS—"THE TIMES" EDUCATIONAL SHEET.

Today, in a special magazine section of The Times, an impressive view of the splendid educational advantages in Los Angeles is presented. Something might have been looked for of this kind, but really, the least informed among us must be surprised at what is shown. This is a city of large population, and our people are intelligent and well-to-do. Such communities always demand high conditions in their public schools and support private schools of all special lines. But unusual conditions exist here, calling for the best in the world in the way of educational advantages. The city is filled with people of high intelligence, cosmopolitan in their make-up. They come from all parts of the world, and bring with them various ideas as to education. Many of them have the artistic temperament in one form or another, and are artists themselves of no mean order. The climate makes this a most desirable place to which to send children, as here they have the best chance in the world to grow into maturity in the best of health. The colorings on the landscape make this an ideal spot for the study of painting, and the air has the best effect on the voice.

Thus in the last quarter of a century we have seen a public school system developed ranging from kindergarten to high school and normal. The school buildings are of the most modern in all respects, as shown by the illustrated page in the section referred to. The finishing schools include the ordinary high school, with a thoroughly equipped commercial branch attached, and in recent years there has been added to this a polytechnic high school as good in all respects as any in the country. It has taken a great effort on the part of the taxpayers to keep pace with the demands of a city growing so rapidly in population, so as to provide these educational facilities. No city in the United States can point to a prouder achievement in the upbuilding of a public school system than this.

The development of private schools has fully kept pace with the public institutions. To the demand for special schools in art has been added that for education under religious influences. This is a city where churches abound, and where they are well attended and supported. These churches realize the advantages growing out of good schools and colleges with denominational backing. Many years ago the Roman Catholic Church founded St. Vincent's College, under the care of learned, devoted teachers, and this has grown to a great university today. About the same time in early days the Methodist Church founded the University of Southern California. It was a university only in name then, but it is one in fact now. To St. Vincent's College have been added all grades of schools, from the kindergarten up to the school where special professions are taught. To the U.S.C. have been added one college after another, from agriculture to law and medicine. Then there is that great and growing Presbyterian organization, Occidental College, Dr. Baer at its head.

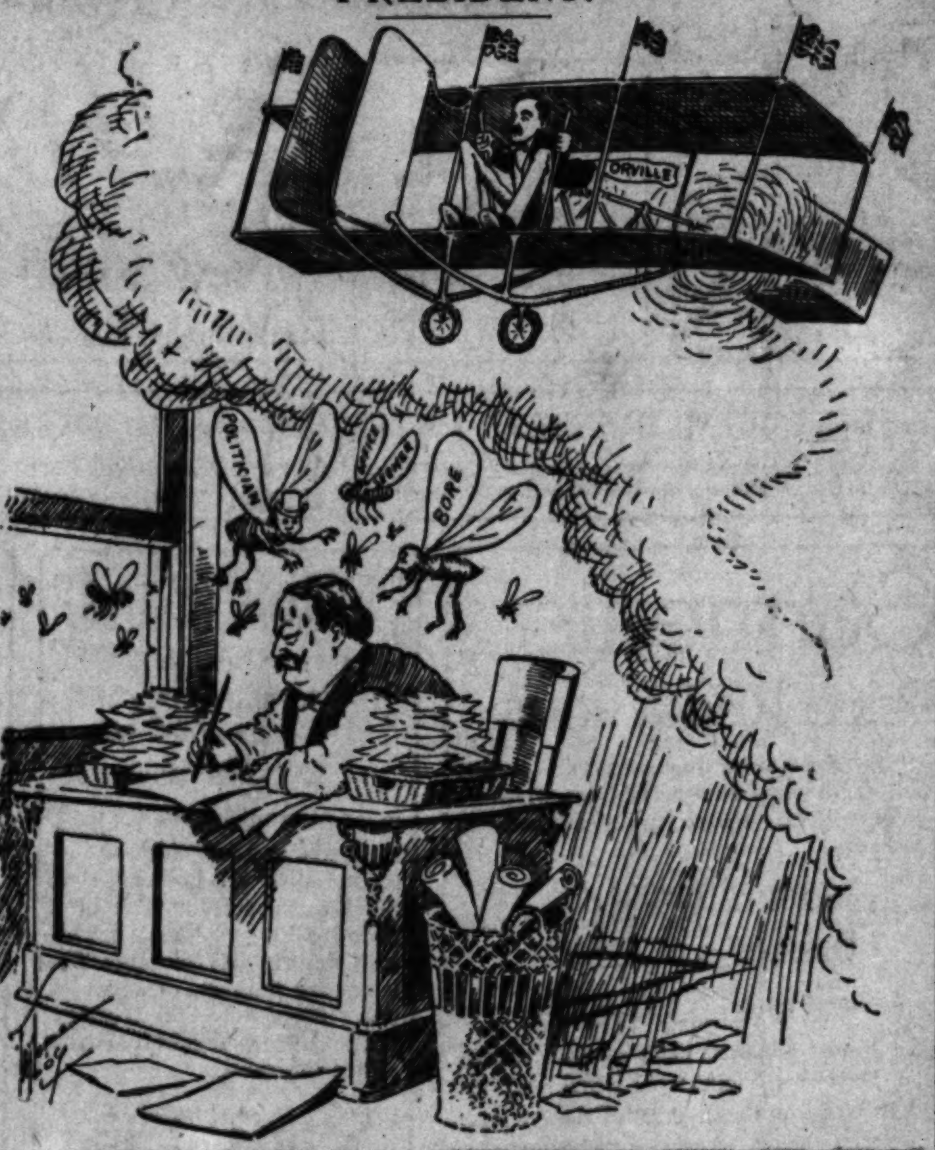
Some score of years ago the State selected Los Angeles as the place where a normal school should be maintained, and this is now one of the leading institutions of this type in the State. Far above 1000 students a year study here, fitting themselves for the teacher's profession. With the ordinary high school, the commercial high and the polytechnic high, the public chain of schools is complete. With St. Vincent's College, Occidental College, and the U.S.C. with all its allied colleges, we have three systems complete, one public, the others under church encouragement. Several other denominations maintain colleges of the usual type, with preparatory departments.

No city has more numerous, various or better equipped special schools than Los Angeles. It would be impossible to go over them in detail. The educational section in this issue of The Times sets them out in various array. From schools of expression to the highest in musical art or in painting, we have them. This is a great industrial and commercial city and naturally we find here commercial schools of the highest efficiency. Shorthand, typewriting, telegraph, commercial arithmetic, banking and everything in the way of business education is represented in the highest degree.

We are sure that we have done our readers here and far away a service which will be appreciated ... tional advantages to be found in this city. These schools are in a sense a business enterprise. They draw permanent settlers to the city in hundreds, and they attract pupils from abroad whose presence adds to business in all branches. We can well afford to support these institutions and to encourage them in every way. No influence does more than that of the schools to aid in the building up of the city and in the development of the country.

In the special magazine sheet of 24 pages issued herewith, the reader will find comprehensive summarization of the educational opportunities of Los Angeles—of the public school system, of the university system, of the numerous colleges and private schools, from kindergartens up, of the business colleges, of the art schools, of the music schools, of the religious schools, of the military schools, of the boys' schools, of the girls' schools, of the trade schools, of all the advantages offered to any young person with an ambition to perfect himself or herself in any line of study or research. It is a wonderful showing—and the most wonderful part of it is that the most and best of this splendid educational system has expanded within ten years from very modest beginnings.

WOULD RATHER BE "WRIGHT" THAN BE PRESIDENT.



MORE NOISE THAN FACT.

The great shouting led by Pardee at the Irrigation Congress at Spokane last week was decidedly the latest instance in evidence of the case of "great cry and little wool, as old Nick said when he sheared the pig"—touching the alleged grabbing of public property by private interests under the administration of the new Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ballinger. An investigation on this head among the records in Washington discloses the interesting and settling declaration that during the administration of this member of the Cabinet there has been just one power site leased to any one. This establishes the fact that we shall have to wait for the new Secretary to become guilty of malfeasance in office before we convict him. We shall probably wait a long time.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S TOUR.

No potentate, present or past, could make a tour comparable to that contemplated by President Taft during the approaching fall. He leaves picturesque New England with its charming hills, vales and streams, its historical associations of colonial and Revolutionary days, and passes through New York, crossing the Hudson River, by all means the most beautiful stream on the face of the globe. The route skirts a chain of inland seas unmatched on earth for their area, for the beauty of their scenery or the riches of the lands along their shores. Pennsylvania with its coal and oil is followed by Ohio, Indiana and Illinois with their agricultural wealth. Then comes the northern tier of States, notably Wisconsin and Minnesota, whose woods, streams and lakes are beautiful beyond the power of language to describe. At St. Paul he will be near the headwaters of one of the greatest river systems in the world, and thence he will traverse Iowa and Nebraska, as rich as Indiana and Illinois. He passes from the Nebraska plains into mountains the grandest on the globe and the richest in mineral wealth. Away to the north he crosses the divide and comes to the headwaters of the Columbia River system, which drains a territory much larger than all Europe combined. The Columbia below the Willamette carries a body of water equal to that of about all the streams of Western Europe. From Seattle to Los Angeles the route covers the Pacific Ocean, a distance so great that the railroad he rides on would gird Europe. Going eastward the greatest mineral belt of the world is crossed, and then the greatest grazing territory, followed by the cotton fields that supply the world.

The agricultural products of the States are worth $8,000,000,000, and the mineral products about half as much. The President's route passes through more cities than any other country could count, and the city and country population (90,000,000) equals that of half a dozen countries in Western Europe.

In New England he traverses spots of great historical interest, in New York others of not less. In the States of the Middle West he is where empires were built in a few decades out of the wilderness. On the "coast" he is in the land of romance where the padres planted the cross and the dons, in bright serapes, boots and spurs, rode over the plains scattering the seeds of civilization. The South presents the scenes of the great conflicts of the Civil War, and Texas tells of the struggle of the Lone Star State against Old Mexico, with the stories of Davy Crockett and his men.

And what a population he will find! Farmers who ride in automobiles with their wives clad in ... mills will be in evidence at all points, and content that comes from plenty will mark all he meets. He will not meet from Boston to Seattle, from there to Los Angeles, and from here back to Washington, the beggar asking for alms.

CAPITAL PROTECTING ITSELF.

From the New York Stock Exchange it is given out that millions of English money are seeking investment in American securities because of the excessive taxation imposed upon capital in Great Britain. Wall Street banks inform us that they are "carrying from a half billion to a billion dollars' worth of stock purchased and paid for by foreign investors who are changing their holdings from home securities into American in order to dodge the heavy income taxes recently levied."

If this goes on we are likely to have plenty of capital here for all purposes. Annually the savings for investment from dividends earned by former investments in the world are said to amount to about $2,500,000,000. In the list of nations the United States stands first, with a credit of this kind of $600,000,000. Then comes Great Britain with $450,000,000, France with $400,000,000, Germany with $300,000,000, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland together $250,000,000, Austria-Hungary $160,000,000, Russia the same figure, Italy $60,000,000, Spain and Portugal combined the same amount, and Norway and Sweden $40,000,000.

Our own accumulated wealth has not been seeking foreign investments largely, for the reason that American industries pay a higher rate of profit. Recently we have been sending some money into Mexico, South America, Cuba and the Philippines. It is said that the aggregate of these investments abroad by our people at the present time may reach as high as $2,000,000,000. Little Holland has half that amount of money invested abroad and Belgium one-quarter of it.

As we have of our own money the largest increment in accumulated wealth of any of the nations, if we draw so heavily from them as indicated by the dispatch from New York, our development will go on very rapidly and with it all the people from one end of the country to the other will have an opportunity to grow richer year by year.

The fact is, in the North American continent the development of wealth is at such an enormously rapid pace, and the opportunities are so varied and numerous for investment and enterprise, creating employment for all who will work, as a general rule, with wages and salaries higher than anywhere else in the world, that it is only the stupid, the lazy or the incompetent who may not year by year obtain a portion of this accumulated new wealth, and whether poor or rich, be year by year better off than they were the year before.

WHO SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH?

Once upon a time the Moors invaded Spain and held the country for centuries. Today it is a constant struggle on the part of the Moors to keep the Latin Europeans from taking possession of all Northern Africa. China is so thickly peopled that the folks almost walk over one another going through the streets. Yet parts of China, Manchuria among them, are little developed and sparsely settled, although very fertile. The Japanese are taking possession of this part of China, as they have already done with Korea, where the natives were too lazy to make use of the natural wealth of that country.

The territory now forming the United States lay neglected for centuries, because the natives were savages, content to remain so and incapable of improvement. Today an alien race possesses all this country and the aborigines have all but disappeared. All this is the law of being for humans.

Sentimentalists may dispute our premises, but they cannot maintain their contention. The Indian was always lazy and improvident and is so now as much as 300 years ago. In ten years the members of the Osage tribe have received $5,400,669.04 in annuities paid them by the United States, royalties on oil and gas, and pasturage received from white men for the use of lands the Indians would not work. There were 2230 members of the tribe, and so they received each $2,421.82. This does not include all these Indians received, as some of them got possession of lands as "squatters" which they leased directly to white men. Certain of the Indian families received $1500 to $2000 a year each.

These Osage Indians almost to a man took Robert G. Ingersoll's eloquent but bad advice, "If you are a beggar with a dollar, spend it like a king." They spent it to the last cent as soon as received, and often went hungry before the next installment came to hand. A SERIOUS POSSIBILITY.

The coming pugilistic encounter ... J. Jeffries and John A. Johnson (... of Minnesota) has one serious possibility ... a few people have taken into consideration ... result in the beginning of the long-... much-prophesied race war which, ... believe, will decimate the negro race ... and forever blast the great hopes of ... which that race has been carefully ... emancipation.

You need do no more than merely ... imagination to call forth the picture ... will attract world-wide attention, no ... what scientific skill or brutishness it may ... This because of the eminence of the ... the kingdom of brawn. But back of ... lurks a still more savage and sinister ... the outcome. It is white man against ... race against race.

If Johnson shall insist on winning ... stead of "lying down;" if he shall ... to the floor and "beat him to a pulp," ... look for things to happen. Johnson will ... gloat over his victim. But the negro ... the audience will become perfectly ... savage joy. You shall then hear the ... of victory ringing in the air from ... turies; the Ethiopian shall again repeat ... the taste of conquest that he knew in ...

Across the bloody arena will be ranged ... —the prototypes of ancestors who slew ... mies with war clubs and tore them limb ... to make a stone-age holiday. The ... backward and the skin-clothed savage ... and Gaul will become reincarnate at ... the bankers, brokers, merchants, ... artisans there assembled. The cry of ... will be answered by the cry of the ... hills and the narrow seas. The two ... the squared circle will be crushed ... of the clashing partisans. In other ... will be a free-for-all fight in that ... a moving-picture show could afford ... million dollars a week. And that may ... beginning of it. In every village and ... ica where there are negro residents ... age, bloody conflict may be waged ... say. Nothing of the kind may happen ... will give the subject serious consideration ... see that far stranger things have happened ... a sad commentary on our civilization ... possibility can exist, but we are to ... civilization is, as yet, in its swaddling ... that even the Caucasian, with his pride ... still little better than a veneered barbarian.

vertise Saladin Salad Oil, he would have been a sort of predecessor-in-interest to the present emotions of Rev. J. Wiley Phillips, reformer.

The Phillips must have read, and even re-read, with hot interest that part of Nick Oswald's testimony in which he said:

"I guess he didn't know it; but I used Rev. J. Wiley Phillips to force Tom Savage, my rival, out of business."

J. Wiley Phillips is one of the reformers who reform by profession, and reform without reason. The oil never seems to burn out of his lamp, and he keeps it burning all day.

PUBLIC SERVICE—OFFICIAL DOINGS

CONSOLIDATION.

WILL INSTALL NEW REGIME.

City Officers Plan for Added Territory.

Municipal Positions to Be Filled by Deputies.

Arrange for Filing With Secretary of State.

According to the preparations now being made by the city officials of Los Angeles, Wilmington and San Pedro will cease to exist as municipal corporations on the 24th inst. and become merged with Los Angeles. It is intended to file the results of both elections with the Secretary of State before that day and, when it is done, his certificate will be authority for the City Council to act.

This action will be in the form of an assumption of jurisdiction and provision for miniature city charter governments for each of the harbor towns. With the passage of the ordinances the City Trustees of each place, under the old régime, will retire and the deputies of the city officials will take charge.

On the same day the Treasurer, Tax Collector, City Engineer, Street Superintendent, City Clerk, Board of Health, Fire Chief, Police Chief and the Council Supply Committee will have deputies named to take charge of the shore ends of their business. It is intended by all, as far as possible, to make use of employés of San Pedro and Wilmington as deputies under emergency appointment and let them all gain permanency by civil service examination later. There are instances where this will not be practicable and there are other instances—at Wilmington—where one deputy may answer the purposes of the Tax Collector, Treasurer and City Clerk.

POSITIONS DEEMED NECESSARY.

The ordinance assuming jurisdiction under the Secretary of State's certificate that the results have been recorded will create all the positions now deemed necessary, as additional to the ones now provided for the municipal departments. The pay for them will come from the revenues of the towns as already provided by the trustees.

The certificate of the result of the Wilmington election has not been recorded because the Trustees have not completed their work as a Board of Equalization and will not until a final session Tuesday. Another few days will be required to put the assessments on the tax records. The town has a valuation of about $1,700,000 and its rate will be $1.15. Its income will be about $20,000 and of this $7500 will be required to care for the payment of principal and interest on the water front bonded debt of $100,000. Wilmington was a frugal community and its salary list did not far exceed $150 a month although fees and other expenses probably doubled that. It has a comfortable and well-constructed City Hall, with a jail in the basement, and this building will be the seat of government for the precinct.

San Pedro has fixed its valuation at $6,700,000, which is about $500,000 less than last year. Its income from taxes and miscellaneous sources is estimated at about $80,000 a year. Its debt is now $80,000, and two-thirds of this was made to build a new City Hall, which is only half done. Because the people refused to vote another bond issue to finish it, the San Pedro government used it in its rough condition. It is expected that $10,000 will be used to fit the building for permanent use, and it will be the seat of government for the outer harbor region.

It is believed the territory of both places will more than pay its way under the charter government because the branch system will admit of reduced forces in many ways, at San Pedro surely, and perhaps at Wilmington.

ARRANGE FOR DEPUTIES.

The Treasurer, Tax Collector and City Clerk will be each represented by separate deputies at San Pedro, but one may serve all three at Wilmington. An Assistant City Engineer will probably look after both places, and a deputy street superintendent oversee the same regions. It is also likely that fire and police administrations will be in charge of a captain and a sergeant. San Pedro now has four policemen and Wilmington one—a Town Marshall.

As all the business of both will be done under the methods of the city, the Supply Committee will have a branch, doubtless, at San Pedro, upon which requisition for all supplies will be made. The Auditor does not deem a branch necessary now, as the demands can be transmitted to the departments and reach him through them for examination.

The Board of Health will probably detail an inspector for the district, who will have charge of sanitary matters, and the other special inspectors will visit it from time to time.

It is the purpose to extend all the municipal machinery to the new region, so that when the ordinance is passed by the Council on the 24th inst. the new forces may take hold and exercise authority.

OLD ORDINANCES VITIATED.

With that exercise San Pedro will find all its old ordinances vitiated and those of Los Angeles succeeding them. It will find that more license fees and some higher rates will be required. For instance saloons pay $85 a month under San Pedro's ordinance, but must pay $100 under Los Angeles'. And, if the purpose to increase the license to $150 is carried out by the Council, it will be a further increase, almost double what they pay now. San Pedro had a large commercial license list of its own, but the greater city has a larger one and some of its rates are higher—but this was a dispute settled in the consolidation campaign.

The beneficent "residence district" ordinance is about the only thing San Pedro will evade, as the measure does not affect territory south of Manchester avenue.

ASSIGNED AS PRECINCTS.

The 1500 voters of Wilmington and San Pedro will at once become qualified electors of Los Angeles and will exercise their franchise for the first time at the non-partisan primary election in November. All of them will be eligible as candidates before that election, August 25, and already two—Lewis Hansen and E. D. Seward—are being mentioned as candidates for Council from the harbor district. San Pedro has four precincts and Wilmington one. The Supervisors will be asked to rename them as precincts of the city and they will take the numbers 190 (Wilmington,) and 191, 192, city is 189 and is the last precinct of the last ward—the Ninth.

One of the most important changes due to consolidation will be the necessity of removing one of the police courts now held at the Police Station to the harbor region. The City Attorney regards this as necessary, for in no other way can judicial administration be given to it, as the law does not permit an increase in the number of justices. It is likely the justices will be left to determine which court shall be held there. Incidentally, the change will put F. W. Smith, Recorder of San Pedro, also police judge ex-officio, out of business.

It is also likely that provision will be made to equip a fire company for San Pedro, and arrange a fire limits district. The equipment is now in the hands of a volunteer company.

These are the most important of a multitude of details that the City Attorney will discuss with the officials during the coming week in order to cover all necessities by ordinance when the election has been completed legally by the filing of the results.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

URGE STRONGLY FOR PROBATION.

FRIENDS HOPE FOR CLEMENCY FOR BUSHNELL.

Various Points Presented in Favor of the Man Who Pleaded Guilty to the Charge of Embezzlement of Funds Belonging to the Company Employing Him.

Whether James F. Bushnell, who pleaded guilty to the charge of embezzling the funds of the E. K. Wood Lumber Company, to the amount of about $20,000, is to be given probation or sent to prison, will be determined by Judge Wilbur tomorrow.

A tremendous pressure is being exerted in favor of the accused and unrecorded incidents leading up to the commission of the confessed crime are operating in favor of Bushnell. He is a Chicago man and his father was the junior member of the big lumber firm of Lord & Bushnell of that city. Bushnell is said to belong to an excellent family, and it is stated that his first wrong step was taken not in the idea of spending his money on the race track in the guise of sport, but to recoup losses met in his family affairs.

It is alleged by his friends that he is not a dissipated man in any way, and that wine, women and song have not conspired to his downfall, but, seeing that ends did not meet in the family (his wife not knowing how small his salary was,) he went to the race track in the hope of getting the money that he had begun to take from his employers back again. It was the old story of sending good money after bad, and he was soon so enmeshed that he could not get out.

The family home at Hollywood has been sold, and all of the costly bric-a-brac disposed of to raise money to assist Bushnell in his defense. The wife, by his second marriage, has been at the County Jail every day since his incarceration in January last, and his old mother, aged 82, is waiting at the home for "her Jim," as she calls him, to came back.

It is also alleged that Bushnell has been very easy in his money matters, and protected at least one other man who was short in his accounts with his firm, to the extent of $6000, and that not a cent of the money has been returned. His friends say that if he is allowed to go on probation, a fund of $15,000 has been pledged to allow him to reënter business and get on his feet again. Not only that, but friends have agreed to raise a fund of $10,000, for the purpose of paying a part of his stealings from the lumber company.

On the other hand, it is stated on good authority that if Judge Wilbur exercises the clemency he is allowed to exercise under the law, and orders the release of Bushnell, another complaint will immediately be sworn out against the defendant. The eighteen-year-old son of Bushnell is a graduate of the Hollywood High School and has gone to Berkeley for the purpose of entering the University of California, with a view to fitting himself for a business or professional career. There are many pathetic features about the case, and a great effort will be made to secure a suspension of judgment in his case. Attorney Frank Pratt, who knew Bushnell in Chicago, and was his boyhood friend, will make the appeal in behalf of mercy by the court.

DENIED TO HARKEY.

charred with grand larceny by taking a horse and saddle from one of the livery barns of this city, was fixed yesterday for October 22. An effort was made to set aside the information on the ground that at the preliminary hearing in Justice Rose's court the defendant was not represented by an attorney, but the motion was denied.

The pure food case, involving the constitutionality of the city ordinance regulating the sale of fruits and vegetables in the open market, was postponed for one week, on account of the absence of Deputy District Attorney McCartney, who has charge of the prosecution of such cases. This is an action on appeal from the Police Court, and it is sought to test the new ordinance.

The habeas-corpus case of L. C. Whaley, who is charged with securing money on false pretenses, will be taken up and disposed of tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The habeas-corpus case of Ralph J. Leavitt, who is wanted in the State of Washington on a complaint charging manslaughter, was postponed for one week. Meantime Leavitt is out on bond of $1500.

ASKS COMMISSION.

MINING DEAL OPTION.

The story of the option on a mine in Mojave county, Ariz., is told in an action filed in the Superior Court yesterday, by W. H. Tonkin against S. R. Porter.

It is alleged that in April last the defendant made an agreement with the plaintiff to sell the Gold Road mine for $1,650,000, and to pay the plaintiff a commission of $150,000 if he was able to negotiate the sale. In an agreement made June 10, it was arranged, the petition says, that if Porter obtained an option on the mine, he was to give Tonkin, of the Erkenbrecher syndicate, the first option to purchase, the agreement to expire in fifteen days from that date. If the option was granted to Tonkin then he was to be allowed his commission.

It is further alleged that in April the defendant agreed with the plaintiff to secure and deliver the option of the mine, and assured the plaintiff that he would deliver on June 20. The plaintiff believes that in June last the defendant did secure from the owner of the mine an option authorizing the sale thereof, and has ever since and now holds said option and agreement to sell.

Relying upon the representations of the defendant, the plaintiff and his associates spent about $350 in finding a purchaser for the Gold Road mine at the price and on the terms agreed upon, and it is said they produced a purchaser August 2 last, ready, able, willing and qualified to purchase at the price fixed, $1,650,000, but the defendant refuses to perform his part of the agreement and judgment for $150,000 is asked.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

ALLEGED SLANDER. Angie Barone brought an action in the Superior Court yesterday against F. Arconti and his wife for $5000 damages, on a complaint of slander. It is declared that on the 7th inst the defendants at their home, No. 419 Bauchet street, used vile and opprobrious language toward the plaintiff, and as a result she has been much humiliated.

INCORPORATIONS. Papers for the following incorporations were filed in the office of the County Clerk yesterday: Patten Canal Improvement Company, capital stock $75,000, by George A. Cook, James Patten and John C. Bosch; Peirce Manufacturing Company, capital stock, $15,000, by Paul Peirce, E. B. Bailey, E. T. Peirce, Grove B. Walter and Frank Pratt.

IN JUSTICE'S COURT. In Justice Summerfield's court yesterday, Elias Pena swore out a complaint charging that on the 8th inst, Ramon Sentance made an assault upon him with a deadly weapon. W. B. Morgan, fire, game and fish warden, filed a complaint against Pan W. Brown, R. Kenneth Gordon and Samuel Waterhouse, alleging that on July 5 they built a bonfire in San Gabriel Cañon, contrary to law.

ACTION FOR DAMAGES. The Pacific Electric Railway Company is made defendant in an action brought by H. P. Hoffman in the Superior Court. The petition sets out that April 12 last, while Hoffman and his wife, Alice Hoffman, were traveling in their automobile on the way from Pasadena to Los Angeles, the machine was struck by a traction car of the defendant company, at Bairdstown, and the plaintiff was thrown out and the machine destroyed. Hoffman says he suffered a fractured skull, with jaw and ribs broken, and prays for $41,250

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

Regret Follows "Joy Ride"—Woman Makes Grave Charge Against Negro.

R. J. Austin is in the City Jail awaiting arraignment before Justice Chambers tomorrow on a charge of having taken M. A. Hamburger's automobile for a "joy ride" Friday night.

The machine was taken from East Third street and left in South Pasadena. It was found uninjured and returned to the owner.

The police say Austin declares that he could not resist the temptation to take a ride when he saw the motor car standing by the curb. He has told the officers that he intended returning the machine to the place where he found it. The excuse given for deserting it in the country is that the engine went dead and he was unable to start it.

Woman Alleges Insult.

Alleged use of obscene language to Miss Lillian Packard, who had asked him if he had seen her dog, resulted in James Davis, a negro, being haled before Justice Rose yesterday.

Davis entered a plea of not guilty and his case was set for trial before a jury on October 29. In default of $500 bail he was sent to jail.

The statements charged to Davis are so offensive that he may be severely dealt with if he is found guilty.

Cigar-Man Fined.

Frank Wilson paid $20 in Justice Rose's court yesterday for "moving on" Morris Burke from in front of his cigar stand at No. 246 South Spring street. The formal charge against him was battery.

Wilson had become tired of having Burke hang around his place of business and told him to move on. The latter showed no disposition to go and Wilson struck him in the face.

Gas Officials Accused.

Justice Rose yesterday overruled demurrers to complaints against eight officials and employés of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company. The representatives of the corporation are charged with rebating and raising the price of gas without the consent of the City Council. They will enter pleas Tuesday.

Autoists Fined.

George W. Wood and W. A. Raymaker were fined $25 each by Justice Rose yesterday for having driven their automobiles faster than is permitted by ordinance.

Forfeits Bail.

George Ryden, who got into a little squabble with C. L. Giddings at a cigar stand at No. 119 West First street Friday, failed to appear in Justice Rose's court yesterday to answer to a charge of disturbing the peace. His bail of $10 was forfeited. A similar charge against Giddings was dismissed.

"Bum" Objected to.

M. Nashahara swore to a "John Doe Waiter" complaint charging battery before Justice Rose yesterday. The Japanese declares that a waiter stabbed him in the cheek when he remarked the food brought him in a cheap restaurant was "bum."

Mill Grinds Busily.

Justice Rose disposed of 340 cases in the Police Court last week. This was an unusually large grist of misdemeanors for the summer months, when people are supposed to be exceptionally good.

HOROSCOPE.

Sunday, August 15, 1909.

BY COZETTE.

In the brown bosom of the earth
This day shall ease and joy find birth.

On this, the 227th day of the year, the moon is new and has Saturn in benefic aspect.

The planet, being in trine, loses much of its pernicious power for afflicting those of great wealth and becomes impotent to plague the health of mankind as it does in less favorable positions. It remains, however, antagonistic to those of large fortune and offers its favor to the poor and those who earn their incomes by daily work.

In today's sign he is beneficent toward undertakings by those of resolution, will and steady purpose.

Saturn's best sign in this period is over the open fields, and woods and the waters. He promises health and pleasure from short trips into the country.

The aspect is beneficial for dealings with land owners, architects, builders, surveyors, rural laborers, gardeners, florists, farmers, civil engineers and drivers.

All concerned in any way with metals, minerals, wool, lumber, fruit, vegetables, wheat, corn, hay or other crops, or with outdoor amusements, should find the day a lucky one.

There is a sign that says that from aged lips shall flow wisdom and comfort.

During this day it will be well to be careful in making preparations for beginning anything, however small.

The moon is in a sign that favors the indulgent of friendship and domestic affections.

Those with this birthdate are under a sign that indicates that they may miss success during the twelvemonth, not through lack of ability, but through neglect to shape their methods properly and to make sure of starting right.

Children are born today under a sign that usually gives its subjects a broad and strong social nature with great love of the hearth and the locality where they were born. They may need to be trained to develop their powers of decision and action.

The Irishman Came Back.

A gentleman in Dublin, speaking of the Irish, said that nothing ever satisfied them, and that he was willing to prove his words on a wager that if he should go to the door and call a cab, no matter what fee he would give, the driver would ask for more. The wager was taken for ten pounds sterling. The gentleman called a cab, drove about a quarter of a mile, stepped out, and handed the driver a ten-shilling gold piece, the legal fee being one shilling. Cabby drove off. The gentleman who had taken the wager was exulting in his triumph, when suddenly the cabby returned, and, touching his hat, said: "Please, sir, have ye a durty thre'penny bit about ye? It would be such a pity to break a bright piece of gold like this for a drink!"—[Argonaut.

FANCY SUITINGS NOW $19

TROUSERS REDUCED TO $4.75, $5.75 AND $6.75

This SEMI-ANNUAL CLEARANCE SALE offers a money-saving opportunity to men who appreciate good clothes, and at the same time desire to be economical. Twice a year we hold these sales for a two-fold purpose: First, to reduce our stock of woolens and keep our big force of tailors busy through a season that is ordinarily dull. Second, to offer the inducement of cut prices to attract new customers. It has been our experience that a man who once wears a B. & K. made-to-measure suit will never wear a ready-made suit or be satisfied with inferior tailoring.

Bear in mind that every summer suiting in the house is reduced, and many lines that are suitable for early Fall wear. Why not leave your order tomorrow? Either store.

GREAT COAT OF PAINT PUT ON GAS HOLDER.

Applying of Preserving Mixture to the Outside of the Big Container of Fuel, Recently Finished, Would Have Kept One Man Alone Working for Nearly Two Years.

The painting of the great gas tank, or holder, of the Pacific Gas and Electric Corporation, on East Seventh street, recently, was an accomplishment of some note and attracted the attention of many passers-by while the work was going on. The painters, suspended on the narrow hanging boards near the top, looked like small boys. A little slip or a break in the rope which held the boards would have meant instantaneous death to the workmen, but the job, which required a large force of men and many days, was completed without a single accident.

This tank, or holder, as the gas people call it, is used for containing the gas which is consumed in all parts of the city. It is the second largest tank in the world and when it was built, about three years ago, it was the largest, but since that time a tank has been built in New York which is larger.

The tank is 230 feet high, fifty-six feet higher than the highest building in Los Angeles; 195 feet in diameter, and 612 feet in circumference. If the top, bottom and sides were laid out on the ground it would cover more than four acres. About 2000 tons of steel were used in its building and it has a capacity of 35,092 tons of water, or $72,372,000 gallons, and 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

By way of explanation, the tank is built in six parts, the lower one being filled with water and the five upper sections, or cups, as they are called, with gas. These cups are fitted together like a drinking cup, the topmost one being smaller than the next one.

When there is no gas in the tank these cups slip down until there is only one section, which section is filled with water. As the gas is forced into the tank these cups begin to rise, the gas staying on top of the water, and this pressure of these great heavy cups gives sufficient power to force the gas through the entire city.

The gas is made from petroleum, the oil being heated until the gas passes off into the tank, and the carbon, coal tar, and other by-products, are extracted.

When the tank was built the different parts were painted before being put into place. This summer the tank needed painting and the job was given to the Richard Arenz Company, to scrape off the old paint and rust and give the big tank two coats of paint, the first being red lead and oil and the second graphite.

The job took 717 working days of eight hours; that is, it would have taken one man nearly two years to have painted this tank alone. There were 1485 gallons of paint used, and it cost approximately $5000.

Second Largest Gas Tank in the World.

It has just been painted and the figures are interesting.

SEES THE ERRORS OF ITS POLICY, YES.

[From the Indianapolis News, a pioneer advocate of the Direct Primary.]

We would by no means give aid and comfort to the enemy, and yet when we read the pleas for the direct primary system made by our friends in the East who favor it, we cannot but think that they need some enlightenment. Perhaps the experience of Indianapolis with the reform is peculiar, or it may be that our law is not a good one. But certain it is that those who advocated the direct primary—including the News—are much disappointed in its operation. In other sections it may be different. Possibly, too, there are some reformers who have resolved to stand by the system no matter how unsatisfactorily it works, for there are reformers of that kind. But we remember that the people of Wisconsin, working under a direct primary law, were unable to prevent the return of a "plutocrat" to the United States Senate. Here we brought about the nomination of some good men for county offices a year ago, but we used occasionally to nominate some good men by the old method. Today we have five candidates for Mayor, not one of whom measures up to the standard which it was supposed we should reach under the direct primary. It is admitted on all hands that, if the new machinery is retained, we shall have to do something to limit expenditures or else throw them on the public. For as things now are we have in effect two elections, two campaigns, and as a consequence two large outpourings of money. This of course would be a small price to pay if the results were what it was supposed they would be. But they are not, or at least they have not been so far. The good men who, it was predicted, would "come out," do not do so. The necessity of making two campaigns, of contributing to two campaign funds, and of twice submitting to the importunities of the "heelers," undoubtedly increases the reluctance of representative citizens to offer themselves.

The New York Evening Post ironically says:

"We know, of course, that the direct primary is dead. We know it because we have been told so. No sensible man favors it; no practiced politician will touch it. It is the pariah of politics, etc."

We do not say that the direct primary is dead, but we do say that many men who are not bosses or practical politicians have yet to be convinced that, as at present operated, it has proven an unqualified success. Not only that, but it has, at least as we know it, failed to realize the anticipations of its friends. There are many who are asking whether a boss-controlled convention is the only alternative. To some of us it seems that it might be possible to bring conventions under some sort of legal regulation, and to put primaries for the election of delegates under the general election law. Has the delegate system been fairly tried? Are the evils and abuses of which we complain inherent in it? These questions are pertinent. In conclusion we would say, for the benefit of the Post, that a direct primary, such as we have here, in Tammany-ridden New York, would be a wonderful affair. The fair conclusion is that the reform is still in the experimental stage. In the light of our experience with it our people are disposed to be somewhat skeptical. Including the candidates for council there are seventy-nine names on the primary ballots. And yet out of this material it is impossible for the citizen to find more than three or four candidates for whom he will vote with pleasure, or the least show of enthusiasm. We have not yet reached the millennium by the direct primary route.

DR. HUTCHINSON ON REAL YELLOW PERIL.

In a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post, the real yellow peril is discussed by Woods Hutchinson, A.M., M.D. With him the yellow peril is not our Asiatic friends across the water, whether of China or Japan, but a much nearer and deadlier foe, the streptococcus pyogenes and the staphylococcus pyogenes, commonly known as "pus makers." There is still a third coccus in the group, the staphylococcus pyogenes albus (white,) a harmless "critter" as compared with his more agile and virulent blood relative, known as the golden, or the real yellow peril.

However, it is not proposed in this review of Dr. Hutchinson's tracings of this modern day yellow peril, to follow him through all the details of the surgeon's work in routing the common enemy, because, when conditions arise, such as described by him, the only salvation is to send for a doctor.

Not only do these representatives of the cocci family delight to revel in ill-dressed wounds, but if the way is opened they pass into the body, traveling most commonly through the lymph channels, where they are halted and their destruction attempted by the so-called lymphatic glands. While this process is under way then comes what common humanity knows as the boil, and if the lymphatic glands fail to do their proper work, the peril continues to advance, and that charming product, recognized as the carbuncle, is the result. Or they may content themselves with merely burrowing under the skin, close to the surface, and erysipelas follows. The streptococcus and the staphylococcus may quarter themselves in the little close-fitting pouch surrounding the root of a hair, after which they get malignantly busy. They are indifferent where this particular close-fitting pouch is situated, and so it is that we have boils appearing always where least expected, and never where they are welcome.

Now that it is known that the unspeakable streptococcus pyogenes is an active factor in the development of a boil, it is well also to know that tradition has been turned topsy-turvy in methods of treatment, and that the old-fashioned poultice which mother made, and which always eased the pain and aided in bringing the trouble to a "head," is one of the best fertilizers known for this particular microbe. He simply gloats in the warmth of the outward application, and his activity increases with each degree of heat as the poultice is applied. The moist heat, of course, mitigates the pain, but it marvelously encourages the growth of pus organisms. Not only this, the poultice softens up the surrounding skin, opening wide the mouth of the glands, so that, as soon as the boil "breaks," the streptococci begin to pour out, and, under the moist protecting surface of the poultice find a new refuge in the gaping mouth of another gland. Then there is another boil in addition to the one poulticed, and so ad infinitum, till the streptococcus is weary of the harvest or the victim is no more.

THE SHORTEST PLAY.

A Distinction That Is Said to Belong to "Rosmunde," a Five-Act "Tragedy."

[New York Tribune:] In a controversy as to the shortest play, Prof. Milion Begavic says in an article recently published in Berlin that none of the plays mentioned were really the shortest, as that distinction belonged to Giovanni Venture's "tragedy" in five acts entitled "Rosmunde." This is the play:

Characters — King Albion, Rosmunde, daughter of King Kunsmond, consort of King Albion; Perideus, a slave.

ACT I.

Albion (hands Rosmunde a skull filled with wine:) Drink, it is the skull of thy father!

Rosmunde (horrified:) Ah!

Albion: I command you.

Rosmunde (drinks and hisses:) Woe unto thee!

ACT II.

Albion (smiling sardonically:) Sad?

Rosmunde: Could I be otherwise?

Albion: Forget!

Rosmunde: Begone!

Albion: You hate me?

Rosmunde (ironically:) How could I?

ACT III.

Rosmunde (looking at a small dagger, calls:) Slave!

Perideus (approaches and kneels at her feet:) My queen!

Rosmunde (passionately:) I love you!

Perideus: Oh, heaven!

Rosmunde: Come with me.

(Exit both, embracing.)

ACT IV.

(The king's antechamber.)

Rosmunde hands dagger to Perideus:) Go—kill him!

Perideus (irresolutely:) The king?

Rosmunde: Your rival.

Perideus (furiously:) Ha! He shall die.

(Exit into king's bedchamber.)

ACT V.

Albion (in muffled tones from within:) Help!

Rosmunde (listening anxiously:) Die!

Perideus (rushes forth brandishing bloody dagger:) Dead!

Rosmunde (snatches the weapon, holds it on high:) Now, father, you may drink!

(Curtain.)

BIDS SOUGHT BY RAILWAY.

ARIZONA AND CALIFORNIA LINE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX, Aug. 10.—Bids for the construction of the grade of the western end of the Arizona & California Railroad have just been called for by Gen. Manager Drake of the Santa Fé, Prescott & Phoenix Railroad system, under whom the road will be built. The work is all light in character, save for a short stretch near the Colorado River. Yet to be constructed are ninety miles of road, between the western end of the Santa Fé's million-dollar bridge at Parker and the main-line point of Bengal, which is to succeed Ash Fork as the junction where all western traffic will be diverted into Santa Fé territory in Central Arizona, including Phoenix. The new road will be about as short as the Southern Pacific between Phoenix and Los Angeles, between which cities fast passenger service will be started as soon as the new connection is finished. At present the Southern Pacific has almost a monopoly of the Southern Arizona passenger traffic into Southern California. It is expected that work on the Bengal extension will be commenced during September and that it will be completed by March 1.

Decided ill-feeling exists between the Arizona Railroad Commission and the Maricopa County Commercial Club, though both organizations have similar reasons for existence—the regulation and reduction of railroad rates affecting the mercantile interests of the Territory. Secretary Jones of the club has published statements that indicate his belief that the commission is not working for the best interests of the public, an assumption vigorously denied by Secretary Bicknell of the commission, who states that the work of the commission during the brief period of its existence has been toward the lowering of railroad rates, and that he stands ready to work at all times in harmony with the club.

It is said that, under the late reduction in express rates directed by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the benefit of Phoenix shippers, the freight rates to a number of southwestern points from this city are no lower than the express tariff. On fruit shipments to Southern Arizona towns the new tariff makes the large saving of a cent a pound, giving the local shipper a marked advantage over Los Angeles produce dealers.

IRRIGATION PROJECT.

Another large irrigation enterprise has been started in the northwestern part of the Salt River Valley, within the section drained by the Lower Agua Fria River, where about 7000 acres of fine land are to be irrigated by a canal from the Agua Fria and from wells, which will be relied upon during the periods when the river bed is dry. A sheet piling dam, 1700 feet long, is to be built across the channel, raising the underflow. The water is of exceptional quality, almost devoid of salts, it having been proposed at one time to pipe it to Phoenix for domestic and steam uses. The land to be reclaimed is considered especially valuable for citrus fruits. The main promoter of the enterprise is R. P. Davie, manager of the Glendale beet sugar factory, whose company has "scripped" several thousand acres along the Agua Fria, near the new town of Marinette, which is to be laid off two and a half miles northwest of Peoria.

The Territorial Board of Control has taken action on the good roads law of the last Legislature and has directed the construction of two Territorial highways on routes yet to be exactly determined. One road shall start at or near Tucson and shall pass through Pima, Pinal, Maricopa, Yavapai and Coconino counties to a point on the Grand Cañon. The second line is to begin at Yuma and is to pass through the counties of Yuma, Maricopa, Gila, Graham and Cochise to Douglas, in the southeastern part of the Territory. It is assumed that the roads will cross at Phoenix, from which the second road will be run over the Roosevelt turnpike to Globe.

Yesterday an extremely heavy rain fell over Central Arizona, including Phoenix, quickly raising the volume of all the streams and insuring an ample supply of water for irrigation. Large breaks were made in the banks of the Arizona canal above Phoenix by flood waters from the hills. Nearly five feet of water poured over the lower part of the uncompleted Roosevelt dam.

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided adversely the appeal of J. P. Storm, convicted in Arizona of robbing the county of Yavapai while serving as County Treasurer. He was found tied and gagged in the treasury vault, from which $15,000 in cash was missing. His story of masked robbers was not believed by a trial jury.

Frank Thompson of the land office firm of Hildreth & Thompson, who disappeared a month ago with $6000 in land scrip and $700 in coin, has been returned from Denver, where he had been arrested. It is a clear case of too much liquor, the man's mind being almost a blank because of over-indulgence.

MOSQUITO FIGHT.

Bitter jealousy has become apparent between the towns of Needles, Cal., and Parker, Ariz., both similarly situated on the Colorado River, and mutually accused of being mosquito infested. Needles has printed a story that Parker is in the grip of a typhoid epidemic. Parker retaliates by printing affidavits that the only case of typhoid ever known in th. burg was imported from Needles, and was assisted to recovery by the marvelous Arizona air.

Next Saturday the Arizona rifle team will leave Fort Huachuca to enter in the national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. The team, all save one, are attached to the First Infantry, N. G. A. They include: Adjt.-Gen. L. W. Coggins, Maj. Carl T. Hayden, Capts. E. P. Grinstead, H. G. Coykendall, George Hochderffer and William H. Woolf, First Lieuts. E. W. Hill and C. W. Harris, Second Lieuts. L. D. La Tourette, Chris Sigala and Alma L. Jones, Sergts. T. L. Edens, Fred Fogal, C. J. Nickell and G. W. Peterson, Corp. J. D. McNabb. Capt. Frank T. Alkire, commissary First Infantry, will act as team captain.

A few days ago, seeking a cool drink from the old oaken bucket in the well of the date farm below Tempe, F. H. Simmons for a moment thought himself a victim of unwise potations, for in the bucket he drew up a lively rattlesnake. But the snake was real and Simmons has the rattles to prove his tale.

Under the direction of Assistant Superintendent H. B. Hall, the Tempe postoffice has been given enlarged quarters, with new and modern fixtures.

The remaining steel spans of the old Phoenix and Eastern Railroad bridge at Tempe are being removed. The structure has been unused since two of its spans were lost, six years ago, by the sinking of one of the north side concrete piers. There is no longer necessity for the bridge, as the Southern Pacific, which later bought the Phoenix and Eastern, has its own steel bridge across Salt River at Tempe.

F. J. Sullivan of Trimble, Tenn., has been appointed principal of the Tempe public school.

Among late marriages was the union of Miles Bobst and Miss Ethel L. Hoefer. Both are natives of San Luis Obispo, Cal., but they had never met before coming to Phoenix several years ago.

The private car "Cypress" was brought to Phoenix Saturday from Los Angeles, bringing a party of stockholders in the Ray Consolidated Mining Company, on the way to Kelvin and Ray, where an immense amount of work is being done by the corporation. In the party were General Manager R. E. Wells of the Salt Lake Railroad system, W. P. Dunham and S. W. Mudd of Los Angeles, D. C. Jackling of Salt Lake and James Smith of England.

SYSTEMATIC BARBERING.

A Chicago Shop Which Is Always Busy and No Customer Has to Wait His Turn.

What do you think of a barber shop where from opening until closing time the barber always has a "next" ready to step into the chair, and where "next" never has to wait his turn, but always reaches the shop just in time to be served? asks the Chicago Tribune.

There is at least one shop of this kind in Chicago. It is one of the up-to-date features of a big West Side plant and is for the convenience of the firm's officials and heads of departments.

The barber shop opens the same time as the other departments of the house and closes when they do, and from opening until closing time a customer always is being served. No waiting on the part of the customer and no idle time for the barber, unless he wishes to "take it easy" for awhile. The customers get first-class service for the usual prices charged for such, and the barber keeps all the money he takes in. The shop is equipped in the best style and the barber and porter are in the happy position of being able to regulate, absolutely, the amount of business they will do each day.

When the customer in the chair is about finished the porter telephones to another, who usually comes from his department at once, or if he is not able to get away just then, or is not desirous of having any work done that day, the barber simply telephones to some one else. Getting customers is the least of his troubles.

The privilege is not lightly valued by any who enjoys it, and, as a rule, the first official act of a young man promoted to the management of any department is to go to the cashier's office and buy a barber shop ticket. These tickets are numbered consecutively, and at the end of a half year the barber is paid the difference between the total of the stated monthly sums which he draws regularly and the total sale of tickets for the six months. The firm pays all the incidental expenses of the shop.

New Cause for Appendicitis.

Sir William Bull writes to the papers to suggest that appendicitis arises from our habit of sharpening knives. "The head of every family invariably sharpens his carving knife as he stands before the joint. This means a shower of microscopic steel shavings on the meat.' Appendicitis has increased enormously of late years. Perhaps our grandfathers always used blunt knives or dissected the joint in ways of which polite society has kept no record.—[Westminster Gazette.

MINES AND MINING—Activities in the Ore Districts of the Great Southwes

CALIFORNIA.

AMADOR COMES TO THE FRONT.

LOS ANGELES MONEY INVESTS ON MOTHER LODE.

Big Strike at the South Eureka Draws Attention of Miners All Over the West—Sierra Pushing Ahead and Shasta Is Good—Los Angelenos in Oregon.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) Aug. 13.—The famous old Mother Lode county of Amador is coming to the front with a rush, and capital is flowing in from the East and South. Many people from Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Diego and other cities south of the Tehachepi are becoming heavily interested and in many instances it is due to their efforts that many of the old mines are again entering the list of active producers.

The great strike recently made at the South Eureka continues to hold the attention of mining men throughout the West, and every day adds to the value and extent of the big ore body on the 2100 level. According to latest advices the ledge is eighteen feet wide with the ore running into high-grade values. The strike is said to be the most important ever made in the famous property, and holders who a few weeks ago would have cheerfully sold for 10 cents per share, are refusing $1.

At the Kennedy the ore body is showing splendidly in the lower levels and the 100-stamp mill is running at full capacity. Rich ore is coming from below the 3000 level and the vein is showing all its original strength as the shaft goes to greater depth. A new cable, 3650 feet long, was placed in the main shaft last week, and the old one removed to the north shaft.

The Bunker Hill paid two dividends of 5 cents each on its capital stock in June, a total of $12,000. The mine is producing at the rate of $21,000 per month, with twenty stamps in commission. A surplus of $35,850.37 remains in the treasury.

The Kennedy Extension has commenced repairing the old shaft and will sink it deeper. It is down 1000 feet and discloses good ore. At the Amador Queen the Habbric-Crocker-Holts lease is extracting large quantities of $40 ore and sending it to the Selby smelter. At the Argonaut a large force of men are working and the mill is running on good-grade ore from the lower levels. There have been several reports of impending strikes by miners at the Melones mine, but late advices from the property state that there is no cause for alarm.

SIERRA COUNTY.

Sierra county continues one of the most active mining sections in California, with Alleghany, Forest and Sierra City the principal points of interest. At the Pacific mine, near Downieville, which is being operated by George Wingfield of Nevada, a large force of men have been put to work driving the main tunnel ahead, and prospecting at several points. The men are paid $4 per day of eight hours, the highest wages paid in Sierra county for a long time. M. E. Ish, M. Camp and other prominent Goldfield operators have secured a number of properties at different points and are arranging for extensive work. They pronounce Sierra county one of the most promising fields they have ever seen, and predict that the next two years will see this section among the most productive gold regions in the West.

A new auto passenger service has been installed between Nevada City and Sierra City and will greatly facilitate rapid transportation between these points. At Forest a dozen Los Angeles companies are pushing extensive work on their holdings and developing several promising mines.

At Alleghany the Twenty-One continues to hold the center of attention by reason of the rich strike recently made in the lower workings. The ten-inch vein continues to hold out splendidly and large quantities of bonanza ore are being extracted. The adit is being pushed steadily ahead, while considerable cross-cutting and other developments have been commenced.

The Red Star adit is expected to break into the Tightner before the end of the week. The new mill is about to commence its initial run on a quantity of rich ore. The Rainbow mill is running steadily and the cleanup for August promises to be the largest in the history of the property. At the Tightner the lower adit is still in hard rock with indications that the big ledge is near at hand.

Nothing new has developed in the case of the Sixteen-to-One and Bonanza King mines. The disastrous litigation has tied up both of these properties completely and there now appears little likelihood of an early settlement, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. Both sides are preparing for a determined legal battle and the outlook for an early resumption of activities is anything but encouraging.

SHASTA COUNTY.

The Shasta Copper Belt continues to be the scene of renewed activity and most of the big companies are arranging for work on a largely augmented scale. The Balaklala Consolidated is operating two blast furnaces and it is believed that the third will be in commission before the end of the year. The company is experimenting with a bag house in an endeavor to reach a satisfactory solution of the fume annoyance. The excavation for the new ore bins at the Mammoth smelter has been completed and the foundations are being placed. The company is working a large force at its mines and four furnaces are in commission. The electric iron furnace at Heroult is idle pending some changes to the plant, and it is reported that the plant will start at full capacity early in the fall.

The Lower Springs gold district, a few miles out of Redding, is about to enter upon an active productive period. The Gold Leaf narrow gauge railroad has been completed and the shipping of ore to the smelter will shortly begin. Small gold mines are being operated all over the county as the result of the increasing demand for fluxing ores by the big copper smelters. The Midas mine is installing a new electric generator to furnish lights and power and is arranging for operations on a largely increased scale. Much work is going on at the Gold Hill ledge and considerable rich quartz is being taken out. At the Milk Maid ore running $100 to $15,000 per ton is being extracted. At the Franklin a four-foot vein of $60 ore is receiving attention. The Western Exploitation Company owns the property and is pushing vigorous work.

ANGELENOS IN OREGON.

Just across the State line in Oregon, Los Angeles people are operating a number of placer and quartz properties in the Galice, Waldo and nearby districts with good results. They have obtained control of several of the best mines in the State and are pushing work comprehensively. It is said that fully $500,000 was obtained from the placers alone by Los Angeles operators during the season recently closed.

Advices from New York state that the directors of the Greenwater-Death Valley Company have decided to continue work at the property and push the shaft to the 2000-foot point. The shaft is now down 1500 feet with a large body of low-grade copper ore developed to some extent. Many of the directors still believe that the mine will ultimately develop into a valuable producer and favor continued developments.

WICKENBURG'S FREE GOLD.

GREAT PLACER FIELDS ALONG THE HASSAYAMPA.

Bradshaw Range Also Storehouse of Precious Metals—Black Rock and Bonanza—Humboldt Smelter First Shown Use of Crude Oil as Fuel—Rigby Smelter May Open.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Aug. 12.—In the early days of mining in Central Arizona immense values in free gold were brought into Wickenburg from quartz ledges near by, and millions of dollars were secured in the operation of scores of rude arrastras along the Hassayampa River, where the gold was roughly separated. This field undoubtedly was the richest ever known in the Southwest.

The finding of a shallow pocket of gold-speckled quartz near Salome a few months ago was only typical of the region, best known to miners as one which had produced such mines as the Vulture and Harqua Hala, and where placer ground is to be found in almost every dry creek bed. It is true that gold in baser ores has been found there in such mines as the Congress and Octave, and that copper is present also in large ledges, but the district tributary to Wickenburg is best known for its free gold surface mines. Far more than the usual number of "lost mine" tales are to be heard in the town, the most notable being of the "Dutchman" and "Nigger Ben" workings.

The Rich Hill diggings to the northward were the richest ever found in Arizona. Below them, along the Hassayampa, are still the greatest placer fields of the Southwest, producing, after nearly fifty years of washing, with great bars that will be washed by the use of machinery and hydraulic apparatus that are now being put in place by the liberal use of capital.

The Bradshaw Mountain Range, to the northward, is a tremendous storehouse of precious metals. It would seem that the southern edge of the range had been ground away by the elements and that mineral wealth had thus been concentrated in the lower-lying ground along the Hassayampa.

One of the most notable of the old mines near Wickenburg was one owned and crudely worked by an Indian named Vagas. It lies ten miles east of the town, to which the ore was packed on burros to be reduced in arrastras. The property, embracing ten claims, is now owned by the Indian Chief Mining Company, which is preparing to open it by a system of tunnels, as the main veins are deeply cut by gulches. There are three ledges, exposed for 6000 feet of length, with milling ore running ten feet thick and averaging over $8 to the ton in gold, besides value in lead carbonates and in copper. Development of the property is under charge of Herbert Strickland, an English expert, who has had long experience in the district.

In Black Rock district the Arizona Copper Belt Company is building a ten-stamp mill below the collar of a 200-foot shaft that has cut a fine body of ore running high in gold values. Adjoining is the Monte Cristo property, wherein, at the depth of 176 feet, has been found a four-inch vein that in places seems almost pure silver. The chief stockholder in the Monte Cristo is Ezra Thayer, a Phoenix merchant.

A new camp, named Bonanza, has been started at the foot of Rich Hill, only about a mile distant from Octave. In the diggings near by about fifty men are working, with rich returns. One of them, as a day's work lately, washed out a nugget worth $23, besides $12 in dust. Several dry washers are to be installed on the ground.

HUMBOLDT SMELTER.

Largely through the efforts of Frank M. Murphy the financial difficulties of the Humboldt smelter have about all been cleared away and the great plant will soon be in condition for resumption of work. W. H. Bennetts of Tacoma, Wash., an experienced smelter builder and operator, has been appointed manager and is already on the ground, overseeing the improvements and additions now under way. The plant was far from complete when operated and therefore could not handle ore as cheaply as will be done in the future. Yet it is told that in the plant first was demonstrated the successful use of oil as fuel in reverberatory furnaces, the former manager, C. E. Finney, also being credited with several very important improvements in the reverberatory furnace system of treating ores. Success also is said to have attended Mr. Finney's scheme for saving the relining of converter shells. He simply used a bottom layer of raw silicious ore, upon which was poured the matte from the furnaces.

OLD RIGBY WORKS.

A number of Mayer business men have concluded to purchase the old smelter of the Rigby company at that place, a plant where success is said to have been had with a new process for volatilizing and precipitating metallic values in the local sulphuretic ores. But, whatever the degree of success in the experiment, the plant has been closed for months. Beside the furnace in place it is proposed to place a standard type of lead furnace, with capacity for 100 tons a day, subscriptions of $10,000 having been made for the purpose. The district around Mayer can readily keep the new stack working at full capacity.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The well-known Glandstone mine in McCabe district has been taken over and will be operated by the Ideal Mining Company. The combined property is considered one of the most important in Northern Arizona.

Shipments of high-grade concentrates again are being made from the Old Cash mine on the Hassayampa, Prescott being the railroad point.

It has been found necessary to rebuild the foundations of the new Lane mill of the Arizona Copper-Gold Company in Cherry Creek district. A short trial run of the mill resulted in a clean-up of $500 in gold and a couple of tons of very high-grade concentrates.

The Summit claim, owned by J. E. Kelly, is making a showing as one of the most remarkable silver mines around Prescott. The mine is on the Iron Springs divide, near the Derby mine, a property controlled by Territorial Secretary George U. Young. The Summit has a vein only four inches wide, but it carries 414 ounces of silver to the ton. Shipments made to smelter have netted over $100 a ton.

A winze in the Tom Reed mine, sunk from the 250-foot level, has been in solid ore for about seventy feet, ore averaging about $200 to the ton in gold. Water in unexpected quantity, flowing more than 70,000 gallons a day, has been encountered, and stronger pumps must be secured. This water was found in running a crosscut to the vein on the 250-foot level of the 400-foot main shaft, on which sinking has had to be suspended. President Charles Grimes of Pasadena is on the ground attending to construction work on the company's new mill.

NEVADA.

DELEGATIONS TO CONGRESS.

THOMAS F. COLE WILL BRING A LARGE PARTY.

Los Angeles Will Have Between Two and Three Hundred Prominent Mining Men to Go from Here by a Special Train—Cananea and Arizona Will Be Represented.

From all indications Goldfield will be headquarters for the time the American Mining Congress is in session, of some of the brightest luminaries in the mining world.

Reservations have been made for a large party headed by Thomas F. Cole, the copper magnate, and these will arrive at Goldfield in a special train prior to the meeting.

Arizona will send a delegation, including prominent Phelps-Dodge, Calumet and Arizona, Old Dominion and Shattuck-Denn, officials and other notables from various sections of the country will attend.

Cananea will have a good representation, according to Sonora mining men in the city. Los Angeles will send at least 200—possibly 300 mining men and friends. A special will be arranged to carry this delegation of boosters.

Globe men say that camp will have a full representation and former Senator Clark and Senator Nixon with other well known figures in western mining will attend.

SUNNY JIM DISTRICT.

The Sunny Jim district, between Sweetwater and Masonic, is the latest to furnish a shipping gold mine to the rapidly growing list of Nevada. The property is the Sunny Jim, recently acquired by the United Gold Corporation. Several members of the company made a trip down there the early part of the week, to look over the ground, and particularly to inspect a thirty-foot vein of free-milling ore to which a second mill run had given a value of $120 to the ton; the first was $60.60. Additional work by the miners had established the width of the vein to be forty-nine feet, so the officers decided then and there that such a whale should begin spouting at once. In less than a half hour 500 pounds were picked down and sacked, stowed away in the motor car by which the party had come down, and that quantity carried to Carson City and expressed to California for treatment. Orders were also left to put a force of miners to work to break down twenty-five tons a day, and to continue this volume of shipment until the first unit of the corporation's mill shall be installed. Plans are being drawn for the latter and it is possible that in the sixty days it will be in operation. Water and fuel are plentiful near the corporation's property.

The ore lies in a porphyry formation, and this vein's values lie in a porphyritic quartz heavily impregnated with oxide of iron. Three other veins, ranging from eighteen inches to forty-five feet are on the property which will be more fully developed later.

ELECTRIC POWER.

The Walker River Electric Company has had a force of surveyors in the field this week locating reservoir sites and the line for the canal between Bridgeport, Cal., and Sweetwater, Nev. Two reservoir sites have been practically decided on; one north of Bridgeport requiring a dam but fifty feet wide to empound water over an area seven miles long and twelve miles wide, another, just above the Conway ranch, will require a dam seventy-five feet wide and will back the water up four miles. Construction will soon be inaugurated, as there is quite a demand for electricity in the territory bounded by Bodie, Sweetwater, Hawthorne and Aurora, the territory the company intends to supply. One company, the United Gold Corporation, operating in the Sunny Jim mining district, is the first to enter into a contract.

OPENS RICH ORE.

The Comstock Merrimac mine, near Virginia City, controlled by the Broken Hills Mining Company, of Goldfield, is preparing to ship from the bonanza shoot recently opened. One foot runs close to $400 per ton and the average will go above $100. The lower grade streak is quite large.

Development has been under way for several months. Selected samples have shown values as high as $3000 and systematic mine sampling discloses an average that is good. Ore is free milling with values sufficient to make a good smelting proposition.

The properties are ten miles from Apacha, the latter thirteen miles from Hazen.

LETS CONTRACT.

W. P. Garrison of Pasadena has let contract for sinking another hundred feet on the Garrison lease, Atlanta ground. Machinery will be at once installed and the shaft sent down as quickly as possible. A crosscut will be driven from the shaft to open the ledge struck some time ago in the crosscut from the 450 level.

Sullivan and Patterson have acquired an interest in the St. Ives lease and have started work on the main shaft to get under the ore opened in the other workings.

The Goldfield Annex lease on the Polaverde has a shaft down 340 feet and will continue to 1000. Ten men are working. Some ore has been shipped. When 1000 feet is reached in the shaft crosscutting and drifting will be resorted to.

Trade That Pays.

Young men to learn to operate the linotype machine; a good trade that pays above the average. The Mergenthaler Linotype Company is installing over 100 linotype machines per month. That means that so many positions to be filled at good wages.

The Los Angeles Times has installed a large auxiliary plant and has placed in charge an expert machinist and operator, making it possible for students who so desire to learn either trade (linotype machinist or operator,) in shortest possible time, in 6 weeks' course, 8 hours per day or night, $50. THE TIMES-MIRROR COMPANY, Phone Main 5[illegible] and ask for manager of the Linotype School.

Redondo, Hermosa and Manhattan Special Paper Service.

The Times has inaugurated a special motor service to the above beaches, making it possible for the agent in each place to deliver the paper to patrons as early as the most exacting could wish. Patrons in either place not receiving an early morning delivery service will confer a favor by promptly advising the publishers of the fact.

ARIZPE MAKES STEADY GAINS.

CALUMET AND ARIZONA'S BIG DENOUNCEMENT.

Over One Thousand Pertenencias in Greatest Location in Sonora, Not Excepting Cananea — Washington Properties Show Well—Railroad and Other Things.

Mining is on a boom in the Arizpe district, Sonora, according to Robert Graham, a mining man of Huepac, who is staying in the city for a few days.

The Washington, one of the big properties of the district, is making a great record, the work of the past few weeks showing way above the average as to extent of ore bodies and values. Only 800 feet of work has been done and some 700,000 tons of 6 per cent. copper has been developed. The Washington management has taken over several of the adjoining properties paying approximately $500,000 for the claims taken over.

The Calumet and Arizona, which recently purchased the San Felipe mines on the opposite side of the Sonora River from the Washington, has just denounced 1073 pertenencias of mineral ground. This is the largest denouncement, not excepting Cananea, made in the State and makes this the biggest copper showing in the district. It should make Arizpe one of the greatest of the Sonora camps.

Up the Sonora River development is active. At El Carmen, Davacanora and Las Chispas some good showings have been made. The last named has just completed an aërial tramway to convey ore to the top of the mountain and wood on the return trip. This will greatly reduce operating expense, a saving of at least one-third being secured.

A survey is being made for a railroad from the Seymour concession, which terminates at Ures up the Sonora River to Sinequepa. The Calumet and Arizona is reported to be looking for a smelter site in that immediate vicinity.

South of Huepac development is showing exceptionally good conditions. On the east side of the river Los Angeles people, headed by H. L. Lindsley, are developing a group of claims with good results. A valuable copper deposit is being opened. This bids fair to equal any discovered in the district.

In the Cerro Tisnado district considerable prospecting is going on in close proximity to the railroad up the Sonora River.

Mr. Graham states that aside from the mining activity Sonora is showing a marked improvement in every way. Real agricultural land is becoming constantly in demand and several deals of importance have lately been consummated. Mining men complain that they are forced to import foodstuffs, lards, meats and forage from Sinaloa and other points when in the immediate vicinity land suitable for the raising of grains and the fattening of stock are available at comparatively cheap prices for every purpose. There is a great opportunity for the farmer and stockraiser and the establishment of a wood farm near Arizpe would be self-sustaining from the start and would enable that camp to secure supplies near home instead of importing from distant places.

CLOSEST GOLD CAMP GREAT.

GOLD ROAD, TOM REED AND FEW OTHERS IN MOHAVE.

Historical Sketch of San Francisco District Where Wealth Is Still Being Produced—Alaskan Pioneer and Millionaire Bonds the Old Rattan Mine.

One of Arizona's greatest gold sections is the San Francisco mining district in northern Mohave county, right at Los Angeles' door, just across the Colorado River from Needles.

Back in the '70's the soldiers at Fort Mohave and other prospectors washed lots of placer gold when the spring freshets brought water down Silver Creek, Snow Ball Wash and Thirty-fifth Parallel Creek. One of their old rockers was recently found buried at the Pioneer mine in Snow Ball Wash.

Following this period, "Old Man" Hardy built the first mill on the Colorado River at Hardyville, the trading point for Silver Creek, and took several hundred thousand dollars from the old Hardy mine. The Moss mine, discovered right after this, produced in similar amounts, and then the camp became dormant until a white man and a negro found the Snow Ball, now controlled by the Pioneer Consolidated Mines Company.

GOLD ROAD FOUND.

Later, Jose Herrera discovered the Gold Road mine. Henry Lovin, a millionaire merchant of Mohave county, was sheriff and gave Herrera a $35 grub-stake. The two sold their find to a Mr. Burkhardt of Los Angeles, who sold it to Posey and Baley, also of Los Angeles. They formed the Gold Road Mining and Exploration Company and interested French capital. To date the Gold Road has produced $2,000,000 in gold bullion; it has $5,000,000 in reserve and is constructing a modern 200-ton stamp mill and cyanide plant to be in full operation by October 15.

The Tom Reed has paid more dividends than any other property in the district and has millions in sight, in reserve and in the mine. The new mill, hoisting plant, etc., will be running by September 15.

The old Rattan mine, recently bonded by Jack Leedy, who made millions in the Nome, Alaska, placer fields, where he and his wife were among the very first pioneers, has opened a shoot, of which bucket samples, from top to bottom of a shaft 100 feet deep, average $23.97 gold.

The Pioneer Consolidated, which has a lease and option on the German-American and owns the Minneapolis and Nellie groups, is sinking on the Commission vein and on an entirely new ore, averaging $20 a ton. This company has also opened the Pioneer mine and has one of the largest, strongest and best-defined shoots in the districts and one that its owners think may rival the Gold Road's.

The Carter Gold Mines Company, recently incorporated on the Carter group, has just installed a new hoist and is in high-grade ore.

The Treasury Key Company is working two shifts, sinking shafts on high-grade ore.

H. G. Schader, United States Mineral Surveyor and superintendent of the Pioneer Consolidated, has contracts for the patent surveys on the Hidden Treasure Extension, the Orion Mines Company's holdings, the Gold Road's unpatented ground and Henry Lovin's Red Tip claim. The Woods Investment Company of Colorado will also patent all the Tom Reed Extension claims.

The Desert Power & Water Company is delivering power from its Kingman plant for the Gold Road's compressor and hoist and will soon be distributing "juice" to all mines in the district.

RICH PLACERS.

Besides the quartz mines, all within an area of six miles by three miles, dry placer ground is found in all ravines, gulches and washes.

Jim Shorty cleans up $5 to $20 a day with a crude dry washer. Attracted by this, a Mr. Sullivan, a dry washer expert, has leased the Pioneer Consolidated's Minneapolis ground and is successfully prospecting for placers. Mr. Sullivan is the inventor of a dry washer used by him very successfully in New Mexico and Colorado. Rich placer ground is known to exist between the Pioneer and the Colorado River and, if it is successfully handled by this process, quite a stir may be created in placer mining. Some even think this Colorado River farming land may become as valuable for gold as that at Oroville.

The Eaves Engineering Company of Los Angeles is preparing to reclaim rich agricultural land on the Colorado River, between the mesa and the river, by dykes and is surveying for a standard-gauge railroad from the Santa Fé main line to the mines and to this farming land.

WEATHER NO CHECK.

DEVELOPMENT IN TERRITORY.

BOSTON SYNDICATE BUYS IN MIAMI DISTRICT.

Barney Group Is Sold to Them and They Will Spend Quarter Million for Developing Property—Former Work Was Mostly Prospecting. In Other Arizona Camps.

The Barney group of twenty-eight claims in the Miami district near Globe, Ariz., has been sold by the Coplens of Globe to a Boston syndicate, in which are the Dougherty estate, P. A. Readon, H. E. Kingston, W. A. Twomby and Frey Bros., Bostonians of means. The properties are considered as promising as any in the camp. They are west of the Miami and between the Keystone and Williamson and Newman groups.

The consideration has not been disclosed, but is asserted to run into six figures. Purchasers will spend a quarter of a million, according to Globe mining men in the city, on development.

Development has been largely prospecting. A double compartment shaft is down 112 feet. It is thought the group carries the same bodies as the Miami and Inspiration. Work will start September 15 on the Barney shaft, which will be deepened to 600 feet at once. Three shifts will be employed. At the last named depth crosscutting north and south will be started and a second shaft sunk that will later be connected with the first.

Charles Garenson, formerly with the Old Dominion, will be in charge.

A holding company will be formed and many improvements of a permanent character are planned, the intention being to make this one of the biggest properties operating in the Globe country.

Courtland Booming.

With two lines of railroad affording outlet for ore, Courtland is commencing to boom, and the camp, known in early days as Leadville, has again entered the ranks of large producers. Regular shipments have been started from the Humboldt mine of the Great Western and the dump ore from the Mary of the same company will shortly be moved. Others are expected to shortly follow suit and a period of great activity is predicted.

From the Humbolt a quarter of a million has been taken and some exceptionally good ore has been opened in a drift which has not been developed, but will be exploited thoroughly. Machinery is being installed and the joint Humboldt-Mary power plant is well under way. Upon these will depend the extent of the tonnage shipped.

The Calumet and Arizona is sinking on the Germania and is installing another boiler and additional pumps.

Grading is to be rushed on the branch of the Mexico and Colorado from Leadville Cañon switch to the Mary mine and when this is completed shipments will be started from the accumulated dump ore.

Mining men say 1500 tons daily can be shipped from Courtland within a comparatively short time. This is doubtless a trifle strong.

News from Bouse.

Despite the hot weather mining has suffered no cessation in the Bill Williams Fork country, over on the Colorado River, according to Dr. R. J. McAdory, who is visiting in Los Angeles.

Dr. McAdory makes his home at Bouse and Swansea and reports exceptionally active conditions.

The Planet, recently taken over by the Lewisohns, is to be developed by the General Development Company of New York, the holding company to be known as the Planet Development Company. Lewis A. Wright, general field engineer of the New York company, and A. P. Upham, general superintendent of mines, have been at Bouse for some time arranging to establish a camp and put men at work. It will be something like four weeks before the camp is laid out and the company ready to operate.

There is a million and a half tons of ore necessary for Bessemer steel making in sight and this will be shipped to Pueblo, Colo. The outlet is roundabout at present and there is a rumor in camp that the Lewisohns will build a road from Parner to the Planet, thence through Yucca to Kingman, to connect with the main line, affording a shorter route to the Pueblo iron works for this ore.

Three different ledges aggregating seventy-two feet, have been developed on the Planet averaging about 64.

Th Clara Consolidated has completed the grade on the Bouse-Swansea line for nine miles. About fifty teams and sixty or seventy men are employed. This construction is from the Bouse and is making that little town rather lively. No steel has been laid.

Considerable prospecting is going on. Prospectors fear a great rush this fall and are getting in all possible work while there is not much competition. G. F. McVeigh, a former representative of the Lewisohns, and, asserted to be acting for them, has made a large number of locations.

Near Bouse the Scott mines company is developing the Heart's Desire, recently taken over. T. A. Varden, a former Heintz man, is in charge of development.

The Little Butte Consolidated, formerly controlled by Meyer & Bishop of this city, is doing a good bit of work. A thirty-five-horse-power hoist has been installed and the mine unwatered below the 200-foot level. Three hundred feet of drifts have been driven from the 100 and 200-foot levels, all in ore.

The tiptop is a promising property that is making a showing that puts it well to the front. It is regarded as a comer and some good ore has been developed.

Johnson Camp.

The 125-ton smelter of the Arizona United Mining Company, under construction in the Johnson camp, Arizona, will be fired and operation started at full capacity within ninety days according to mining men just from the Johnson Dragoon district. In addition to company rock customs ore will be treated, contract having been made with a number of companies. The smelterd is constructed on the unit system and additions can be made readily and at little expense when tonnage justifies it.

Fifty men are at work in the mines of the Arizona United and several other companies and numerous individuals are developing. The principal work on the United ground is at the main shaft on the Republic. This is down several hundred feet. The three shafts sunk have opened several good bodies of ore. A sufficient tonnage has been blocked to keep the smelter in operation at full capacity for some time. Additions have been made to the freight outfit used to haul ore from the mines to the smelter site.

An order has been placed for coke and the first shipment will be made this week. By the time the smelter is ready for operation some 2000 tons of coke should be on the ground. It is estimated that the daily output of copper will be fifteen tons at first.

The firing of the smelter should inaugurate a new era for the Johnson-Dragoon section. It will afford a convenient market for ores formerly hauled at heavy expense from Johnson to Dragoon or Cochise, thence to El Paso. With the freight cost eliminated it will be possible for properties containing lower grade ores to operate and renewed activity should result. A large number of Angelenos are interested in this district and quite a bit of business is derived from that territory by merchants here.

TWO EXHIBITS OF MINERALS.

THEY WILL BE ESTABLISHED IN THIS CITY.

Chamber of Mines Will Have One of Economic Geology, Including High-Grade Specimens, Another Open to Close Public Scrutiny. Action Is Urged.

The directors of the Chamber of Mines have decided to establish two distinct mineral collections, one to be "an exhibit of economic geology, consisting of the ores, petroleum and other products of Los Angeles' tributary territory, the other a mining exhibit, which shall show both the commercial importance and geology of the various mineral districts of the Southwest."

The first of these will be a reference collection of various ores arranged, each according to the metal for which it is valuable and each property identified and labeled. The collection will include: Petroleum and its products, clays, clay products and building stone, cement rock, gypsum, graphite, road metal, gems and gem-bearing rocks, natural fertilizers and any other geologic products that may be found in the region tributary to Los Angeles.

Good-sized high-grade specimens are wanted to illustrate the several minerals which are valuable for the particular metal while hthey may contain, viz: Galenite, cerussite, wulfenite, etc., to represent ores of lead; native copper, malachite, azurite, chalcopyrite, bornite, cuprite, etc., to represent ores of copper. In the non-metallic department it will be necessary to show the raw material and what it is useful for in the commercial world, viz: Graphite and its finished form as pencils, lubricant, paint, crucibles, stove polish, etc.

The mining exhibit will be placed on tables open to close public scrutiny and will contain no specimens of sufficient value to tempt pilferers. It will aim to show the country rock, walls, ore deposits, etc. Groups from each mine will be placed together and labeled fully as district, etc., and each specimen will be also marked.

A filing cabinet is also to be kept for the annual reports of companies or such other complete information as may be furnished in lieu thereof. A card catalogue and cabinet will also be kept containing all available information as to mines and companies which will be furnished the public on application.

No charges are made exhibitors. All exhibits must be donated absolutely to the chamber.

The chamber has issued a statement urging mine operators all over the Southwest to take up the matter of exhibits at once. Several leading companies have already furnished specimens that are already on display at the chamber's quarters.

CUPID VISITS HOSPITAL.

Nurse at County Institution Becomes Bride of Doctor—Romance of the Wards.

Miss Annie Matthiesen, a nurse at the County Hospital, and Dr. LeRoy Fuller, formerly an interne in the same institution, fell in love while trying to save a patient's life three months ago. Cupid celebrated his victory with a marriage at the Nurses' Home yesterday afternoon.

Nurses on mischief bent decorated the taxicab waiting to take the newly-wedded couple to the railroad station. Large placards telling that a marriage had just taken place and that the happy principals were inside the motor car were hung on the machine.

Dr. Theodore Finley, assistant superintendent of the hospital, outwitted the fair undergraduates by ordering another conveyance.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. Herbert J. Weaver, pastor of the First Lutheran Church. There was no one in attendance but Mrs. Rosamond Quinen, superintendent of nurses, who acted as chaperon.

Dr. and Mrs. Fuller have gone to Searchlight, Nev., where the former is physician for several mining companies.

POLICE SEEK RUNAWAYS.

The police have been requested to look out for three boy inmates of Whittier who escaped from Camp Banning, Catalina Island, where they were being given an outing August 11. The runaways are Willie Ernst, George P. Weaver and Raymond Salsaf.

There is now on foot a movement to colonize great areas in Mepastepec and Pijijiopam districts, where there is growing some of the finest tobacco to be found anywhere in the world.

RICHES IN TIMBER.

Americans on the isthmus are getting rich shipping Spanish cedar and other rare timber to the United States. Small farmers are acquiring modest tracts, cutting the timber, and with the proceeds of its sale laying by little fortunes for the tilling of the soil, in which finest crops grow like weeds. There remain numerous such tracts in this part of Mexico that can be bought at from $2.50 to $5 per acre, American money.

Choctaw Indians are colonizing a tract of 19,500 acres of fine irrigable land near Santa Engracia, on the Central branch of the National Railways of Mexico, between Monterey and Tampico.

W. H. Haskell, C. A. Cornell, John Welfest, L. A. Golden, E. S. Rice and M. A. Diamond are in Mexico from their farms in Kansas to acquire plantations. They claim that choice lands in Kansas are not productively equal to cheapest tracts in Mexico.

Two years ago Robert Holmes stumbled upon the Guadalupe mine in the State of Chihuahua. The prospect was owned by an Indian, who offered to sell it for $90. Holmes bought the claim at that figure, making payment in currency. The Indian was not quite sure as to the value of paper money and came back with the offer to take half the sum in silver or gold. Holmes accordingly obtained title finally for $45. This week he sold the property to a newly organized American company for $1,000,000.

There has been organized in Mexico an international bar association, its membership to be composed of and confined to lawyers practicing and residing in Latin-American republics. In the near future there will be held in this city a convention of delegates from all such countries to perfect the organization, widen its scope of influence and name the personnel of its official staff, to include at fewest one attorney of prominence from each republic.

NOW THEY ARE MARRIED.

Society Couple of Ventura Venture to Los Angeles and Return as One.

Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Sumner J. Quint, No. 1217 Arapahoe street, Miss Pansy Brewster, a society girl of Ventura, was married to Dana L. Teague, a wealthy lumber man of the same place. Miss Brewster wore a traveling suit of mole-colored cloth, and carried lilies of the valley.

The ceremony was performed beneath a canopy of carnations and greenery by Rev. C. Elwood Nash. An elaborate dinner was served, and later Mr. Teague and his bride left for Catalina, where they will spend a few days before leaving for an extended northern tour. They will later reside in Ventura. Mrs. Quint is a niece of the bridegroom.

POLICE HEADS PROTEST.

Say That Men in Prison for Serious Crimes Should Not Be Pardoned.

The heads of the police department are vigorously protesting against the present practice of paroling and pardoning prisoners from the penitentiaries after they have served small fractions of long sentences. It is declared that the majority of the more atrocious and desperate crimes are now being committed by former convicts.

In support of their argument officials cite the case of George Curry. He was sent to San Quentin February 15, 1905, to serve ten years for manslaughter, having killed his wife. He was pardoned July 15, 1908. Friday, Curry murdered Agnes Brascesco in San Francisco and committed suicide.

Nine men who had been sent to the penitentiaries from Los Angeles, were paroled during July. Among them were Charles H. Arthur, who killed a woman at Fourth and Spring streets, in 1898. He was given a life sentence for murder in the first degree. William Hutchinson, J. C. Cloud and Ross Smith, who were sentenced to serve ten years each for robbery in 1906, were also given conditional liberty.

"There is no question about it being a mistake to put these men convicted of serious offenses at large," said Paul Flammer, captain of detectives, yesterday. "We are having more trouble with ex-convicts than with all of the persons who have not been sent to prison. We have protested time and again against various dangerous men being set free but

PROTEST OVER CARTAGE CHARGE.

RESOLUTION IS ADOPTED BY DRUGGISTS' BODY.

Third Annual Meeting of the California Pharmaceutical Association Ended—San Francisco to Be the Gathering Place Next Year—Pomona Man Chosen Vice-President.

The third annual meeting of the California Pharmaceutical Association completed its business yesterday afternoon, and adjourned to meet in San Francisco October 19, 1910.

The meeting was the largest in point of attendance, in the history of the association, and the most interesting in the amount of business transacted. Matters receiving special attention were efforts to have a law passed placing the enforcement of the Pure Drug Act in the hands of the State Board of Pharmacy; resolutions passed insisting on the wholesalers of Los Angeles and San Francisco desisting in charging for boxes and cartage; adoption of a new constitution and bylaws; resolution asking that the matter of twelve-hour-per-day rule be considered at the next meeting, and the matter of making the examinations for license more strict in future.

The morning session was taken up in electing the following officers for next year: A. L. Leiber, Oakland, president; E. E. Armour, Pomona, first vice-president; G. H. P. Lichthardt, Sacramento, second vice-president; F. W. Gish, San Francisco, secretary and treasurer; trustees, W. R. Dickinson, Los Angeles; J. W. Jesson, Ontario; Charles H. Ward, Pasadena; Val Schmidt, San Francisco; D. C. Hazelrigg, San Diego; J. A. Sanford, Stockton; and J. Tobiner, Oakland.

The new constitution and bylaws were adopted with but one contest, and that was an effort to amend the constitution so that members of the State Board of Pharmacy might be trustees of the association. This caused a hot discussion on the ground that it was an effort by the State board to so control the trustees of the association that it would approve all of the acts of the board. The matter was promptely voted down, thus eliminating politics from the association.

The wholesalers tried to block the resolution against charging retailers for boxes and cartage, but the resolution passed almost unanimously.

The afternoon session was taken up in the reading of a paper by F. C. Schueddig on "Oil of Eucalyptus," showing the profitableness of raising eucalyptus trees in Southern California, for the extraction of this oil from the leaves and wood. Another paper was read by James G. Steel of San Francisco, on "Pharmacy in San Francisco in the Early Fifties." He gave a biographical sketch of the old timers in the drug business, in California.

The new officers were installed and, after passing resolutions thanking the Los Angeles Retail Dealers for their entertainment during the meeting, the session was adjourned.

The visiting ladies of the California association were entertained in the afternoon with a theater party followed by a luncheon, at Belasco Theater, by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Great preparations are being made for the entertainment of the American Pharmaceutical Association, which holds its fifty-seventh annual meeting here, this week. The same committee that entertained the California association, in the past week, will also entertain the national body this week. Although but few of the members of the national association have, as yet arrived, yet the entertainment will start today, with a trip to Mt. Lowe, leaving the city at 9 o'clock this morning.

This afternoon a committee consisting of George W. Dickinson, J. W. Jesson, C. H. Ward, E. L. Baldwin, F. N. Drake and Mrs. Fletcher Howard will go to San Bernardino to meet the special train carrying the eastern members coming to the American Pharmaceutical Association.

BIBLE SCHOOL HER AMBITION.

Mrs. Armstrong Would Have One in Burma.

Educated Class of Rangoon Ignorant of Gospel.

Fund Is Needed of Fifteen Thousand Dollars.

Mrs. W. F. Armstrong, who for many years has lived in Rangoon, Burma, has been visiting in this city for some days as guest of the Y.W.C.A. She left, yesterday, to visit friends in Riverside. Later she will go to her former home in Canada to recuperate for further labors among the Hindoos and Mohammedans in Rangoon.

Mrs. Armstrong has been conducting Bible classes in the Burmese city. She hopes to awaken in the United States sufficient interest in her work to enable her to establish in Rangoon an interdenominational school for men similar to the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago. She needs a fund of $3000 a year for five years, and asks pledges of $50 and upwards, payable annually on September 1. No attempt will be made to organize the school until the money is all available. She said, yesterday, referring to a class of educated Hindoos and Mohammedans that has grown up in India during the past forty years.

"These men are overturning the old order of things; they are renovating the whole life of Asia, bringing western civilization and institutions into the Far East. In India they fill government offices, manage railways, telegraph lines and the mail service, and represent the commercial and professional life of the country.

NOT IN TOUCH WITH BIBLE.

"They have studied western literature, arts, science and laws, but they have never come directly in touch with the Bible. They see how the various creeds, all holding the Bible to be the word of God, disagree in many respects, and a desire has grown up among them to study the Bible for themselves.

"Especially is this true in Rangoon, where these men are separated from their India homes, and hold lightly many of the bonds of caste and custom. From them comes the call for a Bible school. It is not needed so much for the natives of Burma, where the Gospel has had freer scope, but for the more than a million Indians, who have migrated to Burma.

"Adoniram Judson began his missionary career in India 100 years ago, and so long as education of the heathen was conducted by missionaries, no Bible school was necessary, for all were Bible schools; but when others began to educate without the Bible, civilization and Christianity parted company.

"Mission methods make no provision for these educated men. There was no such class when missions were begun. They do not need our schools, have nothing in common with native Christians, and will not come to our churches. They are quite outside the circle of missionary influence, and yet the future of India is largely in their hands."

Mrs. Armstrong says that everywhere in the east higher education is carried on in the English language, and whatever the vernacular of the scholar, his college course is in English. She declares that the educated Hindoos and Mohammedans would support a Bible school themselves as soon as they learn its value, and it will be her aim to make it speedily self-supporting. She argues for independent schools, controlled without interference from western boards of managers, and says they would soon become native to the center where they are located, something that she very much desires to bring about. Her sole purpose is to seek the educated men and leave the work among the masses of India to the foreign missionary societies, as now, while missions of all denominations could unite in her proposed school.

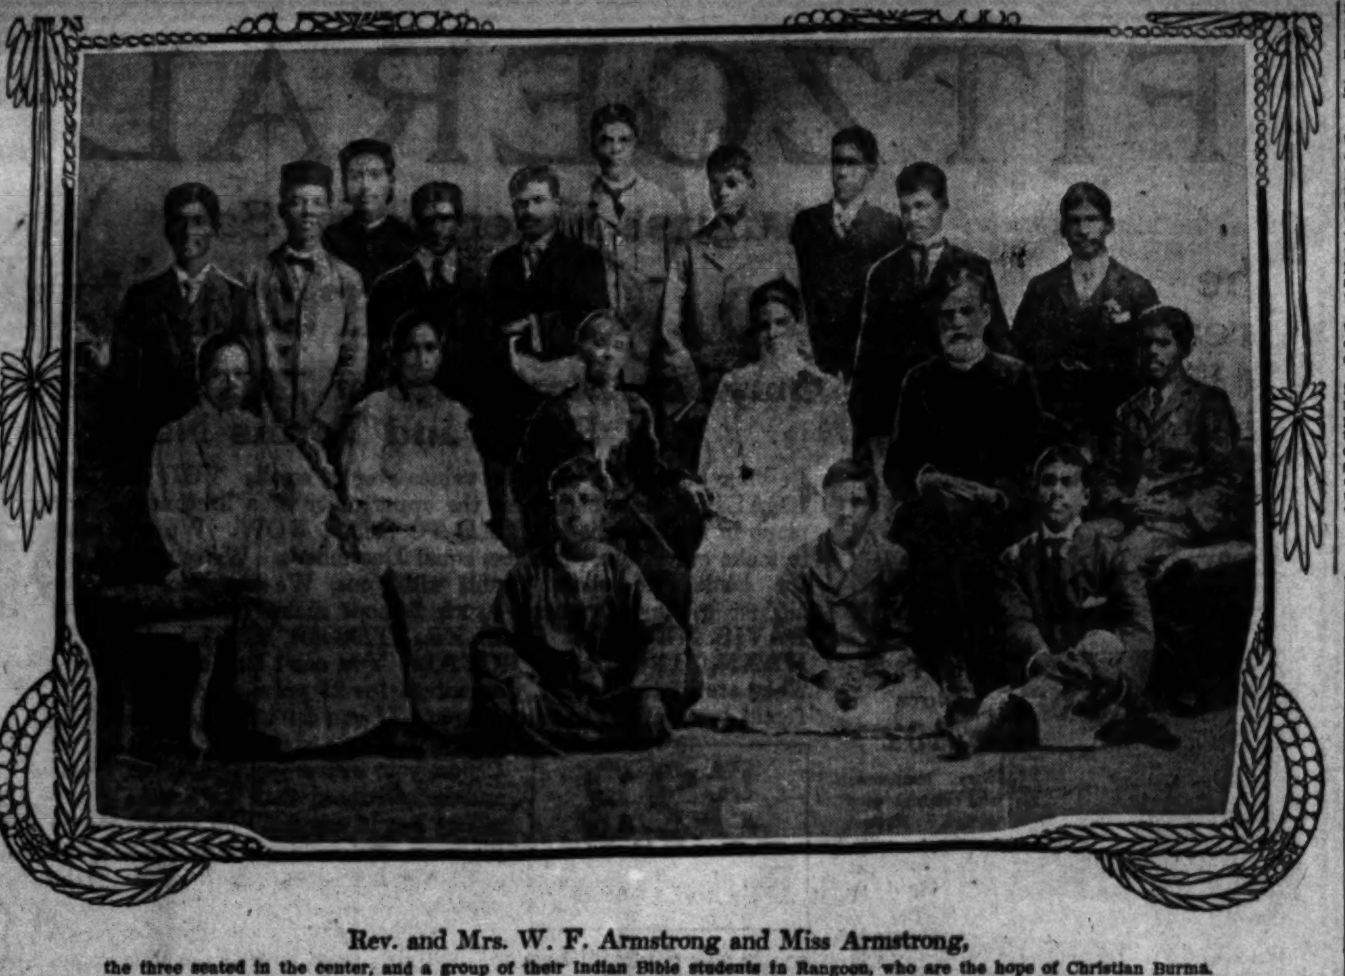
"India and China are starving," she said, "because they cannot feed their millions. Burma lies between them, glorious in her possibilities for agriculture and manufacture, and there is a steady stream of emigration from India, and, in a lesser degree, from China also.

"My husband, Rev. W. F. Armstrong, was appointed missionary to Burma in 1884 by the American Baptist Missionary Union, and for twenty-five years, this has been our work. In our school we have children of every denomination and from all parts of India. A number of the educated natives have been converted and have organized themselves into the North India Baptist Church. Mr. Armstrong preaches to them every Sunday in English."

Mrs. Armstrong bears letters from many leading clergymen and Christian workers indorsing her plan for the establishment of a Bible school at Rangoon, among them, Rev. Edward Judson, New York; John Wanamaker, Philadelphia; Dr. R. S. MacArthur, New York; Dr. C. A. Eaton, Cleveland and Dr. Elmore Harris, Toronto, Can.

During the remainder of the present year, Mrs. Armstrong's address will be No. 24, Balmuto street, Toronto, and after that time No. 2 Sandwith Road, Rangoon, Burma.

Miss Kate Armstrong, who sits between her father and mother in the picture, is founder and principal of Norris College at Rangoon, and the young men and women students are mostly Hindoos, but a few are native Christians. The students receive their degrees from the College of Preceptors, London, which institution has fully indorsed the work of Miss Armstrong.



Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Armstrong and Miss Armstrong, the three seated in the center, and a group of their Indian Bible students in Rangoon, who are the hope of Christian Burma.

THE CLIMBERS IN HETCH-HETCHY.

Adventures of the Sierra Club Related by a Los Angeles Enthusiast.

HETCH-HETCHY VALLEY (Cal.) Aug. 12.—Again in one of the most beautiful spots of the high Sierra, I address the readers of The Times. I have just had a suggestion of civilization in the shape of part of The Times of July 18. For one week I was absolutely out of touch with the world. A small party came down the Grand Cañon of the Tuolumne, the greatest of the Sierra cañons. Except at one place, it is inaccessible. I shall speak further of it later on.

I believe I left our main party at Tuolumne meadows. We spent a delightful week at this place engaged in various occupations.

Fishing in Lyell fork was excellent, many fishermen taking the limit. The banks of the stream are not wooded, and it is necessary to stand back from the banks and make long casts, or creep up behind boulders. For the benefit of future anglers, I will state that the best flies for this stream are Royal Coachman, Red Ant, Black Ant, and the old reliable Brown Hackle. Many fish were caught with spoons, but, not enjoying this mode of fishing, I took but few fish in this way.

Beautiful walks and climbs around the meadows are numerous, the only difficulty is what to choose.

The meadows lie at an elevation of 8600 feet, with splendid peaks towering near their borders. The edges of the meadows, and the lower reaches of the mountains are clothed with magnificent forests.

One solitary ramble stands out in my memory.

GOOD WALKERS.

One morning I was invited to join the president of the Appalachian Club—a Boston gentleman—a lawyer from Portland, Or., a banker from San Antonio and a well-known Boston lecturer in a tramp. Having some camp work to do, I requested them not to wait, thinking to overtake them. My task taking longer than I had expected, my party had two hours' start and, hike as I would, I could not overtake them.

I continued alone by Cathedral Lake to the end of Cathedral Pass, looking once more into the valley of the Merced.

I can imagine nothing more entrancing than a High Sierra forest in the morning. It is formed of towering pines and firs. The foliage of both trees and undergrowth is free from defects and vivid in coloring. The ground is often a carpet of wild flowers. Here and there foaming mountain brooks dash over the stones, while an occasional glimpse through the trees of snow-clad peaks adds the element of grandeur. Add to this, skies of unclouded blue, and the pure air of the Sierra, with its subsuggestion of snow and ice, and you have a scene and a situation of unsurpassable attractiveness.

I made an almost complete circuit of Cathedral peak, then climbed it. This splendid peak, although not one of the lofty mountains of the Sierras, is one of the most attractive. For about 1000 feet, its bare cliffs tower above timber line, taking the form of an old Mormon cathedral.

I had my luncheon alone near the summit, enjoying a most magnificent prospect. I descended the mountain on its eastern side, later following down a cañon, where there was no trail, but where open country made tramping easy.

To a layman it would seem that an enormous cataclysm had shattered a great rampart of rock which in ancient times connected Cathedral with its next neighbor to the eastward. The mountainside is strewn with enormous rocks of granite. They are not the rounded boulders which have rolled down from the mountains, but square blocks with sharp edges, which seem to have been torn from their beds by a tremendous shock. In one place the creek runs through a trough or gash in the rock which appears to have been cut out accurately with a gigantic chisel.

THE ANNOYING TROUT.

Altogether, the scenery was most interesting and my solitary ramble most enjoyable. One day I ventured into the region of mystery and danger—the Tuolumne Cañon—in search of trout. I was rewarded by fine scenery, but few fish. The stream was full of trout, but on this day they would not take the fly. One pool was especially annoying. Hundreds of trout were in plain sight, playing on the surface, diving to the depths, then leaping out of the water, sporting with others, but not taking my flies. I changed flies, crept on my face to the bank and cast, hid behind trees and cast, stood back

"If the horse were granted," argued their leader, Deputy Schlottermueller, convincingly, "the young Duke might live more often at Kallenberg, much to the advantage of the local storekeepers." The deputy for Kallenberg, who had been opposing the horse, was promptly gained over by this argument; and the Pro-Horseites prepared prematurely to celebrate their victory. Their hopes were dashed to the ground by an unexpected intervention. "The Pro-Horseites support this vote on the ground of public security," said Expert Witness Muther. "That is unfounded. The gendarme really wants the horse to ride into town and currycomb the Wachtmeister's horse."

WELL, WELL!"

This revelation was a bomb. There ensued a furious debate, reproaches and insults flew through the hall, and passions ran so high that one politician challenged another to a duel. The thrift party won. "The function of a gendarme," voted the commission by a large majority, "is to gain the respect of the public, and not to degrade himself into the position of a horse-cleaner."

not mute. Industrious men, inspired by Dr. Von Saalefeld, sought for literary and historical precedents for mounted gendarmes.

Both Pro-Horse and Anti-Horse party used much such imagery, but the issue hung in doubt, and after a breathing time it was resumed by the Landtag with redoubled fury.

At the next session of the Anti-Horseites quoted Prince Buelow's encomium of "Old Prussian thrift."

"Yes," retorted the Pro-Horseites, "but he has a deficit of $125,000,000."

"Then let Coburg set example to imperial Germany," replied the Anti-Horseites, "and not make a deficit of $80 over a useless horse."

THE DEADLOCK.

The Extraordinary Landtag wavered. In a more progressive state the Anti-Horseites would have been bullied or bought by their foes. But though a Coburg legislator will thankfully drink your champagne, eat your terrapin and win your money at poker, his voting conscience is inflexible. The deadlock seemed eternal. It stayed the country's law-making; even the Coburg army, officially known in Berlin as "the Second Battalion of the Ninety-fifth (Sixth of Thuringia) Infantry Regiment," threatened to be embroiled, to the loss of discipline, and deadly peril of the state in case of foreign invasion. The army was involved owing to the fact that Coburg raises no cavalry. The Anti-Horseites, while mainly arguing against extravaganve, reasoned that a mounted gendarme meant breaking this rule, and declared that cavalry was a survival of feudalism of a modern state. "Modern military theorists," they argued, "are very doubtful as to the value of cavalry in war, and in peace cavalry is a menace to the industrious people and no terror to evil-doers. If the gendarme cannot run quicker on foot than a drink-sodden burglar he is not physically fit to curb a high-spirited horse."

The Anti-Horse syllogism seemed conclusive. Pro-Horse deputies banged on their desks and forsook the Landtag building in bad humor. Excitement reigned in the town. It spread to the twin capital Gotha, where Herr Arnold Thiels took a referendum as to what course Gotha should pursue if the Coburg factions came to blows. Ministers again threatened resignation.

But at this moment a prophet arose in Israel. He was a professor at Jena University, who, having studied Alexander P[illegible]s dictum that "Great events from little causes spring," feared that the horse struggle would spread to other German states and involve the whole empire in a second Thirty Years' War. He wrote to the president of the ministry urging that the Landtag should be asked to vote for the horse on condition that the Duke paid the $80. The apostles of thrift, he pointed out, would thus be appeased, and in return would probably abandon their attack upon mounted gendarmes as Praetorian guards of despotic Caesarism.

THE RESULT.

At first both parties rejected this beneficent plan. But things were becoming too serious. The mechanism of government had come to a standstill. The budget was not voted; the Second Battalion of the Ninety-fifth (Sixth of Thuringia) Infantry Regiment lacked its annual three hundred conscripts; and two broken windows in the Clinic of Neustadt remained unrepaired. A majority of wise men consented to sacrifice their personal predilections for the good of the state. If the Duke agreed to pay, the Opposition would suffer Coburg to be overawed by a gendarme-ridden, fire-breathing steed. Patriotism had conquered, and faction fled in defeat and in dismay.

But the seriousness of the struggle which had been raging for months was shown once more when the compromise arrived at between leaders of [illegible] came up for confirmation be- than half the Anti-Horseites would accept the arrangement. Crying angrily, "We are betrayed," the remainder prepared to die in the last ditch in the cause of horseless gendarmerie. Not until the debate had raged for three days and nights was further talk ruled out of order by a despotic speaker, and the greatest problem that has ever rent in two a German Parliament brought to a final vote. After a few minutes of breathless delay the vote was finally announced. The Pro-Horseites had won. But they had won only by a single vote; and the Anti-Horseites' first act was to send off an angry telegram accusing of treachery one of their members who had pleaded toothache as a cause for absenting himself from the last momentous debate.

Next morning a smart-looking bay of Irish origin, good value for the $80 it cost, was dispatched to Kallenberg's ducal castle amid the mingled joy and execration of the populace. Then the majestic gendarme, his face wreathed in indescribable smiles of triumph, leaped into the saddle and galloped into Coburg to currycomb the Wachtmeister's horse.

With Good Teeth You Can't Be Ugly.

A FAMOUS old Frenchman was once heard to say that a woman with really good teeth could never be plain; and, although this may be rather a sweeping statement, there is no doubt that an otherwise plain appearance is often redeemed by a perfect set of teeth, and the effect of many a pretty face marred by bad teeth.

"Her bright smile haunts me still"—so goes the beautiful old song that was the favorite of a past generation of singers.

What a large part beautiful teeth play in the "bright smile"!

And what a disfigurement poor teeth and missing teeth make in a face, however beautiful it may be in all other features!

We preach the gospel of good looks, fully conscious of the important part teeth play in that question.

Alveolar teeth (without plates) are closely related to the best that nature can supply in the way of teeth, and when in place are not only beautiful, but strong and servicable—made to chew with as well as to be looked at and admired.

If you have two or more teeth left in either jaw, and wish to do away with partial plates or ordinary bridge work, both of which are a nuisance and a poor substitute for real teeth, come and let us look your mouth over, without cost or obligation.

We cannot tell what we can do for you until we see your teeth and mouth.

Dentistry cannot be supplied at long range and The Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar teeth cannot be had outside one of our offices, although there are pretenders abroad in the land who claim to supply teeth without plates that are "just as good" as the Rex Dental Co.

It is not necessary to warn you that the counterfeit will never equal the original.

Our beautiful book "The Alveolar Method of Dentistry," will give you a good idea of this marvelous discovery, which has revolutionized the science and practice of dentistry. Send at once for a copy—free to you.

INSURANCE WORLD.

At the age of 96 a man is dead, though still in the enjoyment of good health, according to insurance rules. Gen. Daniel H. Rucker, U.S.A., retired, who is some past his ninety-sixth anniversary, was recently notified by a life insurance company that under its rules he is dead and the company was ready to pay the amount of his insurance policy. Gen. Rucker denied that he was dead, but to help the insurance company maintain its rules he accepted the judgment.

In 1908 the Northwestern Mutual Life, exclusive of licenses, taxes and other expenses, paid into the State of Oregon in loans and payments to policy holders $411,771, and collected in premiums only $295,461, leaving an excess to the State of $116,310.

New York's Superintendent of Insurance has ruled that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company cannot under the law of the State acquire real estate for a sanitarium, even though the purpose of such an institution were for the benefit of the 14,000 employés of the company. The insurance laws restrict life insurance companies from investing money in lands and buildings other than such as shall be requisite for the conduct of their business.

Suits to the amount of $200,000,000 have been brought against the fire insurance companies doing business in Mississippi for alleged violation of the anti-compact law. The suits will be jointly fought by the companies, and it is not expected that it will amount to anything.

Edward T. Campbell, president of the American Central Insurance Company of St. Louis, has figured out that the fire waste in the United States is $3 per capita, while in the countries of Europe the average is only 30 cents.

"Soldiering" on Public Jobs.

There is many a public job where $1 is paid for 30 cents' worth of work. A man said he observed eleven men engaged in this sort of work, and not a moment in a half-hour were half of them at work. They stood around, gawking up and down the street, or talking with one another about some trivial experience that happened the other day.

Such lying work no private enterprise would permit for an hour. But in public work it goes without saying. To prevent a man from cheating the public would, in some people's opinion, be an act of oppression. What, compel a man to put in a faithful hour's work that he is paid for? "Down with such gilt-edged reform—I'll vote the other ticket."

And this thing of continually talking while at work is like making false change, or selling thirteen ounces for a pound, or measuring out berries in quart boxes with false bottoms. We should be very careful not to get our human rights mixed up, and to remember that freedom of speech does not mean freedom to cheat.—[Ohio State Journal.

Language Changes.

"Language," remarks Del Valentine, "changes pretty rapidly sometimes. Not many years ago the digit or symbol '0' was called 'naught,' 'cypher' or 'ought' as per training or taste. Now the telephone has worked a change in the average vocabulary, and it is known as 'oh,' and the other names are almost forgotten except in the arithmetics. Now the man will step up to the mouthpiece and whisper into the shell-like ear of the peach at the other end of the wire, 'Give me 4-oh-2,' or '2-double oh,' and she never makes a mistake—hardly ever. When a mother wants to tell her boy that he has been naughty, when the young man wants to lie poetically to the young woman, and tell her, 'I sigh-fer you the whole night through,' what are they to do, 'naught' and 'cipher' are sent to the dump?"—[Exchange.

five companies left behind did the camp work, and went swimming in relays. Co. B, made up of the smallest boys, policed the grounds and picked up every scrap of trash, carrying it away in a little cart. The plebe company was detailed for the dining-room work and scullery service. New arrivals, unless too small, are always placed in this company until they select a trade or show a special fitness for another career. In the dining-room squad is Nick, one of the "Gold Dust twins," whose white teeth suggest watermelons.

"Mr. Greeley," he said very seriously to the superintendent on whom he was waiting at table clothed in all the importance of a waiter's white jacket and apron, "would you like some 'possum today?"

"Why, yes," answered the surprised superintendent. "So would I," said the jolly little pickaninny with every tooth bared. Nick has found his calling as a waiter unless he desires to be a whole minstrel show by himself.

"Keep out, or one week on the wood pile." This sign stared one in the face at the entrance of the bakery, but it was not meant for invited visitors. A fine-looking boy about 18 did the honors. He was learning the baker's trade, and proudly exhibited 400 loaves of bread just baked, with some tempting spice cakes. The oven was a primitive one, built in the side of the mountain, but the bread was sweet and good.

At the school a number of trades are taught, and a boy must know some one thing by which he can make an honest living before he is paroled from the school. In the publishing department is a printing and linotype school, where open-shop principles are inculcated. A daily paper is printed, the outside of the sheet being devoted to a resumé of world events, baseball and football news, and the inside to school affairs.

But all these things are left behind at Camp Banning. The day of aquatic and field sports was a notable one. There were boat races, swimming races, a tub race, a mountain-climbing race, a novelty race where the contestants started from a given point, stripped to bathing trunks as they ran, dived into the water, swam out to a given point, and then back, dressing as they raced.

The diving contest was exciting, one boy after another shot up in the water, and the major was just announcing the winner when a little stump of an arm showed way out, forty feet beyond the supposed winner, and the one-armed boy from Company B won the contest.

It was a proud day for Company B, which boasted several winners. The tiniest boy in camp, Almon Graber, was in the mountain-climbing race and traveled the whole distance, although he did not win. This tiny boy is 6 years old. His brother is 10. Their company is kept apart from the others and under the care of Capt. and Mrs. Wade, who have been in the institution since 1893. When these little brothers came to the reform school the youngest was a baby of 4. They seemed very happy and well-cared for, but what are they doing in an institution of reform?

A judge in the northern part of the State committed them. They were with their father when he robbed a butcher shop of meat and money, because his children were hungry, so the story is told. The father went to the penitentiary. They had no mother worthy of the name, so the judge sent these babies to Whittier.

Many of the older boys in the Whittier State School have committed serious crimes, and under the former State law would have gone to the penitentiary. Now they are given a chance until they are 21, but the kindergarten of the penitentiary has been transferred to the reform school, and the problem is harder.

MANY OUT ON PAROLE.

Almost as many boys are out on parole from the school as are in the institution. They are in homes, in trades, and the school is responsible for them until they are 21 years of age, both boys and girls. Eighty per cent. of those who have gone out have turned out satisfactorily, the strictest account being kept of their subsequent careers.

Capt. William E. Conners has just been appointed the new parole officer for the Whittier Reform School. He has been with the lads during their outing at Catalina, and it is said that he knows by sight every boy or girl who has been to the Whittier institution for the past fifteen years, and will make an invaluable officer.

There are many sad things connected with a reform school. Each lad has a history, and sometimes his own story and the stories of his parents are written in his countenance. Last week Rev. M. A. Martin and party from Avalon visited the camp. They carried pounds and pounds of good candy to be distributed with the compliments of the people of Avalon. Dr. Martin talked to the boys. He has been a criminal lawyer in his day, and he dug deep down into the things at the back of those young minds. Every one was listening save a low-browed negro with the criminal type of countenance, who was muttering things under his breath and keeping his vicinity unquiet.

There was one child of 12 years. He sat like a frozen thing, only two restless eyes gazing from side to side, under his hat. He is almost petrified with the horror of the thing he has done, for he is the boy who shot his little brother and then buried him to hide the crime.

It was said at the time of his trial that he was unfeeling, but no one could look at that poor little human being and misunderstand. He is a good boy, they say at the camp, but he is always like that, frozen at the enormity of his crime.

Handling Army Mules.

Horse and mule men at the stock yards stood in admiration yesterday afternoon while the soldiers of Batteries A and B, Second United States Artillery, under Lieut. R. O. Mason, loaded thirteen cars of mules in twenty-five minutes. It was a new record on the loading docks, and it wasn't accomplished by any unusual methods either. Nor was the mule driver's vocabulary resorted to. How did they do it? The lieutenant simply called the roll and the mules responded to their names.

"Nigger," called an officer, and a little black gun mule ambled up.

"Now, Mollie, you're next; now, Cyclone," and Cyclone came like a cyclone.

If a mule was refractory a few men in khaki took hold of him and pushed and shoved him into place.

"No wonder," said an envious mule driver, "they know their mules; they couldn't do them all that way."

"That so?" said a non-commissioned officer. "I guess we could. It's all in knowing how. You never want to flinch around a mule. Never look back when you leave him. After you know how mules are easier to handle than horses."—[Kansas City Times.

DR. McLAUGHLIN
Tells how He RESTORES STRENGT
WITH HIS ELECTRIC BE

"You cannot possibly estimate the true import of the discovery of Professor Loeb," said Dr. McLaughlin yesterday, in discussing the scientific announcement that "Electricity is Life."

"It means more happiness to the civilized race than has followed any discovery for years. It will bring about the general recognition of the great possibilities which exist in the application of electricity for the preservation of youth.

"We have for years contended that old age was nothing but the freezing of the blood when there was no longer sufficient vital heat in the body to keep the blood warm and the organs active. We have said that years did not cause decay, and have proven it by citing cases where some men have been made vigorous under our rejuvenating treatment at 80, while you have examples all about you of men who are old and decrepit at 60.

"G. W. Beers of Long Beach, Cal., who is 70 years old, declares he feels as young as 40. He says that our Belt has kept him young for several years. You ought to talk to him about it. He says he will be glad to tell any one what we have done for him.

"Now, Professor Loeb says that the animal heat is Electricity. That we know to be true. We get that heat from the chemical action of the acids and juices of the stomach upon our food. That is combustion. This combustion produces carbonic heat, and carbonic heat is Electricity. That is the basis of life in every vital organ. As long as the stomach is able to generate enough of this heat to replenish the wear and tear upon our vital energies we are strong and active. It is when the stomach finds the strain too heavy that we grow old and begin to decay.

"This is upon the same principle that an engine pulls a train of cars up hill. On level road it goes easily, but when it goes up hill the strain is heavy, and your engine, making power from the burning of coal, just as your stomach makes it from burning your food, is taxed beyond its limit, is unable to go farther, and, exhausting all its strength in the effort, breaks down.

"The human body is just like that engine. It breaks down when the physical energy is overtaxed. That energy is electricity. We have here a means of replenishing the electricity of the body, and that is the basis of my treatment.

"Years have nothing to do with it. In each case it is the failure of the stomach to generate sufficient energy to supply the demands made by the vital organs.

"How quickly we fail when the stomach fails to digest the food! That shuts off the supply and energy.

"We have on record hundreds of instances where men of 75 to 90 have returned to the hard labor youth with a vim after our appliance three months.

"One decrepit old man in youth been a blacksmith using our appliance he tools, and says he can as he did at 25. He says old man made young.

PROTECTS FOREST.

Lookout Station Established on High Peak in Sierras for Watch for Fires in Hills.

A lookout station was established several months ago on Shuteye Peak in the high Sierras for the purpose of watching for any fires which might occur in the mountains. This peak has an elevation of 8358 feet and the observer on it commands a view of a large portion of Tuolumne, Madera and Fresno counties.

A cabin was constructed at the top of the mountain and a telephone line installed, which connects with the Forest Supervisor's office in the valley and the various ranger stations on the Sierra Forest. The observer is equipped with powerful field glasses and when a fire is discovered, news is instantly telephoned to the nearest ranger.

In the short time the station has been maintained, its usefulness has twice been demonstrated by the discovery of fires in remote localities. These were readily extinguished before they could gain dangerous headway, thus saving valuable timber and forage which might otherwise have been devastated, had not the fires been discovered in their incipiency.

The Forest Service is planning to establish several other similar stations in the Sierras which will virtually command the entire range of mountains and thus largely remove the necessity for constant patrol on the part of the rangers scattered throughout the hills.

Much of the rangers' time can now be devoted to trail and other improvement work without interfering with their availability for fighting fires, and the nervous strain under which many of the men labored when constantly patrolling, has been materially reduced.

TROOP D HAS RECORD TRIP.

RETURNS IN FINE SHAPE FROM ITS LONG RIDE.

Only Two Men Fall by the Wayside, One of Whom is Wounded by a Stingaree—Cavalry Boys Have Great Experience in Trip to San Diego and Back.

Tired and dust begrimed, but in splendid condition, Troop D, N.G.C., arrived at the armory, Eighth and Spring streets, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, finishing its 300-mile ride to San Diego and return. The troop has set a record in militia circles that will be hard to beat.

Never before has a troop of cavalry of the National Guard of California undertaken such a long trip, and it is believed by local officers that Troop D has set a mark for the National Guard of the United States, as well as the State of California.

The men left here Sunday morning, August 1, and were five days on the way down. On their arrival in San Diego, every man that started was in the saddle, and only one horse, that was cut by a piece of barb-wire concealed in the grass at Capistrano, was left behind.

On the return trip the company did almost as well, as forty-nine of the fifty-one were on their horses at the arrival at the armory yesterday. The other two were injured, and arrived later in the evening with the supply wagon.

Sergt. Dibbern sprained his ankle at Del Mar, while stopping a horse that started to run away. The second accident happened at Carlsbad Wednesday noon, when Private Hartwell was stung by a stingaree while in bathing. He received prompt attention, and is able to walk today.

The greatest difficulty was with the supply wagon, which had trouble in keeping up with the troop over the rough country. It was usually late in arriving at the camp each evening, and several times the men were compelled to go hungry for a few hours.

The longest ride and most trouble was encountered on the way from Capistrano to Oceanside on the way down. The distance was forty miles and they did not reach camp until nearly midnight, with nothing to eat since morning. All of the restaurants were closed and no one could be found that would open and feed the company. Finally a resident came to the aid of the half-starved cavalrymen and succeeded in arousing enough of the population to get some coffee and sandwiches.

Last Sunday morning the One Hundred and Fifteenth Company of Coast Artillery (regular army) beat Troop D in the trophy rifle shoot by only two points, the score being 373 to 371. The shoot took place on the Naval Reserve range, and it was so close throughout that the winner was decided by the last man to shoot. The team representing Troop D was composed of Capt. Gunn, First Sergt. Rogers, Sergt. Dibbern, Corp. Dawson and Corp. Williams.

The Fifth Company, Coast Artillery, N.G.C., old Co. B of Los Angeles, chartered a launch last Monday afternoon and took the troop to Fort Rosecrans, where it was shown all of the guns and their mechanism and all the points of interest at the fort. In the evening the troop was entertained at a dance at Coronado by the Spanish-American War Veterans of San Diego.

The troop was in charge of Capt. James Gunn, First Lieut. Jesse McComas and Second Lieut. Milton Hellesberger. Dr. H. Spiers acted as physician and surgeon during the trip.

Capt. Gunn said last evening that it was the most beneficial as well as the longest trip ever taken by the troop. "There are things to be thought of in a trip of this kind that I never dreamed of before," he said. "I will know what to expect the next time. The men have also gained much in experience."

"The troop has accomplished a feat that has never been tried before by any troop in the State, and, although I am not sure of it, I believe in the United States as well," said Gen. Wankowski. "They certainly have done well and they deserve all the credit possible for it."

BEACH COMEDIANS.

like his toes, the critter is especially equipped for splashing water. He dashes it in your face. He flings it into your lumbago spot. Then he looks at you with a grin like an ape, and yelps, "Is the water wet?"

One of his bon mots is to dive under the water and come up at your elbow. You see his red-jointed toes suddenly fling into the air and he disappears into the deep, and you hope for the best and forget him, when suddenly the water under your arm bubbles, and there he stands at your side, blowing out water like a seal.

When he is tired of doing this, he teaches every woman along the life line to swim, which he does by grabbing her under the jaw and pulling her along through the water like an old log. It's no use to protest. He wouldn't understand. He isn't quite human.

After the bath hour, when every one else has dressed, the beach comedian wallows around in his wisp of a blue rag and tans his red-jointed toes in the sun.

By and by the beach lunches come out. Then is the time he shines. To show what a regular devil of a cut-up he is, the beach comedian likes to run along in front of a picnic and suddenly swoop down to grab something from the picnic table. He goes off, waving the sandwich and yelping "Thanks, awfully," in his most imbecilic manner.

But in this lies the hope of those who suffer from the comedian. Were it not for this hope, we would be driven to abolish summer and close up the ocean.

SOME DAY!

But some day the beach comedian will swoop down and pick up a sandwich, and it will be Rough on Rats, and all the beach people will gather around to witness his anguish and will dance with his own glee and will jeer his departure by yelping in chorus, "Thanks, awfully, for eating the Rough on Rats!"

FORESTERS' BARBECUE.

The Foresters of America, of Southern California, will hold their annual picnic and barbecue at Oakwood Park today. For the morning an attractive programme of sports, consisting of swimming races, foot races, boxing matches, baseball games and a tug-of-war have been arranged. In the afternoon, to follow the barbecue, prize dancing will be held in the pavilion.

GROWTH.

UNIVERSITY NOW ABSORBS AGAIN.

COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS TAKEN IN.

U.S.C. Offers Complete Medical Curriculum — Consolidation Gives Satisfaction to Faculty and Students—Management to Be Intrusted to Judicial Council.

There was a general feeling, when the College of Medicine recently severed its connection with the University of Southern California, that the loss to the university was only temporary, and that the gap would soon be filled. This expectation has been realized, and this coming semester the university is able to offer, as before, all the advantages of a complete medical curriculum.

There were certain grave disadvantages in the relations of the former college, now a State institution, with the university. The union was not organic; it was merely affiliation, which is a loose bond, allowing for differences of method and general administration which one or the other of the affiliated institutions may at times find awkward and compromising. In the present case the union means consolidation. The College of Physicians and Surgeons, while retaining its original name, becomes the medical department of the University of Southern California. Financially and otherwise in its administration the president of the university will have an immediate and controlling hand. The management of the college is intrusted to a judicial council consisting of the president of the university, the dean of the college and one other member of the senior faculty.

The location of the college is excellent, on East Washington avenue, close to Main street. The buildings and equipment are all that could be desired. Students can enter as freshmen, take a straight curriculum here at home, and enjoy meanwhile the privileges offered by the associate colleges of liberal arts, pharmacy and dentistry. The arrangement is one that will satisfy civic pride, while materially furthering the convenience of students.

Among those who have been most active in bringing about the consolidation, Dr. Lymah B. Stookey may be mentioned. He takes the post of professor of physiology and chemistry in the college.

Whew! How I Hate Heat!

Say Mr. and Mrs. Fat

Is it any wonder that the fat people hate hot weather? If your heart and lungs and stomach were bound around with layer after layer of false flesh that gave out a terrible unnatural heat and that interfered with their normal functions you would understand the aversion of fat people to hot weather. There is absolutely no reason for fat people staying fat in this age of triumph. We do not advise drugging yourself, dieting, or exercising yourself to death, but there is a method that has been proven successful. It is the famous Marmola tablets which do the work of removing fat exactly like nature intends it should be done. They stop the digestive organs from producing fat. They seek out the fat as it lies around the body and remove it at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. These little tablets are made from the great Marmola prescription and compressed into hard tablets by tremendous power. You may carry one in your pocket and always eat a meal in peace of mind, for you know that the tablet will get you the best results from such a meal. These tablets contain nothing but Marmola, Cascara Aromatic and Peppermint Water, but they do their work so pleasantly, harmlessly, and so fast that you will be surprised. They are sold by every druggist, price 75cts. per case, or if you prefer you may write the Marmola Company, Dept. 235, Detroit, Mich.

A Long Pedigree.

Queen Alexandra's Pekinese spaniel, which appears in so many of her pictures tucked under her arm, is probably the most valuable dog in existence and is a gift from the late Empress Dowager of China. Queen Victoria also had one of these diminutive spaniels, which used to go by the name of "Lootie," and of which a portrait was painted for her by Sir Edward Landseer. It was brought to England by Lieut. (afterward General) Dunne, who at the time of the sacking of the Summer Palace, near Peking, found the little dog in the apartment where the aunt of the then reigning Emperor had just committed suicide.

The breed of these particular dogs is claimed to be at least 4000 years old. They are said to have originally come from Thibet, where they are still bred and carefully preserved in the monasteries by the monks, while at Peking their ownership is restricted to members of the imperial family. Certain it is that pictures of these dogs figure prominently on bronzes, cloisonne and pottery over 3000 years old.—[Washington Post.

The Reason Why.

There is a society in New York that, each year, takes a dozen or so East Side children and gives them the time of their lives for a month at an old farmhouse over in Jersey. The very first thing that takes place upon the arrival of the consignment is a thorough scrubbing.

"Good gracious, Jakey, your bath water is as black as ink," the attendant remarked to a lad at the end of his distressing ceremony. "It is dirtier by far than any of the others."

"Well, ain't I two years older 'an any of them kids?" Jakey demanded.—[Brooklyn Life.

FORCEFUL.

HARD-WORKING DICK BENNETT.

"GREAT AMERICAN ACTOR" POSSIBILITY IN HIM.

Man of Virility and Energy, He Prefers Hard Character Parts, and Is Quite Out of Tune in Mere Clothes-Roles—Stellar Career a Year Ahead.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

There are styles and fashions in actors and actresses, just as there are styles in dress and fashions in hats—with the difference that wearables seem to be evoluting backward, while the change in actorial ideals is very slow, and for the most part a steady progress, working away from stilted formality and unreality into naturalness and reality.

I believe that the new type of actor, the modern American player, finds a sterling exemplification in Richard Bennett.

I think Bennett has made up his mind to be "the" great American actor.

Judging by his progress in the past few years, I see no reason why he should not be able to reach that end, for he represents that intelligence which has its sure foundation in hard American common-sense; he is possessed of abundant virility and good-health, and he has that bulldog determination to do or become extinct, which is the greatest requisite for success.

He is a little over thirty years of age, and has already been accorded the highest honors that can be given an American actor without actually making him a star. This, if present plans are not changed, will be brought about within another twelve-month.

We were talking of actorial requisites in Bennett's dressing-room the other evening, as he donned the regimentals of "The Warrens of Virginia."

"The first requisite for an actor nowadays," said Bennett, penciling an emphasized facial line, "is that he be a gentleman. By gentleman I mean first that he shall be a sane and fairly decent sort of fellow, and not a creature with the ability to do proper things in a room—one who presents at least the outward form of quiet, well-bred gentility. This is just as far from fashionplateism as it is from boorishness, and believe me, many an actor has escaped the shoal of clumsiness, of which I have been speaking, only to be dashed to pieces on the rock of an over-nicety which amounts almost to effeminacy.

"Another requisite, also highly essential, is that the actor remain a simple, unaffected man. The quality of citizenship is one of the greatest assets that the actor can have today. Our authors no longer write antiques, in which actors with mighty muscles may don tights and strut and yell from wing to wing. They write transcriptions of modern life, real men and real women, and that author is best who can point the moral and adorn the tale and yet stick absolutely to the contemporary, drawing his lesson from the present, finding vivid interest in that which goes on around us—creating Art out of Life."

Bennett himself is not one of the "pretty boys" of the stage. He has the instincts of gentility, but his power of expression is too big for a dress suit. When he attempts to be the fanciful college kid—a la Billy Bolton—help!

I think the acme of the ridiculous would be a John Drew part jerked out of its natural form-fitting element and assigned to Dick Bennett. Dick would be as pathetic as John Drew in that best of all depictions of the modern young Scotchman, John Shand.

Bennett himself is no sudden star in the dramatic heaven. He has been a dozen years coming into luminosity of the first order, and in that time has indeed played many parts.

By the summer allotment of plays at the Belasco he has dropped generally into roles quite without character, though he is now absolutely a character actor. The assignment of plays is a matter sometimes decided on far in advance, but it is to be hoped that he will have a chance at "The Regeneration," and possibly "Pierre of the Plains," before leaving.

Bennett is not an actor of fads. He has no hobbies, save his home and his children.

His wife, who was formerly a player of much promise, is his constant companion on tour.

When he gets back to New York, one of his first expenditures will be for an automobile. He is now experimenting, with daily increasing confidence, upon a salmon-pink Duro, astonishingly trimmed with the buff engine hood of Lewis Stone's devoted but much hammered "Patsy B."

Bennett invests each part that he plays with something more than mere superficial observation.

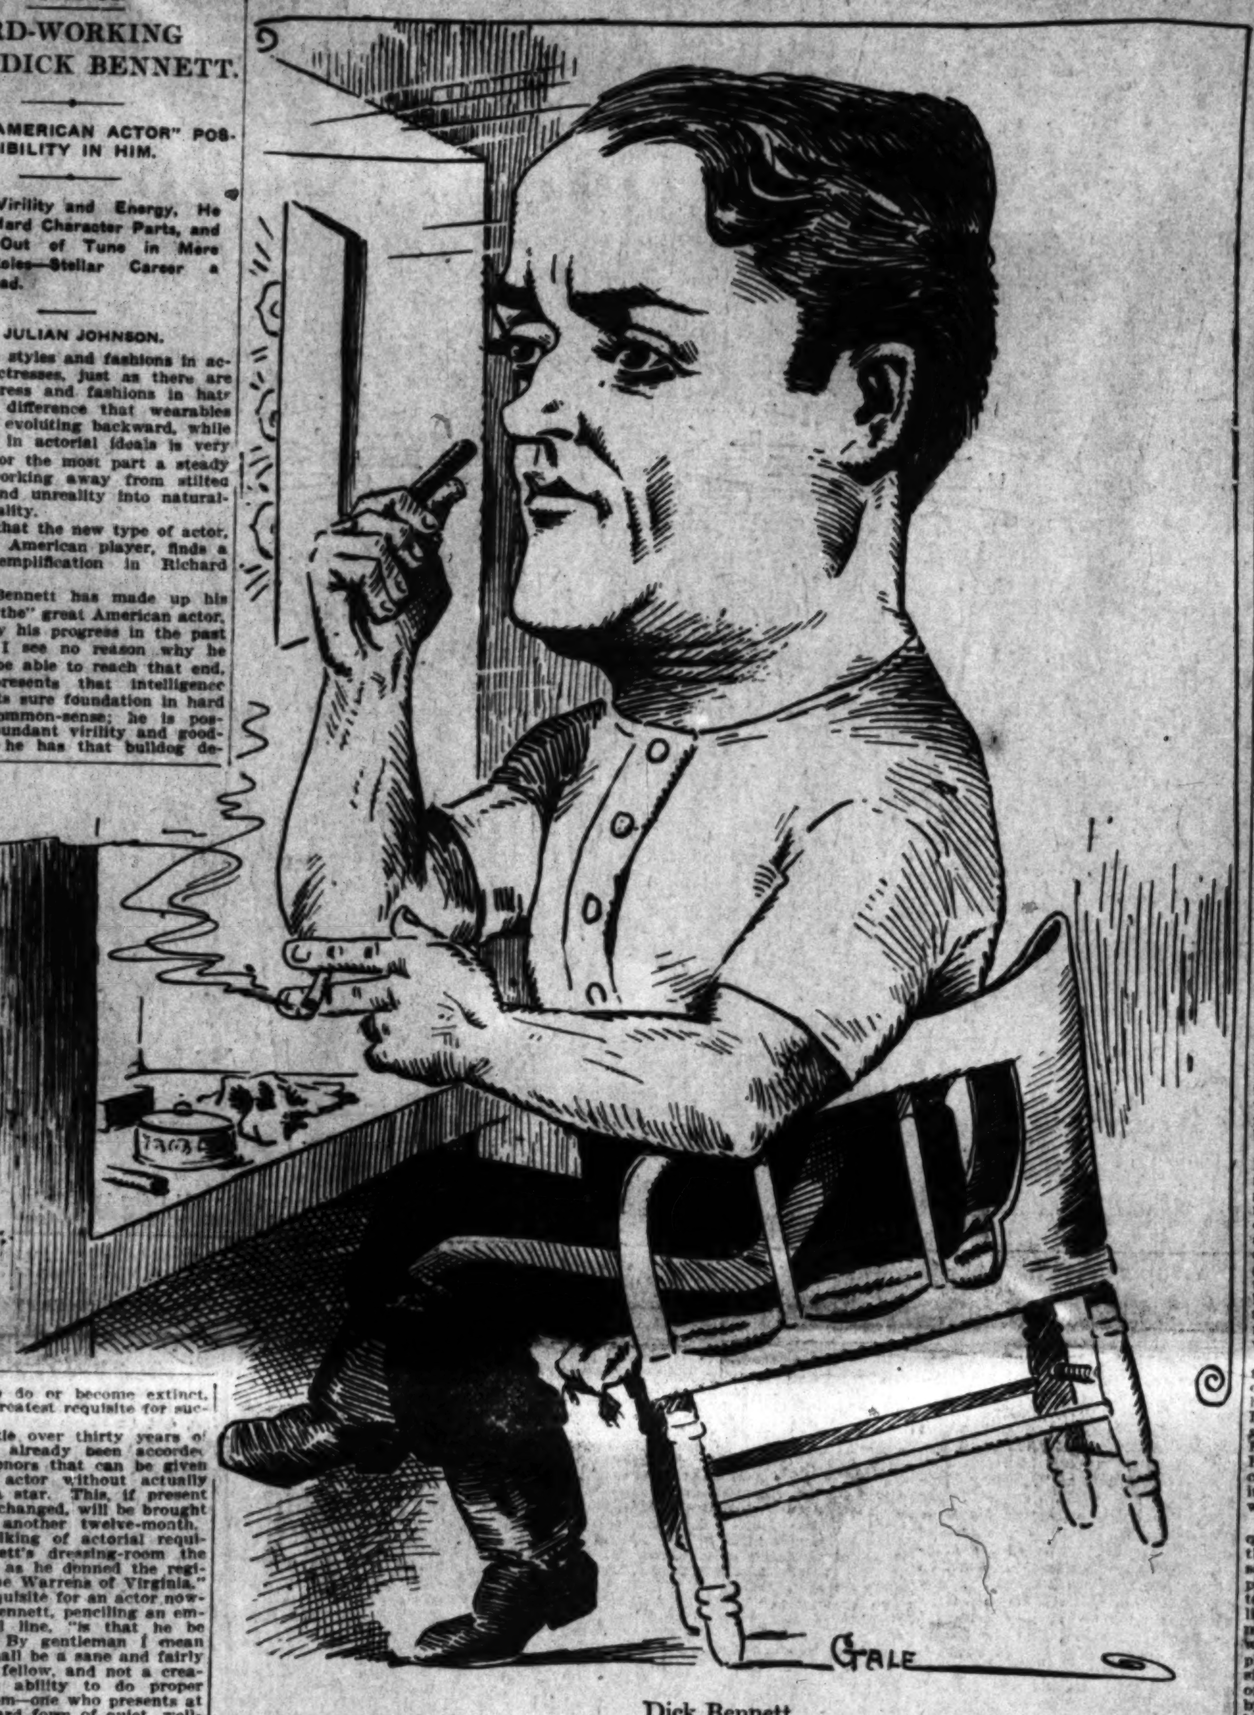
To various roles, representing the experiences or adventures of all sorts and conditions of men, Bennett brings a knowledge veritably colossal, for, himself the son of well-to-do parents, he has knocked about like an ideal soldier-of-fortune, working his way from northern lumber camps, through mediums including general laboring and deckhandship, clear to the New York stage.

"Nothing is lost upon an actor," continued Bennett. "Everything is grist that comes to his mill. No experience can be put aside as absolutely worthless, for the assignment of parts and especially such diverse character parts as are made by the modern dramatist, may bring the most outre adventure directly into his field."

Bennett will probably be seen in Los Angeles next spring in the support of Miss Adams, when she brings "What Every Woman Knows" to the Coast. Local audiences will appreciate the fine art he bestows upon Miss Adams's pedantic, plodding, but none the less profoundly interesting play-lover, John Shand.

And after that.

Bennett doesn't know, but it will probably be a good American play of some sort, to introduce him to New York as a real star.



Dick Bennett,
new-style actor—plain in person and speech, hard-working, and filled with an overwhelming sense of the importance of naturalness and reality.

"GOING SOME."

Will Open the Auditorium—Shuberts Will Make Los Angeles Two Weeks' Stand for the Big Shows.

The Shuberts, according to their local manager, L. E. Behymer, have found it imperative to jump three different companies completely across the continent, and open their Pacific Coast season almost simultaneously in Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Furthermore, the Shuberts are going to do what the Syndicate, for many of their attractions, should have done at least a year ago—make Los Angeles a two weeks' "stand." "The Climax," true enough, is to play two weeks here, but the innovation should have been inaugurated in time to catch the plainly visible dollar-harvest that "The Merry Widow" did not get.

"The Witching Hour" has been announced as the opening Shubert bill, but this in reality will be the second attraction. The first, on Monday, September 6, will be the Rex Beach-Paul Armstrong four-act farce-comedy, "Going Some."

The story is about a college youth nick-named "Speed," who wears sporting togs and committee badges and knows all the yells, but who in reality is an athletic four-flusher. The girls fall for him in the East, but on the Flying Heart ranch in New Mexical the cow-punchers and other homicidal gentry, who have bet their money that "Speed" will vanquish "Skinner" of the Centipede ranch in a foot race, demand a show-down in terms that there is no gainsaying. The consequent complications that ensue, the introduction of eastern visitors, and the peculiar materials placed as side bets, make four hilarious acts.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

A. Byron Beasley will make his début as leading man of the Burbank company this afternoon, returning to the stage which has been the scene of his endeavors for the past year, after a vacation of six weeks, in a new capacity. The play is "Jack Straw," offered a few weeks ago at the Mason Operahouse by John Drew and his company. It never yet has been seen in stock and Mr. Beasley will be the second man in America to enact its name part. With him in the cast, in addition to members of the Burbank organization, will appear Miss Maude Beatty and Miss Lillian Hayward, both well known to Los Angeles theater-goers, though neither has ever before appeared on the Burbank stage.

Mr. Beasley will be seen as Jack Straw, Miss Beatty as Mrs. Parker Jennings, Miss Blanche Hall as her pretty daughter, Willis Marks as her husband and Henry Stockbridge as her son. Others in the cast will include Harry Mestayer, H. S. Duffield, William Yerance, Frederick Gilbert, Lovell Alice Taylor, Margo Duffet and Lillian Hayward.

Joseph Weber's production of "The Climax," one of the most recent New York successes, will commence its Pacific Coast season tomorrow night at the Mason Operahouse.

The play is said to be a refreshing new note in dramatic literature, far from the well-beaten dramatic paths. There is no woman with a wicked past, no domestic vows broken and neither is there a villain or a hero.

Skillful acting must count for a great deal, for the cast totals only four persons.

The entire action takes place in the Bohemian apartments of Luigi Golfanti, New York. Adelina von Hagen comes to Luigi, who is a voice teacher, and lives with him and his son, Pietro, who is a musician of great promise. Adelina is beloved by John Raymond, a young doctor, who endeavors to persuade her to relinquish her love for art for his devotion, but she steadfastly refuses. A slight operation upon her vocal chords is found necessary, and the doctor wills that—perforce of his mental suggestion—she shall be unable to sing after she has recovered from the ordeal. Pietro has written a song for her, and she is unable to sing this. Believing that she has really lost her voice, and is unfitted for a great career, she agrees to marry the doctor—and in the pleasant excitement preceding her marriage she discovers that she can really sing, after all—so all's well that ends well.

The company to present the play here includes Ruby Bridges, Edwin August, Albert Latscha and Walter Wilson.

An interesting feature of the Belasco season will be the next offering, "A Royal Family." The play is full of romanticism and comedy, while the opportunities for sumptuous stage pictures are plentiful and should give the Belasco scenic and mechanical departments capital chances to distinguish themselves.

"A Royal Family" concerns a young princess, who refuses to fall in with her kingly parent's idea that she shall marry a neighboring prince, for reasons of state. The girl is placed in charge of a cunning cardinal, who brings the prince, incognito, to court, and introduces him to the young princess. She falls in love with the young chap, and tells him of her father's scheme for her to marry. The young man advises her to accede to pater's wishes. She does so wonderingly, and never realizes the deception that has been practiced by the cardinal until she is brought face to face with the prince at the betrothal ceremony.

Miss Helen Holmes will have the role of the princess, originally played by Miss Annie Russell. The prince will be portrayed by Richard Bennett, while David Hartford will be seen as the king, and Sheldon Lewis will have the part of the cunning old cardinal.

The Orpheum bill for the coming week seems to be a list of excellently diversified vaudeville.

The programme is topped by Lily Lena, charming English music-hall comedienne, whose fame is not confined to her own side of the ocean. She does a variety of character and costume impersonations.

The newest girl ensemble is the Charles Dana Gibson "Electrified Girl Review," consisting of a series of animated pictures by the well-known American-girl creator, with songs to fit.

Julius Tannen is well known as a raconteur and wit. His return with new stories and monologues will be hailed with keen anticipation by his friends here. He will add several impersonations of noted stars.

The three Donals, brought direct from Europe for the Orpheum, are gymnasts who are said to have created extraordinary comment at the Circus Busche, in Vienna.

Holding over are "The Patriot," "The Comstock Mystery," Selma Bratz, and the Three Leightons.

Roberts, Hayes and Roberts, in an act which they call "The Cowboy, the Swell and the Lady," furnish the new vaudeville act for the Unique Theater this week. This trio will be remembered from past visits to Los Angeles. Kelly and Violette have been retained for one more week—their fifth at the Unique. New gowns for Miss Violette and new songs by Mr. Kelly are promised.

"The Christening" will be the vehicle of the Unique players this week, and it should allow the company opportunities for fun-making. James Kelley and Al Franks will have the roles of the Irishmen who create a general mix-up when a Presbyterian minister is substituted for a priest at a christening. Miss Wassey will have an excellent character part, and Vane should please his feminine admirers in the part of the ardent lover. Miss Constance and Miss Salmon both have good roles.

Several late and catchy songs will be interpolated, and new motion pictures will be shown.

The Los Angeles Theater management will not hold over any of last week's acts, and will, commencing with the usual Monday matinée, present an entirely new bill. There will be six new acts, exclusive of the motion pictures.

Chief among the attractions will be the well-known Eva Mudge, who presents an act known as "The Military Maid," during which she sings a number of excellent military songs, and makes several complete changes.

Another feature of the bill will be the magician, Albihi, who will introduce a series of new Hindoo mysteries. The minstrel man, Billy Windom, will be the chief comedy maker for the week, with his new skit, entitled "The Colored Nurse Girl." The Telegraph Four is a quartette of happy messenger boys who have made a favorable impression. The domestic comedy, "Just Like a Woman," will be the offering of Rae and Borsche, and with Bessie Allen, young singing and dancing soubrette, and new motion pictures, the programme gives every indication of being one of the most diversified bills of the season.

Commencing with the usual Sun matinée, the stock company at the Grand Operahouse will offer "The Devil's Mine," by Mark Swan, the autho of last week's play. "The Devil' Mine" is one of the latter-day melodramas, and is out of the usual run with a good plot, and contains man exciting situations. Every favorite o the company, including George Webb Grace Rauworth, Zora Bates, Frank Frayne and Alice Lewis, will be see in the cast. The management ha promised a scenic equipment well u to the standard of the Grand productions.

In the Spotlight.

George M. Cohan's new music play written for Raymond Hitchcock, has been rechristened "The Man From Broadway." It is in rehearsal.

GENUINE COMIC OPERA.

Henry W. Savage Produces Another Apparent Winner in "The Gay Hussars."

Henry W. Savage made a brave attempt to offer the theater-going public a worthy successor to the "Merry Widow" at the Knickerbocker Theater on Thursday evening of last week, says the critic of Musical America. "Ein Herbstmanoever," Americanized to the dashing title of "The Gay Hussars," was the work. While Lehar need not fear the eclipse of his fame by this endeavor, there is no doubt of the high musical worth of its numbers. Twenty-six-year-old Emerich Kalman can hold up his head in any congregation of operetta composers.

The translation of comedy is always a matter of difficulty, and the humor in "The Gay Hussars" has suffered seasickness in many places in the journey to America and the English language. It is far from being a Hungarian goulash of vaudeville numbers, however, and what faults it may possess now, due to the haste of its production, are recompensed by its high-class "atmosphere" and Mr. Kalman's endeavors. George Marion's staging and the general sumptuousness of equipment will also go far to enable a not altogether fitted cast to be condoned.

There is a plot. Interwoven with the omnipresent love theme is a dereliction of duty on the hero's part who outrages the military. The happy ending cannot be escaped. Be it said to the credit of the principals—who, taken as a whole, could not at present be termed of uniform excellence—the book earnestly calls for a leading man who can act as well as sing. Four days' rehearsal is far from being enough for the mastery of the part, and it is probable that Edwin Wilson's Captain Von Lorenty will improve on acquaintance.

Anna Bussert's Baroness Risa has appearance and voice to recommend it. She sings with a taste and has an exceptionally fine voice. She, too, has acting to do beyond the exactions of the usual musical comedy. Her efforts to win back the indignant Captain were at times suggestive of Mary Garden's Salomé. However, it is possible that the Captain is approachable only that way. It is taken for granted that she knows him better than the audience.

William E. Bonney was satisfactorily blustering as the Field Marshal, while Robert Clarke's Corporal Ludwig lent vocal impressiveness to the unique ending of the first act.

Muriel Terry has a sprightly cleverness that is needed to overcome the lack of illusion that a hardly sylph-like form is possible of imparting. There is not a great deal demanded of her and the heat of the action recommends mercy in her case. Her singing voice was pleasing.

Florence Reid deserved to earn a favorable decision. She had prettiness of person and really looked the ingénue. Her interpolated song, "Oh, You Bold, Bad Men," was a credit both to her and to Maurice Brown Kirby, the lyrist. Mr. Kirby is also accused of making the English adaptation. He is another worthy of the quality that is not strained. German humor, hot weather and little time is a hard nut for any librettist.

The only comedy part was assumed by "Bobby" North, late of the vaudevilles. Under "Bobby's" hands the part, originally drawn along straight Teutonic lines, became tinged with the Semitic. There was nothing that he was not equal to, however, and what laughs the hero did and heroine didn't receive and didn't desire (in the heavy scenes) went to him. "My Friend Lebel" held the performance up for a long time at the audience's hand-clapping request.

Karl von Bakonyi and Robert Bodansky are accredited with the authorship of the book. There are undoubtedly originality and some effective situations in it. Best of all, it offered opportunity for the art of Mr. Kalman.

The goodly sized overture was suave and melodious and prepared the audience for a feast of tunes. At times the music rose in ambition as well in sound, and one scene in the first act was of sufficient weight as to bring reminiscences of the Metropolitan Operahouse across the way.

It is unlikely that any number save "Oh, You Bold, Bad Men" has the quality whistleable that is a prelude to the fanfare of "big sales," but it has evenness and a general richness which more than merits ensemble honors. Another praiseworthy feature is its lack of consanguinity with the material masquerading under the nom de plume of "music" which pervades too many of the Broadway theaters. Mr. Kalman has not immolated his high ideals on the altar of royalties.

"Oh, Silver Moon," an idyl which finds a welcome birth in two acts, is a delicious variation of melodies. It is, like all the rest of the numbers, splendidly orchestrated.

In the matter of staging there is nothing to be desired. It is almost sufficient to say that George Marion has done it. The scenes are gorgeous without being vulgarly tawdry, and the autumn effects in the al fresco scenes are a pleasant sight. The occasional falling of a few brown and golden leaves is a pleasant piece of realistic detail.

Mr. Savage is never sparing in the matter of costumes, uniforms, etc. The chorus made a handsome appearance in the attire of the Hussars, while the feminine persuasion was surely persuasive in beautiful sartorial efforts.

In recapitulation, "The Gay Hussars" is worth while. Its tone is a tonic to the passé attendant of the theaters. It will have good advertising, in fact, the best—that of recommendation from those who have seen it.

Art is long and the foibles in "The Gay Hussars" will soon disappear before the correcting hand of time. The "stuff" is there and much can be done on a good foundation.

"The Idle Life I Lead."

The idle life I lead
Is like a pleasant sleep,
Wherein I rest and heed
The dreams that by me sweep.

And still of all my dreams,
In turns so swiftly past,
Each in its fancy seems
A nobler than the last.

And every eve I say,
Noting my step in bliss,
That I have known no day
In all my life like this.

Our Artistic Needs.

Speaking from hearsay, I conclude that all the banquets of the lively Gamut Club are delightful affairs. But I know that one was. This was the banquet given last week, followed by talks on the art situation in Los Angeles by men and women who have given their subject much thought and consideration. It was my privilege to be one of the guests of the evening.

Capt. Amos A. Fries, whose work on the San Pedro harbor has attracted wide attention, spoke of "The Artistic Possibilities of Greater Los Angeles." These possibilities, he thinks, are as numerous as those of any other city in the world. He pointed out the wonderful beauty which would be ours when our harbor is terraced, and set out in trees and flowers bushes, and when 300 miles of roadway leading to the ocean are improved with trees. Greater Los Angeles can be made into a veritable park. The plan which Charles Mulford Robinson drew out for us is eminently practical, and is perfect in its details.

"The City Beautiful" was the subject of the little talk given by John W. Mitchell, vice-president of the Municipal Art Committee. Mr. Mitchell's labors of love for our city have received even the speed of thanks only from the observing and appreciative few, but he keeps on with them just the same. Our city is beautiful, but only because God made it so; man has helped not at all—in fact, he has hindered a great deal. After heroic effort Mr. Mitchell wrung from the Council the $1000 with which Charles Mulford Robinson laid out his plans for beautifying Los Angeles—for making parks, widening the streets, concentrating the public buildings in one spot. But the water question and the harbor question are occupying the attention of the Council, and the $1000 seems to be the limit of our city's expenditure, for some time to come, on municipal art.

T. E. Gibbon, president of the Fine Arts League, cited the remarkable fact that Los Angeles is the only city in the world without an art gallery, or a library, or any statue donated by the city. What little beauty we have around us has come from private sources.

Strangers in our midst, Mr. Gibbon went on to say, are struck with the natural beauty of our city, and with the artistic charm of our bungalows and small houses, but when they inquire about our galleries and museums, we are compelled to hang our heads and admit that we have none.

However, the situation does not seem hopeless to Mr. Gibbon. Our growth as a city has ben so phenomenally rapid that we have had neither time nor money for anything else than the enlargement of our boundaries. But a few years hence our water and our harbor will bring us great monetary returns, and with these we will build galleries and museums. Many of our citizens will grow rich from mines and oil, and will buy pictures for our galleries.

Too, the architectural beauty of our homes shows conclusively that the art spirit is not dead within us. On the contrary, it is very much alive, and is only seeking for an opportunity to express itself.

It behooves all of us who have an appreciation of art to keep that spirit alive in the community, and to foster it all we can. Though the task before us seems almost hopeless at times, we must not despair. The material success of Los Angeles will prove a solid foundation for the fairer structures that are to follow.

Certainly, we shall not lack for painters and sculptors when our time of need comes. Already they are with us, doing work that compares favorably with the work of artists anywhere. Though Los Angeles may as yet feel herself unable to buy their pictures and statues, let her have at least the grace not to belittle their efforts. Why dishonor a prophet, even if he lives next door?

Recent Portraits.

Helma Heynsen Jahn has just finished three interesting portraits. Two of them, those of J. E. Fishburn and Mrs. Fishburn, are life size. The other, a portrait of Mrs. Horlocker, the mother, the mother of Leta Horlocker, the decorative artist, is a little over half life size.

It goes without saying that all three portraits are strong in characterization, for a feeling for character is one of Mrs. Jahn's superlative merits. The portrait of Mr. Fishburn is especially alert and alive. It shows us a shrewd, kind face, with humorous eyes and mouth. The subject is leaning slightly forward in his chair, as if in confidential talk. The hair is remarkably well done, and the modeling of head and face is very good. The background is a pleasant gray-green.

The portrait of Mrs. Fishburn is also painted in an easy and natural pose. All the accessories are well done—the furs thrown carelessly over the shoulders, the lace yoke that covers the green gown, the chain and locket.

The portrait of Mrs. Horlocker, a regal old lady in lacy black, is strikingly successful in its rendering of a strong and dauntless character. The keen, dark eyes, the firm mouth, are instinct with life. Here, you feel in looking at it, is a woman of unusual force and originality. Yet the portrait is full of repose.

At Kanst's.

Among the good pictures shown at the Kanst gallery this week are a number of studies of Indian women and children by Grace Hudson, painted with the exquisite feeling for detail of canvases from Gerard Dow. In apprehension of character and expression, too, this artist is very unusual.

Benjamin Chambers Brown shows an excellent landscape with a reddish foreground of weeds, "Marshes Near San Francisco." Ralph Davidson Miller has a wood interior with a brook in the foreground. Granville Redmond shows three new landscapes, all among his best, his "Moonrise" being especially beautiful.

A number of outdoor studies from the brush of C. A. Fries, the San Diego painter, are also shown. They have good color, are imbued with true sentiment and are very simple and spontaneous.

ART NOTES.

An exhibition which will without doubt prove highly interesting is that which Eugene Torrey will hold in the fall. All the pictures will be watercolor studies of the missions of Southern California. Mr. Torrey painted the missions twenty years ago, before the "restoration" period, and is in possession of artistic material that no other painter can duplicate.

Los Angeles is soon to have a new art school. Rob Wagner, the portrait painter, is about to leave Santa Bar- bara for this city and will join forces with Joseph Greenbaum in get tion. The school will be located where in the downtown district.

Joseph Greenbaum returned Catalina Island last Thursday ing with him some unique for they were not painted bay at Avalon. Mr. Greenbaum for two weeks at the end of with F. W. Blanchard, "as a lemon."

The exhibition of artists Edgar Perara, now being Blanchard gallery under the ment of Mrs. Herman J. H Chicago Academy of Fine A remain open to the public gust 26.

The collection of pictures by Los Angeles artists now at the Steckel gallery will walls all through the summer.

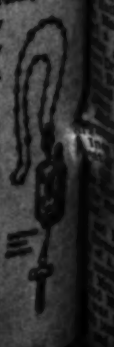
Rosaries
For Every Fancy

¶ Our showing of beautiful Rosaries affords the most liberal selection available in Los Angeles. We have the newest designs in Rosaries of solid gold, sterling silver, mother of pearl, turquoise enamel, bloodstone, topaz, amethyst, garnet, jet, ivory and crystal; also crucifixes of gold, silver and jet.



¶ The newest novelty is shown in the illustration. It is of 14-kt. solid gold, comprising the rosary and crucifix—and solid gold case in which they are carried. A monogram or initial may be engraved on the case, without extra cost.

¶ We always regard it as a privilege to show visitors the many interesting things in our stocks and we shall be glad to show you our many unusual creations in rosaries—whether you care to buy or not.

DON'T BE BALD

One of Our Readers Tells How She Obtained a Marvelous Growth of New Hair By the Use of a Simple Home Remedy After Hair Specialists and Hair Tonics Had All Failed.

I had what most people would call a beautiful head of golden hair. I prized it most highly, as I considered it my chief attraction. Suddenly it began to come out rapidly, and at times I had intense itching of the scalp. Physicians and hair specialists said my case was one of dandruff germs, hair microbes, etc., but nothing that they gave me did the slightest good. On the contrary, my hair seemed to come out even faster, and I was now fearful lest I should become entirely bald. In my despair a friend told me of an Ecuador herb which he said would positively grow hair on any bald head where the hair roots were not entirely gone, and he said the natives of the country where it grew were famous for their beautiful long hair. Upon medical advice I combined this herb with Bay Rum and Menthol Crystals and immediately began its use. In three applications it entirely stopped the intense itching of my scalp, and in a very short time it not only stopped my falling hair, but I noticed an abundance of new hair coming in. In less than one month my hair was longer, thicker and more beautiful than ever. All due to this marvelous hair-growing herb. A lady to whom I gave the formula used it on her daughter, and she says it made her hair grow five inches in less than a month. Doctors to whom I have shown it say it is the only thing which will actually grow new hair, therefore I think the people ought to have it. At first I thought I would keep it a secret and sell the secret, but when I think how I suffered and how badly I needed it, and how hundreds of others must need it the same as I did, I feel I ought to give it to the world.

Therefore I authorize this paper to publish the formula, which is as follows; Bay Rum, 6 oz.; Lavona de Compose, 2 oz.; Menthol Crystal, ½ dr.; To-Kalon Perfume, one to two teaspoonfuls.

Ask your druggist for an 8-oz. bottle containing 6 oz. of Bay Rum, then put in the Menthol Crystals and the Perfume. Next add one-half of the bottle of Lavona de Compose, let it stand six to eight hours and add the remainder of the Lavona de Compose. Always buy the Lavone de Compose in a 2-oz. sealed bottle, as this preparation contains the juice of the Ecuador herb mentioned above, and it loses its strength if unsealed.

Apply the preparation night and morning and rub well into the scalp. If properly used it will soon produce most astonishing results. Be careful not to get it on the face or any part of the body where you do not want to produce hair.

The demand for the above prescription has become so great and there has been so much difficulty in getting the pure, unadulterated juice of the Ecuador plant, which it contains, that a reliable chemical house has now undertaken its manufacture complete, and the best druggists, as well as the discoverer herself, advise all purchasers to use the complete product, known as Harriett Meta's Gold Medal Hair Tonic, which is put up by the To-Kalon Manufacturing Co., of 7 Rue Auber, Paris, France. All druggists keep it or can easily obtain it for you. A representative of the firm of the Dean Drug Co., stated yesterday that they had just secured a supply of the complete product.

ADJOINING HUNTINGTON BUILDING

in the St. Lawrence River against crack racers from Canada."

"What caused you to enter politics?"

"Oh, it was my blood, I suppose. My grandfather, Gen. Butler, had been Governor of Massachusetts, and my father had been Governor of Mississippi during the period of reconstruction. I had a natural inclination toward politics, and, aside from that, I thought it was my duty willingly to assume all the obligations of a citizen. So I was elected to the Common Council of Lowell in 1896, although opposed by the machine, and for three years, notwithstanding the machine, was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature. I ran for Congress in 1902 and have been elected three times since."

SERVED IN SPANISH WAR.

"Tell me about your experiences in the Spanish War."

"I was a lieutenant in Light Battery A, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, a well-disciplined and serious organization, made up, for the most part, of college men. When war seemed probable with Spain I naturally made an effort to get into the army. After some difficulty I was made a lieutenant and the adjutant of the Sixth Massachusetts Infantry and came with the regiment to Camp Alger, near the city of Washington. Gen. Graham detailed me as acting engineer of the Second Army Corps, and I drove wells for the camp and built a number of bridges.

"At Charleston, S. C., where we had gone to take passage on the Yale for Cuba, I became involved in an incident that nearly ended my career as a soldier. The Yale couldn't get up the river, and the regiment was taken thirteen miles to its anchorage in a side-wheel steamer. On the last trip of the steamer an officer, superior to me in rank, ordered me into the city on a matter of business. I ran all the way and back, only to find the vessel, with the last of the regiment, in the middle of the river, heading for the sea under a full head of steam. I saw at once that a deliberate attempt had been made to leave me behind.

"My training at West Point and my service in the Light Battery had shown me, of course, that discipline is absolutely necessary among soldiers. I had done all I could to prepare the Sixth Regiment for actual fighting in Cuba, to the loss of my personal popularity among some of the officers and men. Albert West, who had been Gen. Butler's body servant during the Civil War and had always remained in our family, accompanied me when I entered the army. He told me that at least four members of the Sixth Regiment meant to shoot me at the first opportunity. If any of the men really purposed to kill me they soon changed their minds. The regiment rapidly learned the lesson of efficient military service, and when the old Sixth came back from Porto Rico, I, as lieutenant-colonel, there wasn't a better organization of fighting men in the whole army.

SOME ARMY EXPERIENCE.

"Well, as I stood on the dock and saw the side-wheel steamer churning out to sea I was the maddest man in America. Before I left home my father sewed $500 in the lining of my clothing, saying that the money might be of great use to me under certain contingencies. I hunted for a boat in which to follow the side-wheel steamer. Finally I found an ocean tug with banked fires. I paid the captain $400, and he got me to the Yale just before it sailed for Cuba. The regiment had rations for thirteen days, but were eighteen days on the water. Before we reached land again the men were eating raw salt pork and tomatoes right out of the cans, while the ship itself was in a horrible condition."

"Did you have," I asked, "what might be called a baptism of fire during your service?"

"Yes, and it was decidedly ludicrous, even if it seemed to be desperately serious. When we reached Guanica, Porto Rico, every man was crazy to get ashore. In the rush I saw some horses, hardly larger than ponies, but the native in charge declined to negotiate. After a marine had touched him gently, but suggestively, with his bayonet, and I had displayed some money, the man brought the horses up. Not being provided with a saddle, I selected a fat, white mare, which, I was surprised to learn afterwards, was the mother of a colt of the same color. Hence it transpired that Ames and his little lamb, were generally, not to say facetiously, mentioned.

"My troubles began when I found that the mare wouldn't move an inch unless the colt was at her side, or better still, in front, where she could see it all the time. That night we sent several companies out on the Yauco road, near the enemy's lines, with orders to shoot at everything white, that being the color of the Spanish uniform. Banana leaves, tipped by the wind, as do other kinds of tropical vegetation, look to be white. So there was a popping of muskets all night through.

HIS BAPTISM OF FIRE.

"I wanted to go to the front and was let off with the understanding that I should return by 7 o'clock next morning. At midnight I set out on the white mare, the miserable colt trotting along very comfortably. I heard firing and recognized our own Springfield rifles, but I was not conscious at first that the men of the Sixth were shooting at my horse. Presently, however, the ping of bullets getting closer and closer to the target, unmistakably meant that the mare and colt out there in the dark looked unmistakably Spanish.

"If I turned back, I would be misunderstood at camp, so I argued. Somebody might say that Ames had been frightened. If the mare were turned loose she would return to Guanica and a detail of men would be sent to find my body. While thinking what to do, a ball hit the colt and broke its leg. Whereupon the mother became tremendously excited. By strategy and main strength I got away from the colt, walking to minimize danger, and pulling the mare by a long strap, which I pieced out with the reins of the bridle.

"During the skirmish that occurred early in the morning, our men ducked into the trenches—one officer got down so fast that he tore the top of his head on a wire fence, which caused him to yell, 'Boys, I'm shot!' Meanwhile I stood up, not through bravery or because I desired to be dramatic, but simply because I had been a perambulating target the night before and had recovered from the inevitable first fright of every soldier. We killed a number of Spaniards, and found forty of their wounded in a hospital the next day. The following month I was made lieutenant-colonel of the regiment, and later the civil administrator of the Arecibo district."

"Did Gen. Butler ever give you any principles by which to shape your life?"

"None that I can remember. I recollect, however, that I once heard him say he hoped God would prolong his days until he had succored all his friends and punished all his enemies."

"He was described as being uncommonly resourceful and shrewd," I remarked, with the object of getting some new light on a strange subject.

POOR JUDGE OF HUMAN NATURE.

"Many of the stories printed about him were grotesquely untrue," Col. Ames answered. "Nevertheless, Gen. Butler was a ready and sagacious man. Singular as it may seem, he was not a good judge of human nature, and often was grossly imposed upon by persons who had aroused his sympathy. He really seemed to think that every man was honest, and was trying to do his best, according to his ability and understanding. It was one of the unexplained mysteries of the family how poor persons, in need of money or counsel, could always tell when he would be at home. He would go to New York or come to Washington on business and we would not know the day of his return. But men and women wanting to borrow money or to get free advice would begin to assemble in our hall in the morning, where they would silently sit in chairs along the wall, and presently Gen. Butler would drive up from the railway station.

JOKE ON THE BUTCHER.

"The grounds around Gen. Butler's house were large and he kept more dogs than were really necessary. One morning while he was walking to his office a butcher whom he knew came out and said: 'General, if a dog should run into your shop and steal a turkey, what would you do?'

"'I would make the owner of the dog pay for the turkey.'

"The next day the butcher sent Gen. Butler a bill for $5, with a note of explanation. Gen. Butler replied that the bill was reasonable and just, but that he would have to charge the butcher $25 for legal counsel. Neither bill, of course was ever paid—the butcher enjoyed the joke as much as Gen. Butler.

"My grandfather ran for President of the United States in 1884 on the anti-monopoly and labor ticket. I went campaigning with him in his private car. At Detroit he spoke in the evening from a pagoda in a park. Electric lights made the place as light as day. The park was full of people. Indeed, the crowd was so dense that Albert West had to carry me to the speaker's stand. I could see nothing but thousands of human faces. Occasionally a woman would faint and be passed back over the heads of the immense audience. When Gen. Butler began his speech the big noises in the world broke loose. His enemies stormed and howled, and his friends cheered and swung their hats. Amid the confusion a man on top of the pagoda lowered a tin spoon by a string. Turning round and round in the electric light, it was a very conspicuous object. Every one in the park saw it, and the cat-calls and shouts were truly terrific. When the spoon came on the line of Gen. Butler's vision, he grasped the string, and, calling for a knife, cut it in two with a mighty slash. Holding the spoon above his head, he waited for silence. In a moment the order was perfect.

"'Here is one,' Gen. Butler said, and he was heard to the very edge of the crowd; 'here is one I didn't get in New Orleans.'

NOT ANNOYED AGAIN.

"With that he thrust the spoon into his coat pocket. He then proceeded with his speech, and was not annoyed or interrupted. The whole matter may have been arranged. However, I didn't make any inquiries, and I never heard Gen. Butler comment on the incident."

"Did you ever cruise with him in the yacht America?"

"I lived with him at sea for many days at a time, and saw him play hundreds of games of poker. He loved anything in the nature of contest. The America won the cup in the great international yacht race of 1851. It was bought by an Englishman who, as the story goes, brought a cargo of African slaves to America. During the Civil War it was a blockade runner, carrying contraband goods between our southern ports, Cuba and the West Indies. It was finally chased up the St. Johns River and sunk. Raised by the Federals, it was one of the ships that went out to hunt the Alabama. After the war it was taken to Annapolis. A Frenchman claimed it under the law that protects the property of neutrals. Gen. Butler bought his rights and bid the yacht in when the United States offered it for sale at auction. The America is still owned by my family, but I can't afford to run a yacht and run for Congress at the same time, and consequently I keep it tied up and out of commission."

GOLDEN GATE CLUB LIVELY.

Californians in Gotham Keep Up Western Spirit.

Comfortable Quarters Maintained for Guests.

Many Members Are Distinguished in Arts.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Descendants of the "Forty-niners" foregather these days in New York's newest State colony, which recently opened its new house, at No. 162 West Fiftieth street, as the Golden Gate Professional Club.

Not all the members are related to the pioneers, for some of them have been pioneers of a later age themselves and others dwelt only a short time in the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers and have come to the metropolis of Mrs. Beaumont Packard, president.

Parlor of Golden Gate Professional Club.

Where Exiled Californians Foregather

Gothem, and photograph of president of new organization, the object of which is to aid Californians, and especially to advise and guide young women from the State.

e Western world seeking fortune. any of them have found it, others me, and all of them are glad to have iscovered New York. Their thoughts ten revert, however, to the old days y the Golden Gate, and when they eet in the parlor of the club and exange reminiscences it seems as if an Francisco and the old days had turned.

There are some who have heard eir forbears tell of the excitement of e old gold fever days, while many joice in the traditions of the Califrnia stage, both of the overland and e theatrical varieties.

The membership of the club, as its ame implies, is composed of Califrnians who are engaged professionly in the drama, music, painting, ulpture, playwriting, journalism, the w, medicine or science.

THRIVING CLUB.

Young in years is this organization, t it has been thriving, for it was unded in June, 1907. There were urteen Californians at the first meetg, who were drawn together by a eling of loneliness, and they resolved see that for all who might be milarly situated there should be a ven. There were meetings at varis hotels, and finally the Flanders as made the headquarters, and there veral banquets were held. The four ory brown stone house which the ganization has leased has been comrtably furnished, and it is likely that other house or two will be added to as the club develops.

The president of the organization is rs. Beaumont Packard, and the easurer and secretary, Mrs. Greta J. therland, and it is due largely to eir energy and perseverance that the w home of the club has been preared and furnished within the last onth. There was a house warming hich brought back the days by the olden Gate and after the meeting in e long double parlor the company nt prospecting in the regions below r real California punch and found a in of remarkable strength and riches.

The decorations of the main room of e club were emblematic of the life the Pacific Slope. Occupying a conicuous place was a replica of the mous bear flag of the early republic California, the original of which is ll carefully preserved at Sacramento. the old days when the possibility of lifornia leaving the jurisdiction of exico was discussed in a fervent anner the Americans who were ere raised this banner as a defiance the land of the Aztecs which in 1847 s still in possession of the rich terory and as a formal notice that ey had taken charge of the place in e name of the United States.

ORIGIN OF BEAR FLAG.

There was not a large edition of the ars and Stripes at hand, and so they n up instead an improvised banner hich they thought was well furnished th all the emblems needful. The enusiastic pioneers first acquired a rge white sheet, on which one of em who was of an artistic frame of ind painted a grizzly bear in black int. The critics decided that black d white did not make a warm ough combination for rallying purses, so they cut a red flannel shirt strips and made a crimson border the bottom. The legend "Republic California" was painted under the izzly and a red star was limned just front of his nose. The ensign was isted with three cheers, and Califrnia has been happy ever since. The d pioneers were more quiet in their positions when they were reinforced er by American troops.

It is one of the objects of the Gold Gate Professional Club to accumu a small museum of relics of the rly days of the State. The club is rgely furnished in the mission style, d there are nooks within it which constantly suggest the home on the Pacific slope.

Those who belong to the club are bound by many ties to the old State. Mrs. Packard, the president, as Miss Clara Beaumont, was one of the favorites of the California stage. Mrs. Sutherland, who was Miss Josephi of California, is a daughter of one of the pioneers of '49, and is a niece of Michael de Young of the San Francisco Chronicle. Frank Howard, the vice-president, is connected with a well-known music publishing house in this city. William Gregory, a director, is in business here, and Frank Winch, another director, is the publisher of a theatrical periodical.

DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS.

Among the members of the club are David Belasco, playwright, whose humble beginning was in San Francisco; Joseph Grismer, theatrical manager, who can remember, if he tries, the days when he played in tents on the Pacific Slope; Miss Blanche Bates, a Belasco star; Miss Florence Roberts, also a well-known actress; Milton Nobles, actor and manager; Marcus R. Mayer, theatrical manager; Hall McAllister, Homer Davenport, cartoonist; Nicholas Long, Jeffries Lewis, Grace Wilmott, Bert Franklin, Mrs. Fannie Meyer Ellis, Miss Ada Deaves, Holbrook Blinn, Miss Ethel Brandon, Charles Brackett, Miss Mabel Bert, C. Albani, Robert Fulford, Miss Dorothy Rossmore, Harry Ross and Maurice V. Samuels.

One of the objects of the club is to give aid to Californians, and it seeks especially to advise and guide young women from the Golden Gate. It intends to give a benefit performance in September at one of the theaters.

Mrs. Joe Bailey.

Wife of the Brilliant Senator from Texas Comes of the Most Illustrious Families of the South.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey is a native of Mississippi and, after completing his education, went in pursuit of fame and fortune to the Titan of States, Texas. Mrs. Bailey was born in Walker county, Texas, but in her early girlhood her parents removed to Oxford, Miss. There she grew to maturity, received her education and married Senator Bailey, who took her back to the land of her birth. Thus it is proved that the migration of the human kind may be as fascinating a study as the roving habits of the lesser occupants of the terrestial sphere. Those who delight in such a study will discover a rich vein in tracing the history of the great men from whom Mrs. Bailey traces her descent.

Few women in official life can claim the blood of more eminent men than Mrs. Bailey. Two of her great-grandfathers have written their names in large letters in the martial affairs of the times. John Adair of Kentucky is famous along many lines, and Richard Clough Anderson was a revolutionary hero and his mother was Elizabeth Clark, the sister of two beloved men in revolutionary annals, Gen. George Rogers Clark and William Clark, the co-explorer with Lewis. Her parents were William Preston Murray and Ellen Adair Anderson, and in their veins flowed the best blood of the old South. Mrs. Bailey has heard history talked from her earliest childhood by men who possessed the traditions of the formative period of American history. She knows the phases and the inner facts and all the details which are so fascinating to hear. Her mother, now dead about fourteen years, was an authority on historical questions of ante-bellum times and she illuminated the lives of the great men of her day with a fund of valuable anecdote and personal deduction.

Naturally Mrs. Bailey has inherited this love of tracing historical conclusions and is deeply interested in the developments of the present era. But she is essentially the domestic type of woman and her home absorbs the major portion of her time.

"I am not among the malcontents of the National Capitol," said Mrs. Bailey recently, "for I find that life here may be agreeable. I think Washington should be considered a Paradise among homekeepers. The markets are supplied so abundantly with all the good things and so early in the season. I am among the old-fashioned homekeepers, who delight in going to market and in giving personal supervision to what is placed on my table. It is never a wearisome task. There is a world of enjoyment in these pilgrimages—the queer people, the quaint sights, the humor in the general situation, all appeal to me as well as the consciousness of accomplishing something worth while. I think it eminently worth while to have good fresh wholesome food for the table and, like many others, I have discovered that nothing is quite so satisfactory in achieving this end as to purchase for your commissary department yourself.

"I am partial to the early morning for such duties and really it appears no hardship to live in Washington even in the heated term when life offers such an endless variety of scenes. The parks are a delight, the river is all that the most tireless traveler could see in a foreign land and, as I have said before, the street scenes can prove an inspiration to the most jaded. Then when the material part of existence has been attended to, Washington offers so much for those of literary or artistic turn. In this, however, there are many cities which offer as great inducements and it is a source of gratification to those who are solicitous in every part of the Union. It now seems possible for every one who has earnest intentions to obtain at slight expenditure all the good reading which can be digested. The library reports which come in from different parts of the country show tremendous impetus to the reading public, and I think this a hopeful sign in the national development."

The history of Gen. John Adair furnishes a notable instance of what Mrs. Bailey suggests and the details of the famous controversy which that veteran had with Jackson contains the elements of as much adventure and romance as in any of Scott's tales of the border wars. John Adair's name is honored in four State bys having counties called for him, but he is best known in the State of his adoption, Kentucky, where he emigrated from South Carolina in his boyhood. In Kentucky he was honored in many public capacities and in 1805 he came to Washington as a Senator. In the preliminary contests leading up to the war of 1812, Adair served Gov. Shelby as adjutant-general and was with him in this capacity at the Battle of the Thames. His bravery was acknowledged at the War Department and when the troops of the South hastened to the aid of Jackson at New Orleans, he led the cohorts of Kentucky. Jackson's celebrated invective against the conduct of the Kentuckians at Chalmette led Gen. Adair to challenge Old Hickory to a duel, and the encounter took place, but without serious injury to either combatant. But the sting of Jackson's words led to a division in political ranks and for a long time those who were with the Kentucky troops held themselves aloof from the party which supported Jackson. Gen. Adair, after an eventful and honorable martial and civil career, ended his days in peaceful retirement. He served in both houses of Legislature, having entered the lower house in 1831, after he had reached the venerable age of 75. But he proved a power even then and was among the giants of his day in the matter of achievement and endurance. The history of his day and generation could be the background of a story as enthralling as Scott could paint.

Mrs. Bailey finds abundant material for historical study in her own native State, where she now holds such a high social post. That magnificent oration of Senator (then Representative) Bailey on the glorious history of the State prior to the Spanish-American War, when there was some discussion about subdividing its vast area, is fresh in the public mind. Mrs. Bailey is just as enthusiastic an admirer of the domain and she has learned its resources and studied the evolution as only those who labor for love can. A devotion to nature and to pastoral scenery is another characteristic almost as pronounced as her revential devotion to the annals of the past, and in Texas Mrs. Bailey finds an ample outlet. She rejoices in the vast extent of the empire of the Rio Grande as many love to call it and in the changed aspect of nature, especially the rolling country famous for cattle breeding. In her own home, Gainesville, Mrs. Bailey shows the same domestic inclinations which are so dominant in Washington. She is renowned in that region of good homekeepers, but to this she adds the wider culture which comes from study, travel and good reading. She is fond of flowers and gives much attention to the exquisite native blossoms and to exotics which thrive well. She is also devoted to music and plays well herself, though of recent years her musical tastes have been of the tacit than the active order. As in Washington, she gives most of her time after the home duties are accomplished to reading and hearing good music and lectures on art and literature.

Mrs. Bailey, as a young girl, was one of the famous belles of Mississippi. She is considered now one of the handsomest women in official life and is one of the most youthful-looking, who boasts of grown children. Like Tennyson's daughter of the gods, she is far above the average height and is as graceful in manner as she is in movement. Like all southern women, she is somewhat reserved in her intercourse with the general public, but in her own home she is most cordial and delightful of hostesses. Mrs. Bailey does not take a prominent part in the doings of Vanity Fair, but she extends a wide hospitality to those who have the slightest claim on her family, personally, or to the State as represented by her husband. Her home in Stoneleigh Court is typical of its mistress. The rooms are open to sun and air, and there are growing plants all about and good books and a piano strewn with excellent musical compositions. During the season, Mrs. Bailey keeps her days at home and returns her calls and attends to her social duties with exactitude, all without any of the trouble of which nearly all the Senatorial hostesses complain. She is an indefatigable homekeeper whenever the national Legislature is in session and she is here at the first hour and to the last, no matter to what length the sessions draw.

Mrs. Bailey takes little or no interest in the so-called woman movements and again in this she is representative of her class. The woman's clubs draw but sparsely from the gentlewoman of the South, and for this reason which Mrs. Dickinson, wife of the Secretary of War, so brilliantly advanced. "In the South," said Mrs. Dickinson, "the women have always been a power; they have been consulted and their opinions have been respectfully received by public men and on public issues. So, as a rule, they have no desire to fill public roles. They taste power in the sweetest sense in that they direct the forces which direct the national issues." Mrs. Bailey, though well informed on every political question, is not concerned about the so-called rights of woman nor any of the questions involved in the propaganda. She takes a vital interest in what concerns the welfare of her home community, the school resources, the libraries, the general sanitary conditions and such themes. But she has never found it necessary to plunge into politics on her own account to have any of these affairs properly cared for.

An Elderly Woman With a Young Skin

A lady whose name would be instantly recognized by every reader, is old enough to have a granddaughter, who, the gossips say, is engaged to be married—yet her skin is as fresh and velvety as that of a girl, and the bloom of youth is still on her cheeks. "Of course," she says, when her friends pay wondering compliments to her appearance. "I am a healthy woman, but good health isn't all. I know many women of my age who are stronger than I am, but whose skin resembles a piece of parchment. My advice to all elderly people—and the young folks, too, for that matter—is to use Harfina Soap. That's the secret of my skin. The healing balsam of the pure pine which it contains seems to have wonderful curative and preservative powers. It is not only a thorough cleanser, but a soothing, healing, beautifying balm. To use it is a constant delight, and the effect it produces is a little short of marvelous." Take advantage of this interesting bit of personal experience and use Harfina Soap for your own toilet and bath. Ask your druggist or any of the following druggists for this splendid soap, 25c a cake, or sent by mail on receipt of 25c. Send for book, "The Care of the Skin."

LOVE THE CRIMINAL.

A SUNDAY SERIAL OF UNBROKEN INTEREST.

By J. B. Harris-Burland.

[Copyright, 1908, by J. B. Harris-Burland.]

before me is an interesting one, but it is very difficult."

"Why can't you leave it alone?" cried Tankeriane. "It can't make any difference to you one way or the other."

"The problem is a very difficult one," she continued, as though she had not heard the interruption, "for even if she loves you, it might be better for me to tell her the truth. I could, of course, divorce you. Then she could be legally married to you, and you could both live happily ever afterward."

A cold sweat broke out on Tankeriane's forehead. This woman, more keen and subtle of mind than himself, presented a fresh facet of thought to every argument.

"The shame would break her heart," he said gently.

"Not if she loved you," the woman replied; "not if she really loved you. The first sting of it would be keen; but you would justify your deception. You would be willing to make amends. She would forgive you; she would be glad that she had learnt the truth in time; she would think of her children, and she would be glad."

"I think you had better leave well alone," he stammer lamely; "we are happy. Surely that is enough. Your motives are doubtless excellent, but I am sure that if you interfere you will only make mischief."

"I shall see," she replied. "I am here today for that purpose. I shall see if she loves you, and then I shall know how to act."

"She loves me," he said doggedly.

"Doesn't it strike you as curious that she has left us so long alone together? It almost seems as though she knew that—almost as though she wished to place a temptation in your path."

"A temptation?" said the man scornfully. "She knows that I love her with all my heart and soul, and that no woman on earth could tempt me."

But in spite of the scorn in his voice he had felt the sting of the woman's words. It was more than possible, nay, it was probable, that Laura had for some reason or other purposely left him alone with Mrs. Bonsal. He moved toward the door. He realized that he must see Laura before she entered the room. He must ask her, must implore her, to pretend to love him while Mrs. Bonsal was present.

Then he stopped. He remembered that, even if Mrs. Bonsal was convinced of Laura's love for him, she might still think it best to speak the truth. He floated between Scylla and Charybdis, between the grinding rocks and the whirlpool of the sea.

And, before he could make up his mind what course to take, the door opened and Laura herself entered with an apologetic smile on her face.

"I am so sorry," she said, crossing to Mrs. Bonsal's side. "But I've had an awful time downstairs with Mons. Taque. I dare say, however, you two have not missed me; you have had a long, long talk over old times. Eh? Well, I think we'll have tea now."

And from that moment the whole scene outwardly passed from tragedy to the commonplace. A stranger would have seen nothing but the ordinary spectacle of a man and two women discussing trifles over their teacups. Yet Mrs. Bonsal's whole mind was on the alert to discover whether Laura loved her husband. Laura was trying to find out whether the actress still loved Tankeriane, and Tankeriane himself felt like a criminal before his judge.

Yet they all three chatted together as though there were no more serious troubles in life than dressmaker's bills, and when they parted, an hour later, the two women kissed each other on the cheek.

William Tankeriane was anxious to leave Paris as soon as possible, but his wife, by an irony of fate, was taken ill with influenza the day after the tea party, and it was impossible to move her from the hotel.

THE KNOT AND THE SWORD.

During her illness Laura conceived a strange and overpowering desire for the company of Mrs. Bonsal, and all Tankeriane's efforts to keep the two women apart were doomed to failure. The doctor said that Mrs. Tankeriane must be humored, and so it came to pass that Mrs. Bonsal was a frequent visitor at the Hotel Imperial, and almost took upon herself the duties of a nurse.

Strange though it may seem to one unversed in the ways of women, these two, who by all laws of nature should have been deadly enemies, had formed a friendship, in which self-interest and a desire to pry into each other's affairs found no part. They had conceived a genuine liking for each other.

The actress, who alone knew the truth, was not at all jealous of the woman who had assumed her lawful place. She had cut out Tankeriane from her life as completely as though he had never existed. All her thoughts were for the woman who believed herself to be Tankeriane's wife. She had a genuine desire to help Laura, and, though she could not decide whether to tell her the truth or keep silence, her decision would only be influenced by the most unselfish motives.

Laura, on the other hand, who knew nothing of the truth, and who merely suspected that at some time or other William Tankeriane had been in love with Mrs. Bonsal, found this suspicion no obstacle to friendship. She did not love the man she believed to be her husband, and his past amours were nothing to her. The situation was much simplified by the fact that neither of the women had the slightest consideration for Mr. Tankeriane.

It was not long before Mrs. Bonsal found out what she wished to know. Perhaps Laura, in her weak state of health, was less able to disguise her emotions, and to pretend an affection that she did not feel. Perhaps, on the other hand, she took no pains to hide the truth from the kindly woman who attended so thoughtfully to all her wants and comforts. But, in any case, Mrs. Bonsal learned the truth, and realized that Mrs. Tankeriane was not in love with her husband, and that his presence was even repugnant to her.

This discovery gave Mrs. Bonsal much food for reflection. Such a position would have been quite in the ordinary course of events if the young couple had been married for any length of time. But they were still on their honeymoon. It was probable, therefore, that Laura had married a man she had never loved, and was never likely to love. Why did she marry him? That was the question which presented itself to Mrs. Bonsal's mind, and it was a question to which she could find no answer.

One thing, however, she intended to discover, and that was, whether Laura desired her freedom, and, if not, whether she would rather have her marriage legalized before a child was born. It was a difficult, almost an impossible matter to approach, and Mrs. Bonsal thought long and carefully before she decided on the most delicate method of ascertaining Laura's wishes.

She finally decided to adopt a ruse, which is at least as old as the days of David, and which has never yet been surpassed for arriving at a personal opinion through the medium of an impersonal problem.

Mrs. Bonsal waited till the day before Mrs. Tankeriane was going to leave Paris.

"You are really leaving tomorrow?" she said, as they sat alone in the sitting-room at the Hotel Imperial.

"Yes," answered Laura faintly, "we are leaving. My husband absolutely refuses to stay another day in Paris. The doctor says I can travel if the necessary precautions are taken."

"I shall be sorry to lose you, dear," said Mrs. Bonsal, "very, very sorry," and she laid her hand on the invalid's thin white fingers.

"I am very sorry to go," replied Laura. "Do you know, Leonore, I can't help thinking that my husband dislikes you, and that he is leaving Paris to get me away from you. He announced his intention of going on the day after we first met you."

"I know that your husband dislikes me," Mrs. Bonsal replied, "and if we are to be friends, I should like to tell you the reason why he dislikes me. It is a sordid story, but I think it is right that you should know."

"I should like to know," murmured Laura faintly. "I am sure that, whatever you did, you would always try to act for the best."

Mrs. Bonsal leaned over and kissed her.

"Many years ago," Mrs. Bonsal began, "your husband was a great friend of Mr. Bonsal's. He did not know me at that time, for I had been separated from Mr. Bonsal for some years. We had never been divorced, as there was no cause for divorce on either side. We had merely agreed to part.

"Then it so happened that Mr. Bonsal fell passionately in love with a girl, and, as I subsequently found out, persuaded the girl to marry him, though she did not love him.

Fate brought me once more on the scene, and I found Mr. Bonsal, under another name, apparently married to this girl. The girl knew nothing of the truth, and believed that she was the man's wife.

"Two courses were now open to me: I could keep silence or I could proclaim the truth. I had no thought of myself in the matter, I did not even consider Mr. Bonsal. I only wished to do that which was best for the girl."

"And what did you do?" Laura asked, eagerly.

"I told the truth. I argued that, if the girl did not love him, she would perhaps be glad of an escape from bondage, and that, whether she loved him or not, it would be better for her to know the truth. I intended, if she wished it, to divorce him, so that he could be legally married to her."

"You did right," cried Laura fiercely. "You did right. And what happened then?"

"I believe," continued Mrs. Bonsal, as though she had not heard the question, "that I did right—am sure that I did right. But it was a cruel blow to strike."

"And what happened then?" Laura repeated, with her eyes fixed on Mrs. Bonsal's face.

The actress did not answer. Her story had come to an end. The rest lay in the future. Her fertile brain could easily have invented a conclusion to the tale, but she wished to arouse Laura's suspicions of the truth, and, in order to do this, she kept silence.

"Surely that is not the end of the story," continued Laura, with dogged persistence. "Did the girl love the man or not? Did the result justify your action?"

"The girl did not love the man," Mrs. Bonsal replied with downcast eyes, and an intentional hesitation in her voice.

"What did you do?" asked Laura. She had as yet no suspicion of the truth.

The situation was becoming unbearable.

Mrs. Bonsal's heart beat very fast. She had resolved to tell everything, but she had no wish to do it in so many words. She wanted Laura herself to guess the truth. She was again silent, and twined her fingers together nervously. She desired to let her actions speak for her. It seemed impossible that any one could fail to misinterpret her confusion.

"That is a lame end to the story, Leonore," said Laura, after a long pause. "Why don't you look at me? Is the end painful? Ah, I see, things did not turn out right after all. You found that you had not acted for the best. Well, don't tell me any more, dear. I am sure that you were right in what you did. My husband, I suppose, thought that you were wrong. As a friend of Mr. Bonsal's, he thought you had acted from motives of jealousy and spite. But you were right. No good, no right-thinking woman could have acted otherwise."

Mrs. Bonsal was silent, and her face grew very white and haggard. She had failed to arouse any suspicion of the truth. It would have to be spoken openly. It was a cruel piece of business, but it would have to be carried through remorselessly. No delicacy of speech or language could hide the brutality of it. Mrs. Bonsal rose from her chair, and, falling on her knees by Laura's side, took hold of the thin white hands and pressed them to her lips.

"What is it, dear?" said Laura. "I am so sorry—I wish I had not asked you to tell the story."

"Laura," replied Mrs. Bonsal in a voice that hardly rose above a whisper, "is it possible that you do not understand. I have tried so hard to make you understand—so hard, Laura." She bowed her head over the girl's hands, and the white fingers were wet with tears.

Laura looked down on the dark masses of lustrous hair, and wondered why this woman had flung herself at her feet. It almost seemed as though she were praying for forgiveness. But still no suspicion of the truth entered her mind.

"Oh, why can't you understand?" cried Mrs. Bonsal, raising her tear-stained face, and looking at Laura with her large bright eyes. "Must I tell you in so many words; must I tell you that there is no end to the story you have just heard, because—the end has yet to come?" and once more the woman bowed her head, as though she were about to receive a blow.

Laura looked at her for a few moments in silence, with a puzzled expression on her face. Then suddenly the truth came to her like a blinding flash of light. It leapt into her eyes like fire, and flamed forth in crimson on her white cheeks and brow. Mrs. Bonsal could not see her face, but she knew by the thrill that had passed through the girl's body that at last she understood.

"Laura," she murmured in a broken voice, "if I have not done right, forgive me. I have accepted your judgment. You told me that I had done right."

Laura did not answer. The color had died from her face, and the light from her eyes. Yet the shock of what she had heard vibrated through every nerve and muscle of her body. For the moment she could not think; she could not realize her position. Tankeriane was a dim figure set afar in the darkness; the woman at her feet was a mere picture, an inanimate object in the foreground; she herself seemed to have no connection with either of them. She had been swept out of touch with all the realities. Vague thoughts and ideas poured through her brain, but, before she could grasp them, they had fled. She heard a faint sound in the distance like the moaning of the wind among trees. It was Mrs. Bonsal crying softly to herself.

Then by degrees her mind seemed to focus itself, and things began to show more clearly out of the whirling chaos. She saw Mrs. Bonsal, crouching like some poor suppliant, with bowed head, and eyes that dared not look at her. She moved her hands, and raised the woman's face till she could look straight into the large dark eyes.

For one brief moment the two women looked into each other's very hearts. Then Mrs. Bonsal rose quickly to her feet and walked away to the window. Laura stared after her, as though she did not yet realize what had happened. And then at last she spoke.

"So—you— are— Mrs.— Tankeriane," she said slowly, as if she required time to weigh the value of every word.

"I am Mrs. Tankeriane," replied the other woman in a passionless voice, and without turning round.

"And I?" continued Laura, "who am I?" She paused for a moment, and then she rose to her feet, with a look of horror on her face, and the hot blood rushing to her cheeks.

"What am I?" she cried bitterly. "Oh, God, what am I?" And she buried her face in her hands, not to hide her tears, but to cover the red flush of shame.

Mrs. Bonsal left the window, and, coming to her side, threw her arms about her neck.

"There is no shame," she whispered, "for you. The shame is for William Tankeriane. You are innocent enough, heaven knows. But you had to know the truth; I had to tell it you for your own sake. You yourself said that I was right to speak the truth. Whether you love the man or not, I was right. But you do not love him; I know that you do not love him."

Laura freed herself from the woman's embrace, and laughed. "I am glad," she cried; "I am glad! You have set me free! Thank God, I am free!"

And again she laughed, not hysterically, but rather like one whose heart is full of joy, like one who has long dwelt in darkness, and who at last has caught the first glimpse of light.

Mrs. Bonsal had recovered her self-possession, and she saw that matters would have to be brought down from the dizzy heights to which emotion had carried them, and placed on the level ground of practical common sense. She realized that she had yet to complete the work that she had begun, to justify it by some definite act which would ensure a successful issue. She had set great forces in motion. It was her duty to see that they moved the life of the woman before her to some ultimate goal of happiness.

"Laura, dear," she said gently, "let us talk this matter over calmly. It is a crisis in your life. I have no interests of my own to consider. I merely want you to do what is best for your own happiness, and I will help you to do it."

She took the girl by the arm and led her to a sofa, where they sat down side by side. The sudden burst of happiness had died from Laura's face. She looked white and tired. She was calm, now that the agony of the situation was over. The storm had passed, and the sea, strewn with wreckage, was still.

For a while they sat in silence, neither of them willing to start a conversation, which shorn of all sentiment, would bring with it a sordid and unsavory atmosphere. Leonore, as might have been expected, was the first to speak. The whole matter had long ago been threshed out in her mind.

"We must talk calmly of this," she began, "and the less we talk of it, the better for both of us. We need not discuss the man's conduct. We have to deal with facts as they are. Now, what do you wish to do. What do you intend to do yourself?"

"I intend to leave him," Laura replied in a hard voice. "To leave him at once, this very day. I should like to leave before he returns. I do not wish to see him again."

"That would not be just either to yourself or to him. The worst criminal has a right to defend himself before final judgment is passed on him."

"There is no defense," said Laura coldly. "There might be extenuating circumstances, but the one real fact would remain."

"It is possible," continued Leonore, "that I am not speaking the truth. You know nothing about me. Suppose that I were a mere adventuress, lying to serve her own purposes?"

"I know that you have spoken the truth."

Leonore smiled. "That is a kind sentiment," she replied, "but it is not justice; it is not the sort of justice a man would require. I think, however painful the interview may be to you, that you ought to see him."

TRUE HEROINES.

The Women Who Monotonously Wash Dishes Day After Day to Save Daughters from Drudgery.

Heroines, indeed, with their praises unsung are the women who go through the deadly monotony of washing dishes three times a day for 365 days in the year, and to know that when the 365 days are ended another 365 will begin, and that this will continue in the long stretch of years yet to be lived. It is enough to drive the average woman to distraction.

The mothers of the American race are, generally speaking, the dishwashers. Cooks and other professional dishwashers are daily wrecking china to get it clean, but they are doing it in a careless, sloppy, indifferent way, just so they can collect their wages.

But when it comes to conscientious, intelligent dishwashing, one may say that it is done by the mothers of the race. The American mother is doing the dishwashing.

Ethel is too busy entertaining Algernon in the parlor, and any way, mother wants Ethel to have her chance in life. Dishwashing and such duties will make Ethel's hands coarse and rough, and poor, dear mother wants Ethel to have a better show in life than she has had.

Mabel, the other daughter, is too wrapped up in her high school duties and with her music to ever think of giving mother a helping hand.

How many women are now doing dishwashing who once did nothing but a bit of fancy work, and these are the heroines whose praises are unsung, the daily drudgery is to them much worse than if they had been trained to it from early days. Their fingers may even now itch to play beautiful melodies, but work has so stiffened their hands that only a pitiful result would come from the attempt.

They have no hope of a future for themselves other than a daily vista of dishwashing. The father of the family may have found his level in life, and the mother knows there is nothing else for her. There is no hero like the mother who tackles the dreary task of washing a stack of dishes three times a day.

WHEN WOMEN VOTE.

Their Ballots Will Be for Measures Looking for the Betterment of the Home.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Ever since the first mention of woman suffrage was made on the Each and All page, I have been wanting to write in defense of it. Every week, of late, as the subject has been discussed more, my desire has grown keener until today I cannot resist the impulse to say some of the things which I feel with such intensity. I have tried to hold myself back because I feared that I could not trust myself to speak calmly enough not to be misunderstood and not to wound any sensitive one. But today I must write and I trust that I will be forgiven if, in my earnestness of conviction, I say anything that any one may feel should have been left unsaid.

I think of suffrage, not as a mere "right" of woman, but as the most sacred duty that she has ever blindly, stubbornly, perniciously refused to acknowledge. I believe that some time, in the searching, clear light of eternal justice, when the great, intricate balance of this world's good and evil is struck off, woman—sweet, tender, pure woman—will be appalled at the great, dark wrongs of omission for which she will have to answer, and overwhelmed by the number of lives she has let go down to ruin, because she would not reach out her slender white hands to cast the ballot that would save them.

I would not so much as lift an eyelid to obtain the privilege of voting because I thought the franchise my "right;" to obtain the privilege and exercise it, because I deem it one of the most inviolable obligations ever placed upon womankind. There is nothing, I think, that is not dishonorable that I would not do; there is no hardship, I believe, that I would consider too great to endure, no sacrifice too great to make, to obtain this priceless privilege.

A proportion of the English suffragettes have degraded themselves into a law-breaking mob in a fight for their "rights." Not half-scathing enough was the keen sarcasm which Betty Brown threw at these caricatures of womanhood when she said, in her letter published July 25: "Look at all those English women now—storming around the streets, battering down doors, knocking off hats, slapping faces, and all that, just to show that they are as smart as the men folk. Well, they are welcome to all that kind of smartness!" No words of condemnation can be too strong for the aims and methods of the suffragette anarchist.

Though a rather large minority of the women who wish to vote may be making spectacles of themselves, the majority of suffrage workers are women who are womanly in every sense of the word, true-hearted and earnest, who believe that the obtaining and exercising of the right to vote is a duty that they owe sacredly to their home, their children, their country and their God. Not until would-be wits who fling their "clever" taunts at suffrage, and the people who have never given the movement a serious thought, learn to turn to and study these quiet, strong men of high, pure thought will they get any idea of the real character and the true dignity of suffrage ideals.

A vote is power. In a man's hands a vote is power principally for the control and advancement of business and material interests; only secondarily is it cast for moral measures if the man is not too indifferent to take cognizance at all of right and wrong in politics.

In a woman's hands a vote, in the majority of instances, would be first and always for the protection, betterment and beautifying of the home and of moral life.

This is not because woman is by nature better than man. It is because her environment is different.

Men's business is his life. From the time he dons trousers he is eagerly interested in what he shall do when he becomes a man. As a young fellow he throws his fine strength and alert thought into the struggle to climb to the top, glorying in the difficulties he encounters because he knows he can master them. When he reaches large success in the prime of middle life, the business or the professional practice which he has built up is his pride, his pet, that which he loves as one can only love a thing for which one has given one's life blood drop by drop through long, grinding days and far into weary nights. Age may whiten his hair and dim his eye, it may sap his strength and make him stoop over a cane, but it cannot weaken his devotion to that thing, born of his thought and toil, and watched over through the years by his unceasing care as he trained it to grow into the likeness of his idea—that thing which is dearer to him, often, than his own sons—age cannot weaken his devotion to it and there is never a day that he does not come down to the office and see what the clerks are doing, talk with the junior partner and smile genially on the customers as they come and go. This splendid thing into which he has put the best that has been in him, that is his very self, that is that part of him which shall live on in the material world the incarnation of his personality after he himself is here no longer—this thing has almost his last, his dying thought.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

A man's home, precious though it be to him after a fashion, is a secondary concern. He gives an architect orders for a mansion on the avenue; when the house is done, he turns it over to the furnishers with a word about the best to be had; he pours his purse into his wife's lap, telling her to get a gardener, a chauffeur, a butler, a nurse-maid, half a dozen other servants, and any other person or article that she needs or wants; then he calls the incident closed and plunges into business again after this momentary interruption. The home is his wife's precinct and he expects her to look after it—that is why he married, to have some one make and keep a home for him. Oh! of course, he was in love with her, even growing sentimental enough to learn a few verses of poetry to quote to her; but really, to come down to the old, honest truth, he married to have some one to take care of his home for him. Home is the place where he comes to rest evenings when business has worn him out; then it is the most sweetly restful place in the world—it is "simply great"—but it is never anything more to him than "just home."

Tomorrow again, every fiber of his being will be quivering under the stress of business, and when he votes tomorrow it will be a vote for his material interests without a thought of his home.

To woman, her home is her kingdom, where she reigns as queen; her paradise, where she dwells in beautific beauty; her all in all for which she lives and for which, were it necessary to give her life, she would die with a glad smile on her lips. She scents a danger which threatens the home long before it is discernable, as a doe scents a hunter far away, be the danger a windstorm that would fill every curtain and carpet with sand grit, were the windows not closed, or be it a flood of murky literature that, if allowed, would bring its contamination into the home to her young, impressionable children. Woman might, until she learned something of commercial life, make mistakes in voting on the tariff, but she would vote every time in defense of and for the upbuilding of all that is best in home life; she might be too ignorant to read or write, but instinct would tell her almost unerringly how to vote for her home.

Business is of secondary importance to woman. It always will be. If she enters business life through necessity or the spirit of independence, or mere caprice, she always expects to leave it some time or other for the home of which she dreams. Thorough business woman though she become, she never grows so engrossed in commercial activities that she does not carry constantly in her conscious or half-conscious thought, a vision of her home that it to be. Never for an instant would she think to sacrifice so much as a small part of that home's best welfare on the altar of even large material gain.

Again I say, in a man's hands a vote is power principally for the control and advancement of business and material interests, counting only secondarily, when at all, for moral measures, while in a woman's hands a vote, as a rule, would be first and always for the protection and betterment of the home and of moral life.

This Will Be the Consequence of the Advent of Woman Suffrage—Other Work for Women.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Will you kindly pass on a hearty handshake and a "hurrah" heart-throb to "Nellie" from the Beaver—Nellie with her anti-convictions and her splendid courage. Also, please say to "Blossom" that her reply upon the subject of the benefits derived from suffrage was excellent.

Bettie is a dear; so is Irvie; but Elsa would have us think that suffrage is inevitable because of the "psychic law." Now if only she had added a yard or so of that law so that we might see what it is like, may be we wouldn't be so doubtful—in more than one way.

In The Times of last Monday we got the news that Jane Addams is to be a candidate for next President of the United States. How glorious that sounds! And yet equal suffrage and two at a fireside, both thinking of politics, each thinking of "my candidate"—mayhaps of two different parties!

Miss Blackwell says "there have been women rulers of countries before"—and so on; but does she take into consideration the difference between the prerogatives of kings and of Presidents? Besides, all great positions have their nether side. For the sake of the cause we'll say that womankind has the physique to endure the stress of the Presidential race; we'll say that a woman won the race. Then hark—has she the strength to hold down the job? She'll meet the edge of the nether side almost at the start—the critic and the chronic growler.

Not all men have the fighting qualities of the illustrious T. R. Some of them hold to convictions other than the President's. What then? Can woman smile; can she spend precious vitality in saying, "I meant this, or that." "It was thus and so." Has she the courage to "say nothing and saw wood." All great positions have their nether side. Take the case of Dr. Osler and his "chloroforming old men" speech. "The doctor was misunderstood," said a young surgeon not long ago to the Beaver. "Dr. Osler was trying to induce the faculty to get some modern appliances and to keep up with modern times, they being old men, refused. Dr. Osler then heatedly made the retort which has brought about much comment.

One morning, at the breakfast table the Beaver was thinking of "woman's finer sensibilities and the sterner side of life." The Man offered a penny for her thoughts. She put the suffrage question to him. "Yes," he answered, suspiciously promptly, "women should have the right to vote. They are as smart as men, and they could hold offices, and the men could"—just here the Beaver caught him sending a sly glance in the direction of his sportsman's outfit—"be doing some other work."

"Graft? Oh, yes, she is just as susceptible as man." Then he got the vital question: "Who'd take care of the babies while woman was holding down the office jobs and man was doing manual labor?" He then sprang up, saying, "I've got to go fishing," and away he went.

His answer, in all probability, will stand for the views of man in general in regard to the nursery. What then? Shall the boy babies be sent to military training school, and the girlies to a boarding home? The plan sounds somewhat familiar. The Spartans believed in something of the sort. Is that our goal? Have we learned nothing better in all these hundreds of years since?

Take the school book—ancient history, read it even hurriedly, what do you get. Battles, battles—the old world reeked with wars, death lists, victims from three hundred anywhere to three hundred thousand; hundreds of years, to Christ's time and after; and, say, the time of Genghis Khan, the universal sovereign, whose law was the rule of torch and sword, and whose empire was built up of five million lives sacrificed and fifty thousand ruined cities and towns. Then Tamerlane, who built monuments to his victories—ninety thousand human heads cut off and laid in cement for one victory.

The battles went on, the mode of warfare changed. Cannons were introduced; twelve thousand handsome, plumed knights and thirty thousand foot soldiers were mowed down as a starter. The warrior said good-by to the mail-clad knight with battle ax and lance. But the fighting went on; the soil became dripping wet with blood; and the dead list piled up till one is led to wonder if there be any other creature on the earth so bloodthirsty for its own kind as the human. Blood—dripping blood, till, is it any surprise or any mystery that war was brought to a halt by such a terrible barrier as the plague. Fifty years of the "black death."

Today the list of warriors dying is small. Why? The "mercy"—or the fear of "smokeless" and of the Dreadnought with its long-distance guns and of the still more terrible airship.

But history repeats. Then is mankind ever to move in a circle—the same circle? A civilization toils upward till it reaches its highest plane and then declines. Today, with world-girdling cables, with electricity, radium and with wireless telegraph, how much higher can we go? Authorities have said that the present high level of civilization was built upon the Christian marriage tie and the happy hearthstone. What will follow when the "pair" is merely "two of a kind"—or perhaps two of two minds.

So good an authority as Elizabeth Stewart Phelps has said that "tenderness even among women is not common; and among modern women it seems to be cooling all the while."

The histories tell us that some of the peoples who rose high and then declined, lost everything; home, land, and even the birthright of mother tongue were lost. What a fall! And what influence started these on their downward journey? Listen to this: In the news department of August 7 a dispatch was wired that a justice of the peace, "back East," who had performed so many marriage ceremonies that he was called the "Marrying Squire," had officiated at the "wedding" of a pair of monkeys, using the same solemn words of the usual ceremony. Shame, shame! on such a man, and on the two hundred or more persons that were present, and permitted him to proceed to a finish.

When we learn of such sacrilege, and read Chairman Deardorff's article upon vivisection and take into consideration the tortures, and the lives taken, we shudder. "Kismet. History repeats"—the thought will come, even to an optimist.

If the common law does not give woman satisfaction, then ask to have it remodeled. If she is looking for action, or for the sterner side of life, or for honors, she can find what she wants, lying around almost anywhere—vitally important jobs which need attention. How many women know the real meaning of the terms "sweat box" and "third degree" in police reports, or ever tried to devise a more humane method for extracting desired information from suspects.

Dear Sunny President Ariel apologizes for the sober tone of this article. The Beaver is a loyal worker; and her chum will vow that she laughs much. Today she's thinking deeply and a long way ahead; and she's not on the fence. She's over beside Nellie, the Brave.

THE BEAVER.

CUTTING OF THE LIVING.

This Is What Is Literally Meant by Vivisection—Heartrending Cruelty to Animals.

BY MRS. E. M. DEARDORFF.

Speaking on preventive medicine, George Wilson, M.D., LL.D., who is one of the leading authorities on that subject in Great Britain, said in regard to the "inoculation of cultures," of which the medical and scientific societies of the District of Columbia affirm "These experiments do not call for any painful disrections." I quote the words of Dr. Wilson as given in "The Vivisection Question," by Dr. Albert Leffingwell, sent to the writer by the author: "I boldly say there should be some pause in these ruthless lines of experimentation. I have not allied myself with the anti-vivisectionists, but I accuse my profession of misleading the public as to the cruelties and horrors which are perpetrated on animal life. When it is stated that the actual pain involved in these experiments is commonly of the most trifling description there is a suppression of the truth of the most palpable kind, which could only be accounted for at the time by ignorance of the actual facts. I admit that in the mere operation of injecting a virus, whether cultivated or not, there may be little or no pain, but the cruelty does not lie in the operation itself, which is permitted to be performed without anaesthetics, but in the after-effects. Whether so-called toxins are injected under the skin, into the peritoneum, into the cranium, under the duramater, into the pleural cavity, into the veins, eyes or other organs—and all these methods are ruthlessly practiced—there is long-drawn-out agony. The animal so innocently operated on may have to live days, weeks, or months with no anaesthetic to assuage its sufferings and nothing but death to relieve."

There are machines invented solely for the torture of animals to test the extent to which animals may endure torture, equal to those of the Spanish inquisition.

From page 126 of "The Vivisection Question" is here given Dr. Bowditch's experiments on the vaso motor nerves. "After some preliminary experiments on other animals, it was decided to use cats in this research, since they are more vigorous and tenacious of life than other animals. The latter point is one of considerable importance in experiments extending over several hours. The animals were curarized and kept alive by artificial respiration, while the peripheric end of the divided sciatic nerve was stimulated by induction shocks, varying in intensity and frequency. The cat to be experimented upon was first etherized by being placed in a bell glass with a sponge saturated with ether and then secured, the head being held in an ordinary Czarmak's rabbit holder. The sciatic nerve was then divided. In some cases the cat was allowed to recover from the effect of the ether, and the experiment postponed some days; (this means that the cat was kept in this awful condition of torture;) "in others, a half per cent. solution of curare was put into the circulation while the animal was still etherized." (The effect of the curare would be to render the animal motionless, after recovery from the ether; it has no other use.)

"In all, there were 900 observations made upon about seventy cats." Dr. Leffingwell, who has gone deeply into these questions, says of these experiments: "The benefit to humanity was about as much as would come from the discovery of a silver mine in the moon."

All experiments upon these sensitive nerves cause the most frightful pain, and while held immovable and unable to utter a sound, when under the effect of the drug curare, are said by the

FOR VERY LITTLE FOLKS.

A Story of What the Cat and the Hen and the Children Did—Mrs. Tomkins and Her Babies.

[Alice Ralston in September St. Nicholas.] Four children were playing in their garden one day. There were Mollie and Jamie and Betty and Teddy.

They were so busy making mud-pies that they did not see "Mrs. Tomkins," the old cat, when she came and mewed, and mewed, and put up her paw, and touched Mollie and Jamie and Betty and Teddy—first one and then the other, as much as to say, "Do come, some of you and help me! Do come, please!"

By and by the children's mamma came out of the house and saw how queerly the cat was acting, and said: "Children, Mrs. Tomkins is trying to get you to go with her and see if her babies are all right."

So the children left their play, and said: "Come, Mrs. Tomkins, we will go with you now."

The old cat gave a thankful "m-i-e-o-u," and started down the walk leading to the barn. Every now and then she looked back to see if the children were really coming. When she got to the stable, she ran and jumped up on the manger, and looked down into it, and gave a quick, sharp "m-i-e-o-u," as if to say, "What do you think of that?" And the children looked in and saw a hen sitting upon the old cat's kittens and trying to keep them all covered up! When the cat tried to go near them, the hen would peck at her and drive her away. How the children laughed! Mollie said: "Did you ever see anything so funny! I am going to ask Mamma to tell St. Nicholas about it—how our old hen 'dopted the kittens."

The hen had been sitting upon some eggs in a nest near where the cat had set up housekeeping, and when the cat went out, the hen came over and took the cat's little family under her wings, just as if they had been so many chick-a-biddies. And when the cat went home again, the hen wouldn't let her come near the kittens. Mollie took the hen off, and Mrs. Tomkins was happy.

The next day she came again, looking as though she said, "I am very sorry to trouble you, but I must." Then she said: "M-i-e-o-u! m-i-e-o-u!" So the children left their play and went to the stable with her, and found the hen playing mother to Mrs. Tomkin's kittens again and trying to make them keep still and stay under her wings. If one of them poked its head out, she would give it a sharp peck to make it go back.

The children laughed again, and Mollie said: "Poor Mrs. Tomkins, I would look for a new house if I were you—you do have such meddlesome neighbors!" Then she took the hen off, and Mrs. Tomkins picked up one of the kittens.

The children's mamma was sitting in the library reading when the old cat came in, with a kitten in her mouth. She put it softly down, went out, and soon returned with another. She kept on doing this until she had moved all her family of five kittens. Then she settled herself in a cozy corner, and looked at the lady, and purred in this way: "If you only knew how much trouble I have had with that bad old hen, you would let me and my children stay here."

The lady laughed and said: "I will see what I can do for you."

Just then the children came in and begged to have the kittens stay. So a new home was made for them in a box in the woodhouse.

IT'S GREAT FUN.

Making Card Cork Pictures With Tommy and Betty and Little Brother.

There's a whole lot of fun to be had making cork pictures. Of course, many of the little girls and boys who go to kindergarten and who do such clever work in cardboard sloyd may already know how to make cork pictures. But still there may be others who do not, and so we shall tell here how to make one of these pretty but simple pictures.

But first we must see if we can find any corks. You know where there's a big pile of 'em; did you say, Tommy? Well, then, run along and fetch them. Oh, here you are back already, with two chubby hands chuck full of nice new ones. Did you ask mother if you might have them? Well, now run along first and ask mother before we begin. Back again in a jiffy, and all out of breath. Mother said yes, did she? Well, then, we'll begin. But let's see, we shall need some cardboard, an old shoe box or anything of that kind will do. Little brother has given us his box that he has had carefully stowed under his arm all the while. Thank you, little brother, this will be the very thing we need.

We will need a little mucilage or glue, too. It's Betty's turn now to help with the collection. You've only got a little bit and need it to paste pictures in your scrap book? Well, all right, if you want to be called a selfish little girl, maybe we can do without it, and we would not have it if you did not give it gladly.

Now, where's your jack-knife, Tommy? Oh, there it is. Well, now we'll begin. Thank you very much, Betty, for the mucilage. You are a dear, kind-hearted little girl to go after it yourself, and to give it up so willingly. We will only need a tiny bit of it anyway, so you will have a lot left to paste your pictures.

We will begin with something that is quite easy—a cork picture card, with the picture of a house and garden.

You see, now, we will cut the cardboard about eight by ten inches this way, and draw a sketch of the house we are going to make. This way. You see, any one can draw a house, a plain little house with a roof and a chimney and a door and two windows.

Now, we will cut little strips off the cork. Paste one right over the other this way. You see they make shingles. We must keep them all about the safe size and put them on evenly.

We will have to fill in the other spaces, won't we? So we will cut large thin slices from the largest cork and fill in the rest of the house. Only, of course, we won't fill in the door and window spaces.

Here we are now. Isn't it a dear little house? But we have forgotten the chimney. So we'll cut a tiny square for it.

We are cutting these long pieces now for the rails of the fence. They'll make a fine fence. We might have a few trees, too, and we can have a hammock hung from them, right here. It is all complete now. I thought you little folks would like the cork pictures.

A Brand New Idea.

Here is a plan evolved by a clever young stenographer of a certain city, by which a demure little friend of hers has been enabled to net a tidy sum from a pleasant stay-at-home occupation.

She thought from her own experience that most office girls and young saleswomen were in need of some one to supply oversleeves regularly for them, and therefore suggested this unpretentious business venture to her friend. The other little lady was so pleased with the very idea of it that she at once prepared to supply the demand.

A few dozen oversleeves were at first made of material that would be easy to launder, and she then made a careful and thorough canvass of a big office building, offering to supply and launder her oversleeves for the modest sum of 10 cents a week to each customer. The success of the plan was almost instantaneous. Every man and woman in the big office building became her patron, and she has now extended her service to the saleswomen of the big department stores, which has necessitated her employing outside help.

This is certainly one of the occupations in which a girl may engage without having any special training, and any wide-awake girl with industry and a little business tact, may make this pay in almost any city.

Fun from the Tots.

Teacher: Tommy, where is the North Pole.

Johnny: Dunno.

Teacher: You don't know after all my teaching?

Johnny: Nope. If Peary can't find it there's no use of my trying.

Small Kenneth was celebrating the anniversary of his birth. "How old are you?" asked a neighbor.

"I'm 4," replied Kenneth, "and I'm glad of it. I was getting awfully tired of being 3 all the time."

Fond Mother: Johnny, I told you that you might have a piece of cake, but I see you have taken two pieces. Why did you do that.

Small Johnny: Well, mamma, I've been making believe there was another little boy visiting me, so, of course, I had to give him a piece, too.

Small Boy: Papa, where does leather come from?

Papa: From animals, my boy—their skins being tanned.

Small Boy: And does sole leather come from their souls, papa?

"I say, pa, what—"

"Ask your mother!"

"Honest, pa, this isn't a silly one this time."

"Alright, this once, what is it?"

"Well, if the end of the world was to come and the earth be destroyed while a man was up in an airship, where would he land when he came down?"

Teacher: Sally, if you had a little spunk you'd stand better in your class. Do you know what spunk is?

Sally (wearily): Oh, I suppose it's the past participle of spank.

BYE-LO-LAND.

Come, baby blue eyes, take daddy's hand,
And we'll go sailing to bye-lo-land.
There's a great white bird a-waiting near,
That will take us safely, never fear.
Then up you jump, and away we go
To the land of "Wumps"—the great bye-lo!
Now shut those peepers—is that a tear?
Why, naught can hurt you—daddy is here.

Now how we "scud" through the sky so blue,
"Wright's" at the helm, and we are the crew.
See, what a spread of its great white wings!
Hark! to the song that the great bird sings;
"Hush-a-bye, lullaby, we'll soon alight,
For the bye-lo-land is just in sight,
Just a moment and the trip is over,
Then we'll rest in a bed of clover."

Steady now, ready now, lift the spread,
While I lay him in his little bed.
Daddy's little darling, mamma's joy,
Don't you all wish you had such a boy?
Now comes his mamma back from the store,
With parcels, and bags, and "goodies" galore,
While the tired little feet, and dimpled hands
Are resting so sweet in the Bye-lo-Land!

DAWN.

When goddess night doth gently fold
Her generous cloak o'er land and sea,
Our dreams blot out regrets of old
And presage joy that yet may be.

Then sunny dawn, the morning light,
Comes smiling brightly all the way;
Dark memories seem to lose their blight,
And hope again shines as the day.

Ah, dawn, bright dawn, we need thy light;
Banish each cloud as it appears;
Pray keep our souls from dread of night
And cheer the thought of coming years.

Waldo and Baby Helen.

Waldo Gillette, 11 years old, and his tiny sister, Helen Bernice, just seven months old, are inseparable chums. Waldo is quite sure the angels sent little Helen in answer to his prayers, for ever since he was a bit of a toddler himself he has been praying to the angels to send him a little sister. And so this bit of humanity rules his heart right royally. Baby Helen pulls his hair and his tie awry, whenever she gets good and ready, and that is nearly every day, but Waldo thinks it's great fun, and that his little sister is the most precious pet in the whole wide world.

Waldo and Helen are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Grant G. Gillette of No. 43 Westmoreland Place. Waldo has a real playground of his own on the third floor of his parents' beautiful home. It is fully equipped with all manner of playthings, even to a merry-go-round and a music box which grinds out ragtimes and waltzes while the merry-go-round is in motion. Here the little boy and his baby sister spend many delightful hours.

Then the quaint wooden chairs, the old buffet and the ancient chest with its crude carvings of fowls, birds and droll designs that was rescued from a stable where its chief use was to store the oats for the horses. Mdlle. De Pratz's bedroom is a reproduction of the sleeping apartment of Queen Marie Antoinette in the Trianon at Versailles—an exact copy even of the cretonne employed for the hangings—all a delight to the eye.

Indeed, in all her ways was revealed the feminine love for pretty surroundings which is such a strong point in the character of "Elizabeth Davenay," her heroine. When speaking of her great conception in England, Mdlle. De Pratz quarreled with only one thing. Critics insisted on speaking of Elizabeth as a suffragette instead of a feminist.

"We pursue different methods from our English sisters," said the authoress. "We believe in evolution, not revolution. We work to change the wording of the code, which says that 'all French citizens are equal in the eye of the law, except women, children and lunatics.' We want that changed. The moment we have that, the suffrage will follow as a matter of course. It is somewhat extraordinary that the English women, who are so calm, should be taking an extreme line in this agitation. I suppose it is because the Englishman, being more brutal than the French, requires stronger measures. Frenchmen are becoming feminists without knowing it; their wives are making them so. At heart every Frenchman is a feminist."

The success of the last novel, "Elizabeth Davenay," and the clamor of the public for another work by this popular authoress, has decided her to begin another novel which is now under way. The plot differs very materially from either of the previous ones. The name she now has in mind is "The Clash of the Two Generations," and in it a great problem which will appeal to the thinking people of modern times who are acquainted with the restrictions and seclusion of the children of French parents, is to be worked out. A mother, who herself was brought up in the old manner of nonenlightenment and ignorance as to the ways of the world, proposes that her daughter shall have more liberty, not only in action, but in thought and ideas. As the daughter advances along these lines, the outcome of the training overwhelms the mother and there is the clash. Mdlle. De Pratz is hard at work on this new book at her country home not far from Paris.

HEREABOUTS.

J. E. LABATT, one of the best known horsemen in the world, is a guest at the Angelus. He has for many years been the official horse buyer for the United States Army and has traveled in Europe, Asia and many other countries of the world, studying horses. He is one of the few white men who have been permitted to see the horses of the Emperor of Japan, who has what are declared to be the finest prancers in the world. At present he is on his way to Seattle with his wife and daughter to visit the Alaska-Yukon Exposition, after which he will proceed to Alaska. Upon returning to this country, Labatt, whose real home is in Fort Worth, Tex., will go to Omaha, Neb., where he will purchase 2000 head of horses for the service of the army in the Philippines. Speaking of American horses, Mr. Labatt made the assertion that the well known western pony or cayuse, will soon be out of existence. "The rapid settlement of the West in the past ten years, the taking up of all the vast grazing lands and turning them into farms and the interbreeding of the ponies with the heavier American farm horses, is serving to gradually wipe them out entirely."

"Booming!" That is the word which F. M. Murphy, one of the best known men in the Territory of Arizona, used when speaking of present conditions in that part of the United States. "Everything denotes special activity in the mining districts of the Territory. Men, machinery and supplies are being rushed in for the development of many of the mining properties and all of the mines have again resumed operations, some of them working overtime. If that isn't a sign of prosperity, nothing can be." Mr. Murphy is here from Phoenix, his home. He is owner of lumber yards, mining properties and oil wells.

Have you seen King Edward on the streets of Los Angeles? Many people may be asking that question and not without some cause. David Cochrane, proprietor of the Edinborough Hotel of Beaumont, has been a guest at the Nadeau for a good part of the past week and while there, his appearance has created considerable attention. He is of the same build as King Edward and wears a full beard clipped after the identical style of the foreign monarch. As a result, he has received the nickname of "King Ed" among his friends.

J. M. Cardenas, general agent of the National Lines of Mexico, which include all but two or three of the large railroads in the southern republic, has been spending the week at the Hollenbeck. He is accompanied by his wife. "Railroads are all doing better business at the present time than they have ever before done," said Mr. Cardenas. "All our lines are taxed to carry the traffic, which is growing right along. Freight shipments from the United States have been increasing. Much of the freight consists of American mining machinery and farm implements, consigned to Americans who are developing mining properties, or others who have taken up large grants of land in the south."

Although not a national line, the new west coast road of the Harriman system is welcomed by the Mexican government, according to Mr. Cardenas, in so far as it is opening practically virgin territory and in that manner adding to the wealth of Mexico.

Returning this week from Alaska, John R. Grant, the railroad builder of this city, expressed delight with the wonders of the northern country. "It is a land that will in the future not only be known for its mining resources but for its agricultural possibilities. During the summer months, grain, vegetables and a number of fruits grow very readily. While we were in Alaska, we saw many orchards of the finest bearing fruits. Despite the fact that the mining rushes are past, Alaska is retaining her citizens and the population, instead of diminishing, as might be expected, is increasing. The railroads in that country are doing a very valuable work in their assistance to the general development. Mr. Grant traveled from Sitka across the White Horse Pass to Yukon. He was accompanied by his wife and his niece, Miss MacKintosh and by Mrs. L. A. Grant and her daughters, the Misses Anna and Gertrude.

Java and Sumatra were represented at the Alexandria during the past week by Gottfried Crone of Solo, Java, and L. C. M. von Brinsberger of Deli, Sumatra. Their fathers are wealthy traders as well as producers of those islands, and the young men are in the United States to see what is to be seen. They will travel around the world before returning home. Both of them were effusive in their praises of California, and of Los Angeles in particular.

John North, a deputy in the office of the District Attorney, left on his vacation yesterday morning. In company with several friends, he goes from Redlands on foot to Forest Home. POLITICIANS, STATESMEN.

HON. JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, former Democratic minority leader, is living on his farm near Yazoo City, Miss., and devoting the major portion of his time to reading several thousand volumes of books, pamphlets, magazines and treaties of various sorts, collected during his long period in Congress, and which he was unable to even look at while serving in that body. Once in a while he writes a magazine article, but practically all of his time is spent in his library, surrounded by a vast array of literature. He is an omnivorous reader, and digests the contents of a surprisingly large number of volumes each day.

Caleb Powers, recently pardoned after several trials, having been convicted of complicity in the assassination of Gov. Goebel, has announced his candidacy for Congress.

Bayard Stockton, who presided at the Fourth of July celebration at Princeton this year, told of a conversation he had with Grover Cleveland shortly before the ex-President died. "Mr. Cleveland," he said, "made the statement that he thought the Declaration of Independence should be read in every town of the United States at least once every year, to make the rising generation more patriotic and to keep the older ones more mindful of their privilege."

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman of New Jersey, who is now abroad, is one of the best-known and most-enthusiastic collectors of postage stamps in this country. So large is his collection that he has set apart one room in his home in Plainfield as a stamp-room, in which are some of the rarest stamps so dear to the heart of the philatelist.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

MISS MABEL BOARDMAN, sister-in-law of Senator Murray Crane of Massachusetts, is the recipient of a gold crown from the Italian government, in recognition of her work for the Italian earthquake sufferers. The crown is a reproduction of the ancient civic Roman crown, composed of oak leaves and acorns in solid gold, and will serve Miss Boardman as a distinctive hair ornament. The crown is inscribed: "To Mabel Boardman, of the American Red Cross, from the Italian government as a debt of gratitude, 1908-1909."

Andrew J. Liebenau, a letter carrier attached to the Brooklyn postoffice, has been decorated with the double gold stars, a mark of forty years' continuous service as a carrier. This is the second time in the history of the country that a letter carrier has served forty years without a break.

Mrs. Mattie Spelling Robinson Collins of Des Moines has been aided by only eight husbands in her experiments to demonstrate whether or not marriage is a failure. But Mrs. Collins is only 41 years old.

A. Stuart Black of Chicago started recently on a record trip from that city to London. He was at a luncheon in Chicago on Tuesday, when he got a dispatch that there would be a meeting in London on the following Tuesday of shipping interests with which he is connected, and that if he were not on hand he might suffer a financial loss. He boarded the afternoon express on the Pennsylvania road and reached Jersey City at 9:28 o'clock next morning. He landed at the Twenty-second-street ferry ten minutes before the Lusitania was scheduled to sail. A taxicab whipped him down to the pier and he boarded the big ship one minute before it pulled out. He will be at the meeting at noon on Tuesday if the Lusitania does its usual stunt to the eastward.

Mrs. Isaac Taylor Headland is physician to the Manchu princesses and the other women in the court at Peking. Her husband is professor of science in the Peking University. She did not intend to practice when she went to Peking, but the opportunity came when one of the princesses at court was stricken with fever. The native doctors could not give her relief, and Mrs. Headland was requested to take up the case. She wrought a speedy cure, and now has a large and remunerative practice. In addition, she treats the wives and daughters of many of the leading Peking merchants and government officials.

William Huls, 96 years old, of Maryville, Mo., was taken ill last week and for the first time in his life was attended by a physician. Huls uses tobacco and has been a user of stimulants in limited quantities all his life. He had, until his recent illness, been a man of exceptional vigor. He was born in Kentucky.

Miss Mary E. Richmond of Philadelphia has been called to take charge of the charity organization extension movement of the Sage Foundation. For the last eight years Miss Richmond has been general secretary of the charity organization of Philadelphia, and previous to that time she was secretary of a similar society in Baltimore, which she organized.

SCIENTISTS, EDUCATORS.

PROF. OTTO NORDENSKJOLD, who has started on a trip to North Greenland, is famous as an Arctic and Antarctic explorer. He was born in Smaland, Sweden, in 1869. He is a nephew of the famous Baron Nordenskjold, who made the northeast passage around Europe and Asia in 1878-79. Prof. Nordenskjold tried to reach the South Pole in 1901-03, and with his crew suffered extraordinary hardships. Subsequently he lectured in the United States on his adventures. Until a short time ago he occupied the chair of geography at Upsala University, where he was educated.

Dr. Nansen is engaged in making soundings between Iceland and Eastern Greenland. Since he returned to Norway, after retiring from the post of minister in London, he has devoted his attention to oceanographic investigations, and he has just made a report to a Norwegian society on the results of his work during the spring and early summer. Dr. Nansen pays all his own expenses.

Carl Lumholtz, Norwegian ethnologist and explorer, is completing arrangements for an extended residence in the arid territory of Northwestern Mexico, where he will live with and study the Cocopa and Pima Indians for several months. The territory he hopes to study especially is that lying between the Rio de Altar and the mouth of the Colorado River, in the State of Sonora, bordering on the Gulf of California. The region is largely unexplored. He hopes to find traces of former human activity in the shape of rock inscriptions.

Jerome Hall Raymond, associate professor in the University of Chicago, has accepted the presidency of Toledo University, a new municipal institution. His wife, a lecturer and member of the University of Chicago faculty, will also become a professor in the new university.

The new German exchange professor in Columbia University is Dr. Karl Runge of Gottingen, Germany. Prof. Runge's first original work was in pure mathematics, and he early obtained a high position among German mathematicians. Of later years his interest has been more largely in applied mathematics. He has, for instance, made important investigations in spectrum analysis and in astronomical and nautical researches.

President Judson in his annual report makes it clear that Prof. George B. Foster of Chicago University need not worry about losing his place on the faculty of the university divinity school, however much the orthodox Baptists of the interior may rage. "Free thought and free speech," says President Judson.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

LIEUTENANT-COMMANDER CLELAND DAVIS and Lieut. George Sweet, experts of the navy on wireless telegraphy, are watching the result of high-powered work between the Brant Rock (Mass.) station and Admiral Schroeder's flagship Connecticut and the scout cruisers Chester and Birmingham, each of which have been equipped with high-powered apparatus. Not until the conclusion of these experiments will the Navy Department award the contract for the erection of the station in or near Washington, which will be required to send messages 3000 miles.

Brig.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs; Brig.-Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, and Brig.-Gen. Arthur Murray, chief of Coast Artillery, are mentioned in connection with the appointment of a new chief of staff next spring. These names are in addition to those of Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, Maj.-Gen. Thomas H. Barry and Brig.-Gen. William H. Carter, of whom the last-named is believed to have the best chance of securing the nomination.

Lieut. Clark and Capt. Douglas are returning from a meterological expedition to the interior of China. The astronomical observations taken by Lieut. 100 Wash Suits to Go in a Great Monday Sale at $6.95

It's Time to Stock the Linen Closet When Savings Like These Can Be Made

Doesn't the idea of buying linens at a saving of 25 to 35 per cent. appeal to you? Then this event will interest you—and it will be the more interesting when we tell you that not for a long time will we be able to buy or sell such linens as these in this Monday sale at such wonderfully little prices. We import all of our own linens direct from Ireland—bringing them all the way to our own harbor by boat—that means a tremendous saving both to you and to us. It's a reason why you should buy linens at Bullock's. Now note what the Daily Trade Record has to say about the linen market:

"Advancing prices were the distinctive feature of the European market last week. This feature, although assuming considerable proportions, is not the result of a tremendous pressure of business, but of a remarkable set of untoward conditions in the Belfast market for raw materials. The situation itself is without precedent. Advances are made in many instances, not because business warrants it, but because necessity compels it."

The manufacturers state the prices given on this shipment are the lowest they or any others will be able to offer in years. Note every price that follows, and buy linens liberally Monday.

Dean of Harvard.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF NATHANIEL SOUTHGATE SHALER. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. (Price $3.)

In the death of Nathaniel Southgate Shaler, America lost one of her foremost citizen-geniuses, and Harvard lost one of its most distinguished scientists. Men of the type of Dean Shaler are all too few. Never striving for material reward, they do their work quietly, with no ostentation, with sanity, and express themselves in terms of the highest individualism of citizenship. There were no warring elements in Dean Shaler's temperament, no energy was wasted through aimless dispersion; his conscience was Anglo-Saxon, his nature positive, his purpose and ideals definite, his mind always equanimous.

He was born in Kentucky, his family being English on both sides. The life in Kentucky was not conducive, though, to the intellectual career which he entered later. His family were Whigs, and their abhorrence for slavery was intense and deep-rooted. They were necessitated, however, to put up with it, but treated the negroes with kindness. There was much feudalism in the dean's early life, but the stress of the bloodshed and the restlessness of the life, for some strange reason, had little influence on his nature. His boyhood, for the most part, was solitary, and, though he had no normal schooling, he came early under the influence of Goethe, Hegel and Schiller, through the tutorship of a German-Swiss clergyman.

Under the guidance of Agassiz, Shaler developed greatly, and the episodes of his working seventy hours studying a fish, and two months putting together a sack of loose bones, made him a favorite with this great man. He describes in detail the work done under the direction of Agassiz, and comments interestingly on the hyper-philosophical coterie which formed around him. Shaler found the group tiresome, for they lacked "intensity of purpose" and had but a "limited sense of the world." It was due, undoubtedly, to the interest that Agassiz took in him that Shaler attained preëminence in his geological field. For forty years, he was a professor at Harvard, and for years the dean of the Lawrence Scientific School.

His autobiography, just published, is one of those rare memoirs whose interest lies not so much in the personal portrayal of an individual as in the exposition of a rare and gracious type of intellectual greatness. No finer type of the pedagogue and scholar has Harvard produced, and rarely have I found a book that so unconsciously, yet vividly, portrays the character of its writer. Fused with a keen and overwhelming interest in life, Shaler exemplified the type of the New England repressionist as few have done. His emotions were those of the self-contained observer; he never allowed himself in any manifestation the abandonment of—say, the French. He was dispassionate, sensitive on the subject of sex, and always sane in his judgments and in his selection of experiences. Though he was absorbed in his collegiate work, his sympathies and interests extended over a greater ground than that traversed by the average university professor. Despite his wholesome contempt for poets, and his calling Wordsworth a galoot because that poet has spent the day trying to find an adjective for cuckoo, he himself wrote poetry. Also he was a writer of many magazine articles, text-books and histories; he investigated mining claims and often made his own surveys.

The autobiography unfortunately ends, when, at the age of 25, he enlisted in the Union army. But its fragmentariness is in large degree compensated for by the fact that in the brief recountal of his early life we get a remarkable insight into his character, both as a boy and as a man. The revelation of character is almost complete, although the most active and important period of his later life is not touched on by himself. His wife, however, who lived with him throughout that portion of his activities, has added a memoir, thus completing one of the most interesting accounts of one of the truest types of American civilization that has yet been published.

A Great Theme Maltreated.

A CERTAIN RICH MAN. By William Allen White. The Macmillan Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

"A Certain Rich Man" is not a novel; it is a tract setting forth Mr. White's socialistic propoganda. The author assumes a sentimental pity toward those possessing money, and endeavors, by the application of a series of unsexed platitudes, to inculcate in his reader the hate of riches. It seems that the surest way to become popular nowadays is to apotheosize poverty and ignorance. This Mr. White has done, and the dogmatic insistence with which he preaches his sociological sermon will popularise him with those whose ideal of life is a universal mediocrity.

The book is, for the most part, an argument between Mr. White and the hero of his book, in which Mr. White imagines he comes out victor. As a matter of fact, a man of the intellectual attainments, of the searching philosophy, and the egoistic power of John Barclay, would not pause to refute the trite superstitions of Mr. White. Mr. White has proved himself incapable of building up out of his own consciousness so great a superman and so great an artist as his hero. The passages in which he portrays "a certain rich man" show that Mr. White has swallowed Nietzsche whole and has been unable to digest him. He puts into the mouth of his hero passages that might fit into any of this modern philosopher's work, and then goes to work in a didactic manner to point out the error of Nietzsche's ethics.

The subject matter of the novel, which is but a series of interesting incidents around the life of the modern monarch, is perhaps as great material as an artist could wish to handle. In John Barclay we have a modern Charlemagne, a Caesar, a Nero, a William the Conqueror, a Napoleon, a Cromwell, a magnificent, dominating, egoistic example of the super-man. The difference between this age and former eras is merely the medium in which the power of the world rulers is couched. This is an age of commerce and finance, just as Caesar's age was one of war and archery. In this fact lies what seems to be an unrecognized phase of individualistic de-whose autobiography has been published recently.

William Allen White, author of "A Certain Rich Man."

William Allen White is without literary or artistic instinct, and for him to attempt to handle so great a subject as he has undertaken is futile. The only American capable of such an undertaking is Edgar Saltus, and when Mr. Saltus decides to rewrite "A Certain Rich Man" we shall have the greatest American novel ever written. Mr. White has merely fallen into the habit of a political parson, and with a superabundance of commonplace morality, has managed to stultify utterly a great theme. The ending of the book not only is inconsistent, but borders on the maudlin.

Too Doctrinaire.

PLAYS. By John Galsworthy. G. P. Putnam Sons, New York. (Price $1.35 net.)

Mr. Galsworthy is a better novelist than he is playwright. This no doubt is due to the fact that one is allowed greater privileges in one's novels than he is in one's plays, for the reason that the narrative structure, with its descriptions and analyses and expositions, helps in a great degree to disguise the introduction of "missions," which many writers deem necessary in fiction. Mr. Galsworthy always has been doctrinaire in his writings, and thus has detracted from their artistic finish in proportion to the emphasis which he has put—sometimes unconsciously—on his socialistic theories and humanitarian principles. A mediocre writer with a mission is done for; and it is only for the reason that Mr. Galsworthy is a fine craftsman, with a keen sense of values and with a colorful and pellucid style, that his novels have survived his very unfortunate socialist views and his desire to promulgate them. In a writer like Mr. Galsworthy we regret the seemingly unavoidable fact. (In writers like Upton Sinclair and William Allen White we care little in what manner they commit literary suicides just so

In his book of plays, Mr. Galsworthy's chief fault manifests itself—or seems to—in greater degree than ever before. If a man, after study of conditions, of history and of the manifestations and activities of physical and intellectual life, can wind up such a research by being a humanitarian, I certainly would not quibble with him—it would be futile. Nor would I object to the conclusions at which he arrived, nor the anamorphosis with which he viewed life. But I do most emphatically arise and protest against his shuttling his illogical deductions into his writings.

When I look at the technique of the three plays which comprise this volume, at the beautiful English and the artistic promise which they imply, it makes my disappointment the keener to find the idea of Mr. Galsworthy's philosophy—or rather doctrines—uppermost. His plays are both unsatisfactory and irritating for two reasons; First, because I do not enjoy didacticism in art, no matter how subtly it may be used; and second, because I do not agree in the slightest measure with any of Mr. Galsworthy's ideas.

The first play, "The Silver Fox," has been presented successfully. It is a rather dogmatic account of the effect of enforced squalor and poverty upon the soul of a woman. The indefiniteness of its ending is its most admirable stroke. The second play, "Strife," has been produced in England, and, Julian Johnson tells me, in all probability will be produced in New York next year. While it is hardly fair to compare it with Mr. Sinclair's "Jungle," it suggests, in a large measure, this young socialist's bloody tract in the intensity of its portrayal of the struggle between capital and labor. The third play in the book, "Joy," is the best, because it has less of Mr. Galsworan alluring grace and a humor not found in the other two plays.

It is almost fair to say that the three plays included in this book are not plays at all, but rather interesting, beautifully written expositions of Mr. Galsworthy's ideas in dramatic form, perfect in technique and essentially actable. What I said in my review of Mr. Galsworthy's "Fraternity" may be said also of these plays:

"He has focused upon life's sordidness, and, until he can readjust his intelligence to encompass the whole of the universe, his art is not to be taken seriously."

Summer Fluff.

A CHARMING HUMBUG. By Imogen Clark. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York. (Price $1.50 net.)

The annual season of fool-fiction is rapidly drawing to a close. The gods be praised! September will see a falling off of thoughtless and impossible, loose-jointed tales. But on my shelf there have accumulated a large number of these "light" novels, and I have spent the last week going through them. For the most part, they are poor of their kind; and, when one considers the kind, nothing worse can be said of them; a few I found which were very good of their kind, which isn't saying very much because they belong to an unintelligent kind.

The first one I came across which I could recommend even to the most feather-brained was "A Charming Humbug." It breaks away from the conventional standards of summer fiction, and to read the book is very much like taking a stroll out over the English greenswards, stopping here and there to gather some bit of gossip, to go on over the meadows and watch the children play and to listen to their clatter. There is a very enjoyable outdoor atmosphere about the book, simple, and in many places sincere. The book contains no story to speak of, except a few little incidents centering about an English governess, and the charm is somewhat decreased by the introduction of an unnecessary and impossible attempt at plot. But on the whole, while it is different from the average dog-days novel, it is quite enjoyable in a mild and unassuming and relaxed manner.

Gore Galore.

THE SOLITARY FARM. By Fergus Hume. G. W. Dillingham & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

Of an entirely different order is Mr. Fergus Hume's "The Solitary Farm." But, like "The Charming Humbug," it is a worthless book, with no literary merit, and thereby fulfills the requirements of summer reading.

We have here the reverse of the calm, shady English lanes, and the children and simple people. In Mr. Hume's book the pages are smeared with blood, and torn with the points of daggers, and sparkling with stolen jewels. There is enough blood spilled on the solitary farm to be distributed among twenty novels, and still have each one gory. Too, there are as many villians as there are crimes.

The first murder comes when, for a sack of jewels, the chief villain of the story, a sea captain who is afraid of the dark, murders a man. The son of the original owner of the jewels, an African chief, be-daggers himself and sets forth on the trail of the sea captain, who has retired to the solitary farm. Forestalling this annoying procedure, the captain cuts the throat of a friend of the young black gentleman with the murderous disposition, and sets up his bloody victim with the bifurcated jugular as a warning to the would-be murderer. But the captain's sister decides to do a little slashing on her own account, and this time the captain is the victim. Then the sister, fearing the police, sets fire to herself and becomes a cinder. Thus the gentlemen of the law are thwarted.

But this is just the beginning. Other villians appear on the scene; also heroes and heroines, and all manner of foils. There is enough material in this book to constitute the contents of six best sellers. But no one is going to begin the book and leave it unfinished.

Mistaken Identity.

LESS THAN KIN. By Alice Duer Miller. Henry Holt & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

While Mr. Furgus Hume breaks off his narrative bread in large chunks for distribution, Mrs. Miller is much more skilled and refined in her manner of serving fictional incredulity. As a craftsman she is fairly accomplished. She keeps her interest up to a tension, and brings about her climaxes with what accumulated force it is possible to create in the impossible incidents which go to make up her "Less Than Kin." The plot of the story is perilously near one of O. Henry's short stories, not only in outline, but in atmosphere; but all of O. Henry's vulgarity and horse-play and coarse humor are happily omitted. Those who believe in the summer period of mental inanity will find pleasure in the book.

The hero is a young gentleman of the United States, who we find busily engaged in organizing and training an army of revolutionists in South America. Circumstances compel him to make a rapid exodus from the Andean land, and for good reasons he adopts the name of a fellow-revolutionist who has recently died. The conventional thing happens; the parents of the dead man open their arms to him as their son, and circumstances are such that it is impossible for him to bring forward proof of his real identity. Of course there is a young woman in the book, with whom the hero falls in love. Matters at length get straightened out satisfactorily—a thing which goes without saying in the summer novel.

The Lure of the New World.

THE HALF MOON. By Ford Madox Hueffer. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

Henry Hudson is again brought forth in this book as the subject for the speculations of fiction writing. There are few men in history about whose names there hangs so romantic a glamour as about that of Hudson, and Mr. Hueffer has made good use of this material.

The book contains a great deal of freshness and much new interest, and the picture that we get of this great adventurer in a new world is marked with vividness. The story is not builded on conventional standards. There are few motivated climaxes and anti-climaxes. The structure is of the tack-on variety, but the interest and literary handling of the book make this procedure satisfactory. What little love element there is remains in the background, and melodramatic heroics are conspicuous by their absence. Mr. Hueffer writes with a sure touch, and the spirit of adventure is subtly interwoven throughout the whole book. There is a trifle too much matter by way of introduction, and the seventeenth century superstition concerning witchcraft is accepted resignedly and without explanation. This latter may or may not be an objection.

LITERARY CHIT-CHAT.

Gilbert K. Chesterton has written in the current Contemporary Review a comparison of Hardy and Meredith, than which I have seen no keener analysis of either formulated. "Hardy and Meredith," says Mr. Chesterton, "are, in fact, almost typical antagonists. Mr. Hardy's stories always have a moral; and the moral is that morality has an uncommonly rotten chance of it. The universe is made in some dark way a separate entity which upsets the plans of blameless and pathetic human beings. God is the villain in Mr. Hardy's novels; God behaves extraordinarily badly, considering that He does not exist. This queer and irritated attempt to fix personal responsibility upon an impersonal force is a little bit shaky in logic; but it produces a genuine and passionate atmosphere in art. But Meredith, though in no way orthodox, is the very antithesis of all this. That impersonal deity which is Hardy's villain is Meredith's hero and champion. Nature betrays all the heroines of Hardy. Nature enters to save all the heroines of Meredith. The argument of Hardy is that human beings, with their brief joys and and brittle ideals, might get on very well if the general wave of the world did not overturn them or smash them into sticks. The argument of Meredith is that our little lives always stagnate into hypocrisy or morbidity unless the general wave of the world continually refreshes and recreates us. Hardy maintains that a man is a mere game of the gods. Meredith, on the other hand, maintains that the gods are a necessity of man. He prefers to say "the gods" rather than "God;" but that is a nineteenth-century prejudice."

"I have not the slightest feeling of humility toward the public or to anything in existence," wrote Keats to J. H. Reynolds, "but the Eternal Being, the Principle of Beauty, and the memory of great men." This magnificent expression, great in itself, of a boyish heart so hurt by the whiplash of the reviewers, never obscured the fact that Keats was sadly outraged by such attacks. Humble he may not have been, but hurt he was, and piteously; and Shelley's letter to the editor of the Quarterly Review is a royal charge, not against the unfavor of critics, but against their unfairness. Shelley's own superb indifference to them is clear, as is also his own peculiar penetration as a critic, but more delightful than either is the diplomacy shown in his final paragraph, in which he bespeaks the editor's inspection of "another poem, Hyperion," of which he has "desired his bookseller to send him a copy," and with more of a lawyer's method than a poet's, forces a favorable judgment for the review of this poem. "In another place I speak impartially," Shelley says, "for the canons of taste to which Keats has conformed in his other compositions are the very reverse of my own."

If there is another State that contains more literary people this summer than Maine, that State has not been heard from. Margaret Deland is at her cottage at Kennebunkport, William Dean Howells at his at Kittery Point. Winston Churchill is at Seal Harbor, Holman Day at New Meadows River, Norman Duncan at Moosehead, and at Bar Harbor are Mrs. Burton Harrison and Arthur C. Train. Of four writers who are at Northeast Harbor, two are bishops and two are college presidents—Bishop Doane and Bishop Greer, and Charles W. Eliot and Seth Low; while of two other college presidents who are likewise writers, one, Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia, is at Bar Harbor, and President Hyde of Bowdoin, at Hancock Point. After that there still remain John Kendrick Bangs at Cape Neddick, and at York Harbor Thomas Nelson Page—with no one knows how many counties not heard from.

It is strange how "Cyrano de Bergerac," which was once all the rage, has dropped out of current repertoire. It is a fine play, though, and is being studied in our American universities, as is witnessed by the fact that Harry Hold & Co. are just sending their edition, edited by Prof. Oscar Kuhns, to press for the eleventh time.

It should be interesting to know, in these days of simplified spelling, that quite an acrimonious discussion arose when Lord Macaulay's famous "History of England" was published, as to whether Harper & Bros. were justified in having allowed the author's spelling to conform to the orthography of Noah Webster.

The attention of competent critics, as well as the general reading public, has been attracted by a serial story now running in the American magazine. This story bears the title, "Margarita's Soul, the Romantic Recollections of a Man of Fifty," and will be published this fall by John Lane Company. The author's name appears on the title page as Ingraham Lovell, but this is very apparently a pseudonym. There have been many guesses as to the writer's true name; one well-known critic asserting that such a study of human nature can only be by William J. Locke. I have made no guess as yet, and do not intend to until after the real author has been announced.

A Chicago newspaper has evidently gotten some inside information as to the authorship of "The Inner Shrine." I say "inside information" because the character of book reviews which this particular paper prints does not indicate any amount of literary perspicuity on the part of its reviewers. It claims that Basil King is the author of this psychological romance. I see also that The Bookman, evidently trusting to the inside information of this Chicago newspaper, in a burst of facetiousness, expresses its "opinion" that this ex-minister was indeed the author of "The Inner Shrine."

Ellery H. Clark, the Boston alderman who wrote "Loaded Dice," which, despite my interference, gained some popularity in this country, used to be the all-round champion athlete of America. In one afternoon, with five-minute intervals between the events, the contestants run a hundred yards, put the shot, high jump, walk a half-mile, throw the hammer, pole vault, run the 120-yard high hurdles, broad jump, throw the fifty-six-pound weight, and run a mile. One by one Mr. Clark mastered all these different events to a greater or less degree. He had greater difficulty with the half-mile walk than anything else. It is

The New Standard Encyclopedia

12 Massive Volumes	9,500 Pages
55,000 Articles	900,000 Topics
3,000 Illustrations	150 Colored Maps

Believing that every home should possess an Encyclopedia, The Times has made arrangements to distribute among its readers and friends a number of sets of the new Standard Encyclopedia and Atlas, which is published in twelve large volumes.

This distribution will be in conjunction with a Co-Operative Club that is now being formed by The Times. Last year similar clubs were organized in New York, Chicago and Boston with such splendid success that the membership was in each case largely oversubscribed.

The Times desires to extend the same opportunity to the people of Los Angeles and vicinity; hence arrangements have been made for a limited number of memberships in the club, which is now being formed in Los Angeles.

The object of this enterprise is to assist earnest men and women who desire to improve their condition and get ahead in the world. In this day and age every one who can read the English language needs a good encyclopedia.

An encyclopedia is a whole library in itself, taking the place of dozens of separate volumes. It gives in condensed and convenient form the collected wisdom of all time. Here will be found the latest and most exact information on every subject—History, Science, Geography, Politics, Religion, Commerce, Trades, Philosophy, Biography, etc.—written in words that all can understand. There may be no royal road to learning, but there is a quick and easy one for those who possess a good, modern, up-to-date encyclopedia. Any ambitious man or woman can get the equivalent of a college education out of an encyclopedia simply by looking up a few questions every day, while its value to young people can scarcely be estimated.

This Magnificent New ENCYCLOPEDIA

Heretofore the best Encyclopedias have been put on the market at abnormally high figures—ranging from $80 to $150—prices beyond the reach of the masses. Owing to this insuperable obstacle it has been impossible for those of moderate means to purchase the standard reference works.

The Times' Co-Operative Club has been formed to do away with these prohibitive prices. Arrangements have been made for an entire edition (2000 sets) of the New Standard Encyclopedia and Atlas, which will be supplied to club members at about the actual cost of manufacture, and on terms within the reach of all.

In organizing this club The Times represents both the publisher and the purchaser. To the former we guarantee the sale of a large edition. To the latter we provide an Encyclopedia at the lowest possible wholesale price, stripped of all the usual profits that go to agents, canvassers and various other middlemen. Complete sets are shipped direct from the binders to the purchasers. This shows the advantage of a purely co-operative enterprise.

After looking over the field carefully for an encyclopedia that would measure up to all requirements, The New Standard was selected because, in the judgment of eminent critics and scholars, it is the best and most practical reference work now on the market.

It is not one of those cheap, trashy encyclopedias, rehashed from old editions and printed from worn-out plates, but a first-class American encyclopedia, written by practical men, and only recently completed after years of labor and at enormous expense. Its articles are simple, clear and readable, containing all the facts in concise and comprehensive form.

It is designed for the home, for busy men, and for the school student of all ages. No other reference work on the market covers such a wide field. Its 12 large volumes deal with 9,000,000 topics—the equivalent of 100,000 volumes boiled down and condensed.

FIRST LINER SHEET

SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 15, 1909.

On All News Stands, Trains and Streets. | 5 CENTS.

SPECIAL NOTICES—

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS: Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.

Close calculations, covering a period of several months develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

The great volume of liners printed in The Sunday Times, numbering regularly over 3000 separate announcements, makes this regulation absolutely necessary in order to get the big Sunday issue out on time.

PERSONAL—
THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC.
PROF. STANLEY,
247 SOUTH HILL ST. 247.
LOOK FOR NAME AND NUMBER.
TRUTHFUL IN HIS PREDICTIONS.
RELIABLE IN HIS ADVICE.

NO MATTER WHAT TROUBLES YOU MAY HAVE WITH YOURSELF OR OTHERS, COME AND HE WILL GUIDE YOU TO SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS.

READINGS TO ALL, $1.

It is true that his fee is more than some others charge. However, he believes that he has passed the experimental stages and finds no one who is not willing to pay this small fee of one dollar, providing they receive reliable advice. If after the reading is over and you are not perfectly satisfied, he will not accept one penny of your money.

Always consult the best; it is the cheapest in the end. 'Tis better to consult no psychic at all than one who is not able to help you. False prophets do more harm than good.

NO NEED TO TELL HIM.

There is no need to tell Stanley your story. There will be no "quizzing" or asking of questions. His talents enable him to instinctively know your wants and troubles. Without any attempt at mystification, but with unerring sight into the inner nature of things, he reveals that which you most wish to know. His advice and help on all matters, business, lawsuits, marriage, health, is invaluable. It is exact and correct, not guess work. He gives names, dates, facts and figures, and shows clearly and distinctly the road to success in business as well as in domestic and family affairs.

Before you go into anything of importance or undertake anything serious—if you are not successful in business, love or marriage, or before you make any change you should consult the master mind of psychics.

If the telling of your name will satisfy you, he will do so free of charge. Also show you how it is done.

What is of most importance is facts and figures.

Without your writing or even speaking, he will give you names, dates and figures.

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult BYRON STANLEY, on past, present or future. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and psychics and their cheap claptrap methods, start anew and consult PROF. STANLEY. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 25 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE. In fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. He read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, and hundreds of others.

PROF ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted, when reading my hand and Horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

DR. ALEX. J. McIVOR TYNDALL SAYS: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY."

LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "Your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY."

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 232 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

WANTED—THE NAVY is composed of alert, reliable, efficient young men. They are being well paid because they know their work. When they enlisted, they were like the average untrained boy.

If you think you need the military training, practical instruction, regular hours, exercise and the chances the navy offers to show the stuff that's in you, investigate this subject.

If you have worked at any trade, you can probably follow it in the navy, becoming more expert by a course in a trade school; and promoted as you deserve it.

Plenty of recreation and sports, and spare time; shore leave granted deserving men frequently.

Many more apply than are enlisted, as the number of vacancies is limited; so if accepted, you will begin with a picked lot of young men. Applicants from 17 to 35 years old are enlisted for instruction in the Seaman Branch; electricity, clerical duty; Hospital Corps, etc. If you have a trade you may enlist if under 35.

Act promptly; get booklets about daily work, cruises, pay, promotion and privileges. But take time to consider fully before enlisting. Ask men in the navy how they like it. Apply NAVY RECRUITING STATION, San Fernando Bldg., Fourth and Main sts., Los Angeles. x*

WILLING TO LEARN SPANISH IN A VERY SHORT TIME?

In January, 1908, when I began to take a course in Spanish with Prof. Uribe (619 S. Hill st.,) I did not know a word of Spanish. In June of the same year I was elected teacher of that language at Covina High School.

This short story tells better than any words of praise what Prof. Uribe's method is worth. It makes one acquire the practical use of the language in a very effective way and master the difficulties of grammar without any drudgery.

C. J. VAN VLIET, teacher at Hollywood High School. x15

A GREAT FLEET.

Will Participate in the Hudson-Fulton Celebration Next Autumn.

Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, president of the Hudson-Fulton Celebration Commission, announces that fifty-three vessels of the United States Navy will be available for participation in the event. This will be the largest collection of war vessels that has ever been assembled in one place with the exception of the rendezvous of British ships in the English Channel. It will be the largest collection of war vessels ever brought together on this side of the Atlantic, and the largest collection of an international character ever assembled anywhere. The State Department notifies us that it is informed, through its Ambassador in Berlin, that Germany will send a squadron (probably four vessels) under the command of the ranking officer of the German navy, Admiral A. D. von Keister. England will send four cruisers, the Drake, Argyle, Duke of Edinburgh and the Black Prince, under command of Rear-Admiral Frederick T. Hamilton, who will be the official representative of Great Britain at the celebration. Italy will send the cruiser Etruria and her cadet ship, Aetna. France will also send an official representative and ships.

"I have been informed, unofficially, that five warships will come to take part in the celebration from South America. Mexico will send one gunboat, Bravo, under command of Capt. Manuel E. Izaguirre. The Netherlands will send the cruiser Utrecht (from the crew of which the replica of the Half Moon will be manned,) and probably two or three other war vessels. Guatemala will send a new coast patrol boat if it is finished in time, and other nations are still to be heard from.

The steamer Temple E. Dorr sailed today for Eureka to reload.

The Pacific Coast Steamship Company's steamer Santa Rosa sailed today for San Diego, and will call again tomorrow for freight and passengers on the way north.

The revenue cutter McCulloch sailed today for Redondo Beach on cruise. Yesterday she cruished around Catalina Island searching for smugglers.

Michael Nelson, formerly a winch driver on the steamer Thomas L. Wand, died suddenly at his home here this morning as a result of an illness contracted nineteen months ago while saving the life of two young men from drowning off Aberdeen, Gray's Harbor. During a storm the two men were seen in distress in a small boat. Nelson and two other sailors volunteered to save them. Being long exposed in the cold wind in wet clothes he caught a severe cold that developed into tuberculosis. Nelson was known for his bravery and held a medal for heroic action years ago on board a steamer that had caught fire. He leaves a widow and three children who are in destitute circumstances. A benefit subscription is being taken along the waterfront for them.

Terminal Island is without water today on account of a broken main of the Seaside Water Company at the San Gabriel River crossing.

The trim yacht Skidbladner, under command of her owner, Capt. F. A. Garbutt, of Los Angeles, put in at Eureka on the way to Seattle and Alaskan waters. A vessel of the class of the Skidbladner is somewhat of a curiosity at Eureka and drew crowds to the dock to inspect her. She sailed from Eureka yesterday.

The steamer Thomas L. Wand has arrived at Aberdeen to reload for San Pedro, after discharging 7500 sacks of cement at Tacoma.

An investigation of the loss of the steamer Winnebago, which went on a rock near Point Arena on the morning of July 31, while bound from the northern coast for San Pedro, was held Thursday at San Francisco before Inspectors Bulger and Bolles. The examination of officers showed that Capt. William Treanor remained in bed, even after being called by Second Officer McIntosh at midnight. The weather was clear when the captain retired. The Winnebago ran full speed on the rocks in a heavy fog and sank in thirty minutes. All hands were taken off. The total value of the steamer was $225,000, and she was insured for $120,000. The case was taken under advisement.

A Doubtful Bargain.

Stopping a moment to wipe the perspiration from her brow, while her husband turned the wringer, Mrs. Jones observed mournfully:

"Father offered to give me a piano if I would break off with you when you were courting me—now look at us."

"Ah, my dear," cheerfully responded Jones, "but we've been happy after all, haven't we?"

"Yes, we have," admitted Mrs. Jones, ruefully, "but there have been times when I would have liked to have swapped you for even a phonograph."—[Exchange.

Auctioneers Use Hour-Glass.

An auctioneer of Philadelphia collects all sorts of objects pertaining to his ancient calling. He has, among other things, an interesting set of auctioneers' hour glasses.

The auctioneer, a century or so ago, concluded a sale not by saying, "Going—going—gone!" and rapping the counter with his hammer, but it was his better method to turn up a free-running glass toward the end of the bidding, and to end the sale irrevocably when the sands ran out. This saved confusion and dispute.

The auctioneers' glasses in the Philadelphia collection are picturesque. One is of tortoiseshell and mother-of-pearl. Another is of amber and gold. A third is of teak and ivory.—[Exchange.

Breeding Wild Birds.

NEW INDUSTRY ESTABLISHED BY THE STATE ON AN ALAMEDA COUNTY FARM.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

THE State of California has just opened a bird farm near Hayward, Alameda county. It is supported by funds set apart from the general fund of the State Treasury and is under the general supervision of the State Fish and Game Commission.

The farm is under the superintendence of J. R. Argabrite, a Southern California man from Ventura county. Mr. Argabrite has been a naturalist and bird fancier all his life and brings to his new field of activity peculiar qualifications.

In the California State bird farm are included at present forty-two acres; but it is the expectation of the promoters to increase within the year to come, the area to one hundred acres.

A first object of the new institution is to stock the State with game birds such as pheasants, partridges, bob whites, wild turkeys, etc., for the benefit of the sporting element. California's game birds of today consist principally of wild ducks, geese, quail, doves, plover, etc., but the number of these has been so decimated by wanton slaughter that shooting generally is a very unsatisfactory sport.

It is to make up for this loss, and to build up a permanent stock of game birds throughout the State, that the new farm has been started. After this year it is expected that the farm will be able to turn out annually from 4000 to 8000 young birds, and these, protected by restrictive laws, will be able to exist and multiply in the forest, ranges and covers of the State.

California has no native pheasants, but with its favorable climate the imported bird does well and will undoubtedly, under favorable conditions, become very numerous. Mr. Argabrite tells me that the Hungarian pheasant promises to become the most popular game bird in the State.

A few of this species had already been imported, bred, and turned out in Ventura county by Mr. Argabrite before the opening of the State bird farm, and these have done well and are breeding very rapidly.

The State bird farm is being rapidly fitted up for operation to its full capacity. A superintendent's residence, barn, sheds, water tank and breeding pens have been erected, and the breeding of young birds begun in earnest.

There are fifty pens already erected and stocked with birds. The eggs are laid about the pens quite promiscuously and then are gathered up by the keeper and placed under hens for hatching. Of these brooding hens the State farm has a flock of 225 and they are of the white and barred Plymouth Rock strains.

After hatching the chicks are left with the hens about two months and then they are taken away and placed in pens by themselves where they are kept until large enough to liberate.

They will be liberated in bunches ranging in number from fifty to one hundred birds, and the utmost care will be exercised by the State in placing the birds. The distribution will be made as evenly over the State as possible, but no birds will be let out until the reliability of the applicant has been established and a pledge exacted from him that he will exercise due care of the fowl. Nor will birds be given out until the proposed range has been visited, inspected and approved by a competent person.

But doubtless these thousands and millions of birds to be bred in California will have a far more important mission than that of furnishing food for the shotgun, and that will be their conquest of the insect pests that have hitherto caused and are still causing great damage to the farmers and fruit growers of the State.

And this benefit cannot be better exemplified than by the words of W. R. McIntosh of Fresno, contained in a paper read before a recent California fruit growers' convention. In the course of his address Mr. McIntosh said:

"Nowhere in the material universe do we find a more interesting and beautiful law of balance and harmony than formerly existed in the lives of insects and wild birds. Insects are justly regarded everywhere as the enemies of agriculture. Their destroyers—the birds—must therefore be the farmers' best friends. So long as nature held undisputed sway our friends kept our enemies in check and small damage resulted to growing crops, and the husbandman was fairly secure in his calling.

"In the destruction of the home of the wild birds—the forests—by ax and fire, and the wanton and cruel slaughter of birds in the name of sport, the relations and harmony of nature have been undermined and the balance destroyed.

"Wild birds are decreasing to an alarming degree in every part of the United States. Injurious insects, as might have been expected, are therefore on the increase in a similar ratio. So striking has been the insect depredations on fruit trees and growing crops of late years that the appeal of farmers everywhere for relief is constantly on the increase. Scientists are searching every part of the world for insect-destroying parasites, while millions of dollars are being spent yearly in a vain attempt to check the ever-increasing ravages of these enemies of agriculture, horticulture, viticulture and gardening.

"The menace to successful agriculture is not comprised in insect pests alone. The rodents and noxious weeds must engage the constant attention of the farmer. Here again the beautiful friends of the farmers find ample scope for usefulness to mankind. The hawks, owls, shrikes and eagles live almost altogether upon the rodent enemies of the farmer, while seed-eating birds—the sparrows, finches, buntings and grosbeaks—comprise more than one-seventh of the North American species of birds.

"And while there has been much wanton destruction of birds and almost universal indifference as to their existence the birds have not been without their friends.

"Data gathered by the United States Department of Agriculture show that the annual tax paid to insect depredations exceeds the annual expenditures of the national government, including the pension roll and the maintenance of the army and navy."

ALASKAN WONDER.

MUIR GLACIER AGAIN VISIBLE.

CAN BE APPROACHED ONCE MORE BY STEAMBOATS.

Is Superior in Extent and Picturesque Settings to Anything Switzerland Can Produce—Its Recession Has Uncovered a Large Mountain. Other Alaskan Glaciers.

After hiding its massive crevassed face for nine years, the celebrated Muir glacier in Alaska has come into view once more, says a Vancouver correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. In Seattle it is said in jest that this wonderful event was timed so that visitors to the exposition might have a side trip of splendid charm.

An imaginative man at Sitka says that a subterranean earthquake brought the great 400 miles of ice into view again, but the captains of the steamboats which ply to Glacier bay have simpler explanations. They state that through some peculiar drifting of the ice they are now enabled to cautiously poke the noses of their vessels through lanes of bergs until their passengers can get a glimpse of the left face of the most famous glacier in America.

There are more wonders in the strip of land which the United States, through Seward, obtained from Russia for $7,000,000 than in sixty Switzerlands. Along that wondrous coast line a gallery of sublime pictures extends for mile after mile. Majestic mountains, glaciers, falls, cascades, forests, peaks and spires, and domes of ice and snow afford furniture enough for a dozen Yosemites.

Of all these none is more remarkable than the glacier which Prof. John Muir, the famous Californian, discovered, with its thousands caverns and rushing rivulets and with lovely flowers growing amid its Artic cold.

UNDERGOES STRIKING CHANGES.

During the time this glacier was inaccessible it underwent remarkable changes, as those who visited it then and now bear witness. In the early nineties it was much alive; now part of it seems dead. It has divided into portions—one from which huge bergs break with thunderous reverberations, the other dead, with land forming between it and the sea. Erosion has worked out a new bay that is soon to be charted.

When Muir explored the glacier he discovered what he presumed was the top of a hill projecting through the ice. This has developed into a large mountain, dividing the fields. The ice also has receded at least four miles in the nine years the glacier has been hidden.

Although the Muir glacier is said to have an area of 400 miles only about 100 miles have been explored. Of late years more attention has been paid to the Davidson glacier, which is equally as wonderful in its way. The end of the Davidson is a mile and a half from the shore. The glacier spreads out in fan shape, about two miles from tip to tip and extends far back into the mountains. To reach it the passengers on the steamers from Seattle have to go ashore in small boats. Fragrant young spruce and cedar cover the interval between sea and ice field. Thick soft mosses and lichens carpet the ground, while violets nestle in clusters, and on the edges of the forest is seen the iris in all its rich coloring.

PICTURESQUE VIEWS ON TRAIL.

Remarkable comparisons can be made as the traveler makes his way to the ice field. Besides the forest, a hay field, a stretch of ground filled with Alaska's showy fireweed and a strip of gravel are passed. The trail is across a moraine composed of mud, polished stones, pieces of rock and dark earth, whose substrata is solid ice.

Some misinformed scientists assert that the glaciers help to give Alaska the mild climate which its coast section enjoys and which is the wonder of visitors who go there prepared to brave the rigors of the Arctic itself. At Sitka and Fort Wrangel the thermometer rarely sinks to zero, while in the interior, beyond the region of glaciers, the winters are terribly cold, 60 below being not unknown.

Skagway is in the same latitude as the northern part of Labrador, but it never experiences the terrible weather which makes winter in the latter country so terrible. However, there are glaciers in Labrador, so that the theory as to their effect upon cold does not "cut much ice." The mild climate of the Alaska coast is due to the Japanese current, the Pacific equivalent to the Gulf stream.

The Davidson glacier is receding faster than it forms. At one time it reached the ocean, now trees are growing up rapidly in the wake of its retreat. The approximate rate of recession is given by data furnished by the trees themselves. Broods of different ages follow the succession, the youngest being, of course, near the present terminus of the ice.

ANOTHER FIELD ON STIKINE RIVER.

Another wonderful field of glaciers is seen along the Stikine River, which empties into the Pacific near Wrangel, after flowing through British Columbia and Alaska. About fifteen miles above the mouth is the first of the great glaciers. Thirty-five miles from the mouth is seen the lower expanded part of another glacier, measuring six miles around the snout. It occupies a bold situation in the middle of the valley, among the trees. It takes its rise in the heart of the glacier laden Alps from 10,000 to 12,000 feet high, which are the source of the largest tributary of the Stikine. Compared with it the famous Swiss Mer de Glace is insignificant.

To the voyager on the river who sees it through the gaps of the trees growing on one of its terminal moraines, it appears a thing of marvelous beauty, with chasms and clustered pinnacles showing to great advantage in the sunshine.

IN WASHINGTON AND NEW YORK.

BY MARSHALL CUSHING.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—A friend of mine has been pointing out to me that it has required something more than sentiment to effectuate prohibition in so many States and counties; it has required the business consideration. Many saloons have been located in the neighborhood of large industrial establishments. When the men go out to luncheon they get a glass or two of beer, or a glass or two of almost beer. This doesn't make them unsteady, but they are not so attentive to their work as would otherwise be the case; and if they are working in connection with heavy or delicate machinery, they are much more likely to injure themselves. It also happens (as the manufacturer or other large employer of the neighborhood argues) that a great many employers' liability laws have been passed by various State Legislatures, and there is the principle of the national law, which is likely to be extended generally. By this the damages for the injury are put entirely upon the business; that is, upon the employer, and the old doctrine of contributory negligence is thus disappearing. Since the employer cannot, apparently, get out from under this, he gets out from under the situation by discouraging the daily use of beer by his men during work hours by voting and inducing his friends, as far as possible, to vote for prohibition, and he spends his money liberally on the quiet for that purpose. This, at all events, is the firm belief of my friend, whose energies are [illegible] to encouraging the [illegible] beer; and he repeats [illegible] ness argument, and [illegible] of the prohibitionists [illegible] of the dirty saloon [illegible] the prohibition work.

SELL VALUABLE ACRES.

The Holmes-Walton Company reports the following sales of acreage north of Glendale: For H. E. Stoddard, to A. E. Smith, ten acres, unimproved, in the townsite of Crescenta, four miles north of Glendale, the price paid being $5000; for Helen L. Eaton, to R. A. Walton, ten acres, unimproved, in the town site of Crescenta, about four miles north of Glendale, $3500; for H. E. Stoddard, to H. Allen, eleven acres, unimproved, in the townsite of Crescenta, about four miles north of Glendale, the consideration being $4800. The same company reports the sale for H. F. Stoddard, to R. A. Walton, of a lot on the east side of Vermont avenue, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets, 45x150 feet, improved with a modern cottage, the consideration being $5500.

LOOKS LIKE BUSINESS.

It is reported that the $500,000 bond issue of the Los Angeles Athletic Club has all been underwritten, and that a like amount in stock has been fully subscribed. The sale of life memberships is also reported to have netted $100,000, and the directors are expressing the belief that the great new building project is likely to begin as early as November 1. No plans for the proposed huge structure at Seventh and Olive have yet been approved.

Floyd F. Lewis reports the sale for David C. McCann of twelve and one-half acres at the northwest corner of Sixty-fifth street and Vermont avenue, for $15,000. The tract has a frontage of 495 feet on Vermont avenue, and subdivides into ninety lots, 46x135 feet each. Alexander Grant purchased the property as an investment, and will hold it for subdivision at a future time. The Briggs company represented the buyer in this deal.

OUR DUBLIN LETTER.

BELFAST A PARADISE FOR ALL MUNICIPAL GRAFTERS.

Tax Collecting Scandal Exposed by Report of the Auditors Who Have Been Investigating the City's Finances—Dublin Gets Testimonial from Judge Who Declares That It Is Practically Free from Crime.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

DUBLIN, Aug. 1.—Belfast is still having trouble with its finances and the examination of its accounts by a firm of professional auditors as a result of the defalcations by the tax collectors, which I described a few weeks ago, has revealed a condition of affairs which would bring joy to the heart of the worst municipal grafter in America. Apparently the taxpayers of Belfast have been a collection of easy marks for anybody who cared to help himself and the astonishing thing about it is that even now nothing has been done to place the city's financial methods on a business footing. The auditors find that in one year the amount of local taxes written off as irrecoverable in one ward alone was $25,000 while for the whole city more than $100,000 has been scheduled every year as incapable of collection. It has been shown already that at least part of this money has been collected and pocketed and it is proposed now to make a thorough investigation of these accounts and find out how many of them have really been paid. The auditors point out that it is extremely unlikely that in a prosperous business city like Belfast there should be such a large amount of taxes irrecoverable, and they also draw attention to the fact that some of the taxes thus scheduled were due in respect to business buildings occupied by leading mercantile firms.

Another Belfast scandal is promised in connection with the expenses of the Health Commission, which recently held a special investigation into the sanitary condition of the city after the terrible outbreaks of spotted fever. The expenses of the commission amounted to $10,000 and the Local Government Board has refused to allow the greater part of the bill on the ground that three members of the commission were unqualified and were illegally appointed. It is stated that these persons were friends of some political personages in the northern capital and further revelations are promised.

It should be borne in mind that Belfast is governed by the very persons who are loudest in their opposition to ome rule on the ground that it would pen the way to political scandals imilar to those which we hear about n American cities. Apparently the elf-righteous North has nothing to earn from the rest of Ireland or from nywhere else in the science of misgov rnment.

Another refutation of the slanders hich are commonly uttered against he people of Ireland is furnished by he remarks of Justice Dodd in pening the criminal sessions for the ity and county of Dublin. The total opulation in the district is 450,000, ut there were only two serious of nses and thirty-eight minor charges o be tried. The county area—outside e city—has a population of 160,000 d it sent only one case, and that a oubtful one, for trial. As the judge marked the people of the county of ublin had reached the lowest rec d of crime that was possible—"prac cally nil."

A striking cartoon has been published is week in several of the leading ish papers apropos of the returns of opulation which show that in the last fty years the population of England d Wales has doubled while that of reland has decreased 33 per cent. A an and emaciated Irishman is con onting a fat and plethoric looking ohn Bull. "Why Pat," says John, ou are only half the size you were fifty-seven years ago." "Yes," Pat replies, "and fifty years ago you were only half the size you are now." The lesson is so obvious that no further comment is needed.

The scandal of Rathlin Island has been revived by T. W. Russell, President of the Department of Agriculture, who declares that the condition of the islanders is a blot on civilization. As a matter of fact, the inhabitants of the island, which lies only five miles off the coast of Antrim, are as remote from the mainland as if they were in the middle of the Atlantic. The coast is rocky and dangerous, and it is only in the best of weather that the hardy fishermen and farmers who form the island population dare launch their little boats or land on its shores. For weeks together they are cut off from all communication with civilization, and all for want of $35,000 which is required to build a suitable landing pier and harbor. Government after government has promised to do this but each one in turn has pleaded poverty and postponed the work until next year. The Antrim County Council has repeatedly demanded and appealed that the work be done, but has only received empty promises in return. This is only one example of how difficult it is for Ireland, which pays far more than its share of the national taxes, to get anything for its money.

Another case of English parsimony in dealing with Ireland is furnished by the action of the Treasury in respect of the work done in preparing statistics for the Royal Commission on the Poor Law which has just published the most voluminous report ever turned out by any government department. When the work was ordered the Treasury annouced that it would be "adequately paid for." The Treasury is now paying and it is estimated that the remuneration averages 21 cents a day each for the time the clerks and workhouse masters spent on it. The Derry Board of Guardians, for instance, received a check for $10 and the Clonmel Board one for $12.50. The Clonmel Board passed a resolution instructing the clerk to return the money and tell the English government to build a Dreadnought with it.

A curious dispute has arisen between the people of Cavan and the Roman Catholic Bishop of that diocese with regard to the movement to erect a monument in the grounds of the old Franciscan Abbey at Cavan, over the graves of Owen Roe O'Neill and his heroic lieutenant Myles O'Reilly, better known as "Myles the Slasher," who fell in the battle of Benburb, County Tyrone, in 1646 when Owen Roe routed the English troops under General Munro. The bishop has taken up an attitude of hostility to the proposal, on what grounds is not very clear. He declares that it is backed by politicians and by a secret society, but in this he is entirely misinformed, for the principal men connected with the movement are the Sinn Fein leaders in the district. They may be described as politicians, although it is rather stretching the word to apply it to men who are opposed to political agitation and methods, but they certainly are not secret society men, and are as strongly opposed to secret society methods as the bishop himself. An effort has been made to get him to discuss the matter, but he has refused to receive a deputation. In spite of his opposition a rousing meeting was held in Cavan the other day and nearly 3000 people traveled by special trains from Dublin to be present. A number of the priests in the diocese addressed the meeting, and several others wrote regretting their inability to be present.

WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 12.—There no disputing the fact that since the e many people who ought to be liv g here are dwelling in adjacent coun s. Various reasons are assigned for is. Some families may think it is althier for the children and there e men so constituted as to be un ppy unless catching a train twice a y. But the real reason for the great mber of suburbanites is modestly ven by P. H. McCarthy, labor candi te for Mayor, who says that people t when he was not elected and will turn when he is.

There was a rough house in the Camera Club and a member, fearful of broken negatives, called the police. The other members at variance over parliamentary procedure, at once united against the common enemy and the patrolmen were ignominiously repelled, and the members were all in order when Walter Scott, president of the club and foreman of the grand jury, fined the telltale member a round of drinks.

Her mother, sister and aunt up in Oregon, however, say that the lieutenant's apparition said to them: "The son-of-a-gun sneaked up behind me and hit me on the head. I did not know I was shot until I woke up in eternity." Oregon can now justly claim the palm for imagination.

WATCH STRIKERS AT BIER.

Police Fear Outbreak at McKee's Rocks—Unionites Fail to Stop New Men.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 14.—Steve Horvath, the striker who was killed during an attack on Maj. Smith, a negro, at McKee's Rock Thursday, was buried today.

Three thousand strikers from the Pressed Steel Car Company plant escorted the remains to Pittsburgh from Schoeville, while the balance of the strikers stood guard at the works on account of a rumor that more new men would be taken in the plant during the funeral services.

Notwithstanding the vigilance of the strikers, it is said that 250 additional men were taken into the plant during the day.

The parade today was the first appearance of the strikers upon the streets in a body, and, fearing trouble, the line of march was closely watched by the police, who restricted the emblems carried in the procession to American flags.

BIRMINGHAM DISCHARGED.

Directors of Windsor Trust Company Announce Dismissal of Head of Loan Department.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Stirling Birmingham, head of the loan department of the Windsor Trust Company of this city, was discharged today, according to an announcement of the board of directors. Birmingham is alleged to have accepted a bonus for negotiating a loan of $50,000 to an agent of F. Augustus Heinze, who believed that the money was being furnished by the trust company. But the collateral was turned over to Donald L. Persch, a young note broker, who is under arrest, charged with larceny.

Concerning Birmingham, the trust company issued the following statement:

"Stirling Birmingham is no longer connected with the Windsor Trust Company, having been discharged when it was ascertained that he had accepted a bonus of $250, in connection with the loan supposedly made by Charles Katz, president of the Eastern Brewing Company, to M. M. Joyce.

"Inasmuch as the office of the District Attorney has under consideration the act of Mr. Birmingham in accepting a consideration, it is manifestly improper that this company should comment further upon Mr. Birmingham's relation to the case."

Young Persch is still held in the Tombs in default of $50,000 bail. He hinted that unless financial aid was forthcoming he would break his silence and reveal the identity of his associates in the transaction.

SLAYS FATHER TO SAVE BABE.

Dallas Woman Shoots When Her Parent Threatens Her Infant's Life. Released on Bail.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

DALLAS (Tex.) Aug. 14.—To save the life of her baby, Mrs. Belle Pistole declares she was compelled to shoot her father, Ransom Ross, to death in the family home, twelve miles north of Dallas, last night.

Mrs. Pistole was brought before Criminal Judge Seay, who liberated her on $1500 bail.

Ross was a prominent farmer, and was regarded as a model citizen except when under the influence of intoxicants. He came to Dallas Thursday and returned home drunk. The crying of his little grandson, in its mother's lap, infuriated him. He declared if the mother did not make the child cease crying, he would kill it. The mother failed to quiet the baby.

Ross got a revolver. As he turned toward her, Mrs. Pistole fired twice with a revolver. The first bullet pierced her father's left side, and the second his heart.

GREAT NORTHERN SUFFERS.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 14.—The Great Northern railroad is the only Northwestern line that shows a falling off in earnings for the last fiscal year. The decrease in gross earnings from freight and passenger traffic amounts to more than $1,000,000. There was a decrease in operating expenses of over three million dollars.

The hard times of last year caused a falling off in business during the first part of the fiscal year, though the last six months were among the best the road ever experienced. The total operating revenue for 1909 amounted to $53,658,463, a decrease of $735,009 from 1908.

The revenue is divided as follows: Freight, $39,473,667; passenger, $10,979,957; other revenues, $2,979,158, and non-transportation revenue, $225,679.

The operating expenses, maintenance of way and structures, $9,786,664; maintenance of equipment, $6,169,278; traffic expenses, $746,139; transportation expenses, $14,808,002 and general expenses, $1,014,462, making a total of $32,524,547, a decrease of $3,619,449 from

KENTUCKY FEUD AFLAME.

LEXINGTON (Ky.) Aug. 14.—A feud has broken out between the White and Triplett factions in Knott county, and in a fight today Dodd White was shot and seriously wounded, and Farris Triplett was struck on the head with a sledge hammer and fatally hurt. Both sides are arming. The trouble arose over the disposition of live stock.

CHINA WILL NEGOTIATE.

PEKING, Aug. 14.—The Chinese government in a formal communication to Japan has agreed to negotiate at Mukden the various points in the Antung-Mukden railroad controversy not already settled. The position taken by Japan is accepted in principle by China. The Chinese government views the present situation in the Chinese Chien Tao district between Korea and Manchuria with considerable uneasiness. Further trouble there is feared.

ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS.

The following reports of new building enterprises are from the columns of the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer: F. S. Allen has been commissioned by the school trustees of San Jacinto to prepare plans for a new High School building to be two stories and basement, frame and plaster, 68x100 feet, with tile roof and to cost $15,000.

Hunt, Eager & Burns have taken figures for a fine three-story fifteen-room residence to be built on Harvard boulevard near Washington street for Mrs. Jeannette Baruch. It will be 64x75 feet, of frame construction with stucco plaster exterior. The style is in modern Italian Renaissance. Much of the interior woodwork, which will be mahogany and Circassian walnut. The grounds will be elaborately improved, with formal gardens in the rear and handsome concrete pergolas at the sides of the residence.

W. F. Thompson has completed plans for a two-story brick store, office and lodge building, 65x100 feet, to be built at Hollywood for C. E. Toberman. The first floor will be divided into store rooms, the second into offices and lodge halls. The estimated cost is $25,000.

Norman F. Marsh has been commissioned by the Board of Education of South Pasadena to prepare plans for a two-story-and-basement school building at Collins street and Marengo avenue. The structure will be in the shape of the letter H, 120 feet long with two wings 70 feet deep. Figures will be taken on both reinforced concrete and brick construction. There are to be eight grade rooms, sloyd and domestic science, sewing, teachers', principals' and library rooms. The estimated cost is $34,000.

Dennis & Farwell have prepared sketches for a two-story stone and brick bank and office building, 50x60 feet, to be built at Third and Canal streets, Wilmington, by M. J. McDermott and other business men of San Pedro. The estimated cost is $20,000.

The Board of Education expects to take early action calling for completed plans for the architects selected to design several of the new schoolhouses contemplated under the bond issue. The first list of buildings, with the architects, is as follows: High School, Parkinson & Bergstrom; Polytechnic High School addition, F. P. Burnham; Normandie-avenue school, eleven rooms, Homer Glidden, architect, $20,000; Fifty-second and Hoover-street school, nine rooms, Julius Krause, architect, $20,000; Denver-avenue school, nine rooms, Edelman & Barnett, architects, $20,000; Sixty-sixth and San Pedro school, nine rooms, A. B. Benton, architect, $20,000; Hooper-avenue school, eight-room annex, Hunt, Eager & Burns, architects, $20,000; Fifty-first-street school, four-room building, Morgan & Walls, architects, $10,000; Bridge-street annex, four rooms, Eisen & Son, architects, $10,000; Main-street addition, Hudson & Munsell, architects, $10,000. Other grade schools are contemplated but no architects have been chosen.

F. M. Tyler is preparing plans for a two-story eight-room residence for J. W. Moore, at South Pasadena and a two-story eight-room residence at Pico and Sixth avenue for Mr. Brune. Plans are also under way for a seven-room bungalow, 36x65 feet, at Montecito Park for M. E. Johnson.

E. D. Pettitfils has prepared plans for a two-story ten-room residence on West Thirtieth street, near Western avenue. It will have stone and plastered walls, oak and mahogany trim and will cost $7500.

The California Bungalow Company is preparing plans for a two-story ten-room frame residence on Cahuenga avenue, near Fifth street to cost $5000, and has started a $4500 house at No. 2224 West Twenty-fourth street.

Train & Williams have prepared plans for a two-story class C store and apartment building at Tenth and Park View for Mrs. Mary L. Redmon, and for a frame clubhouse at Alamitos Bay.

The C. B. Weaver Construction Company of Los Angeles has been awarded the contract for building the $150,000 "monastery," a unique addition to the Riverside Mission Inn, designed by A. B. Benton of Los Angeles.

J. A. Klarquist has secured a contract for building a two-story brick store building at Eighth and Hill streets for the Wilcox estate. The building will cost over $40,000 when completed. The plans were prepared by Eisen & Son.

[illegible] architects will prepare sketches for a City Hall for Pomona, the City Council having invited a competition. The building will cost $30,000.

That Southern California residence architecture is growing in favor in other sections of the country is shown by the numerous calls for plans from Los Angeles. A. S. Heineman has prepared and delivered to T. A. Snyder, the "catsup king," plans for a one-story ten-room patio bungalow to be erected at Dayton Beach, Fla. The house will be 80x50 feet and will have double walls, a construction peculiar to that country. It will cost $18,000. Mr. Heineman has also made plans for a two-story nine-room plaster residence, 42x50 feet, for Mrs. Julia Govans of Sacramento. It will have a patio and mahogany and Spanish cedar trim and will cost $12,000. Robert Hall of Hanford has secured plans from Mr. Heineman for a two-story seven-room, vitrified tile and plaster residence to cost about $5000.

The farms of the United States will yield an increase in their harvests which will be worth above $8,000,000,000. The mills in various parts of the world are turning out a larger value of gold and silver than ever before. In the United States the production of iron in the crude state is not only up to the normal, but up to the great record of 1907, and likely to surpass it. The mills are all running full time under the impetus of heavy demand on the part of railroads for rolling stock, motive power and rails, and also from an active demand for structural iron in its various shapes. There seems to be only one thing lacking to make business really hum, and that is labor. The sources of supply are being drawn upon right now to meet this demand, and the incoming of immigrants from foreign shores is increasing weekly. Money is as plentiful as wheat or cotton and may be had on terms the most reasonable known in history, taking the world all together. All these facts serve as foundations on which to build a great prosperity, a process of construction that is now under full headway. Our own farmers have had abundant harvests, the great citrus crop running up already to nearly 35,000 carloads, an increase of about 20 per cent. over any former record. The beet factories of the State are now in full swing and the farmers are being paid large sums of money for their beets.

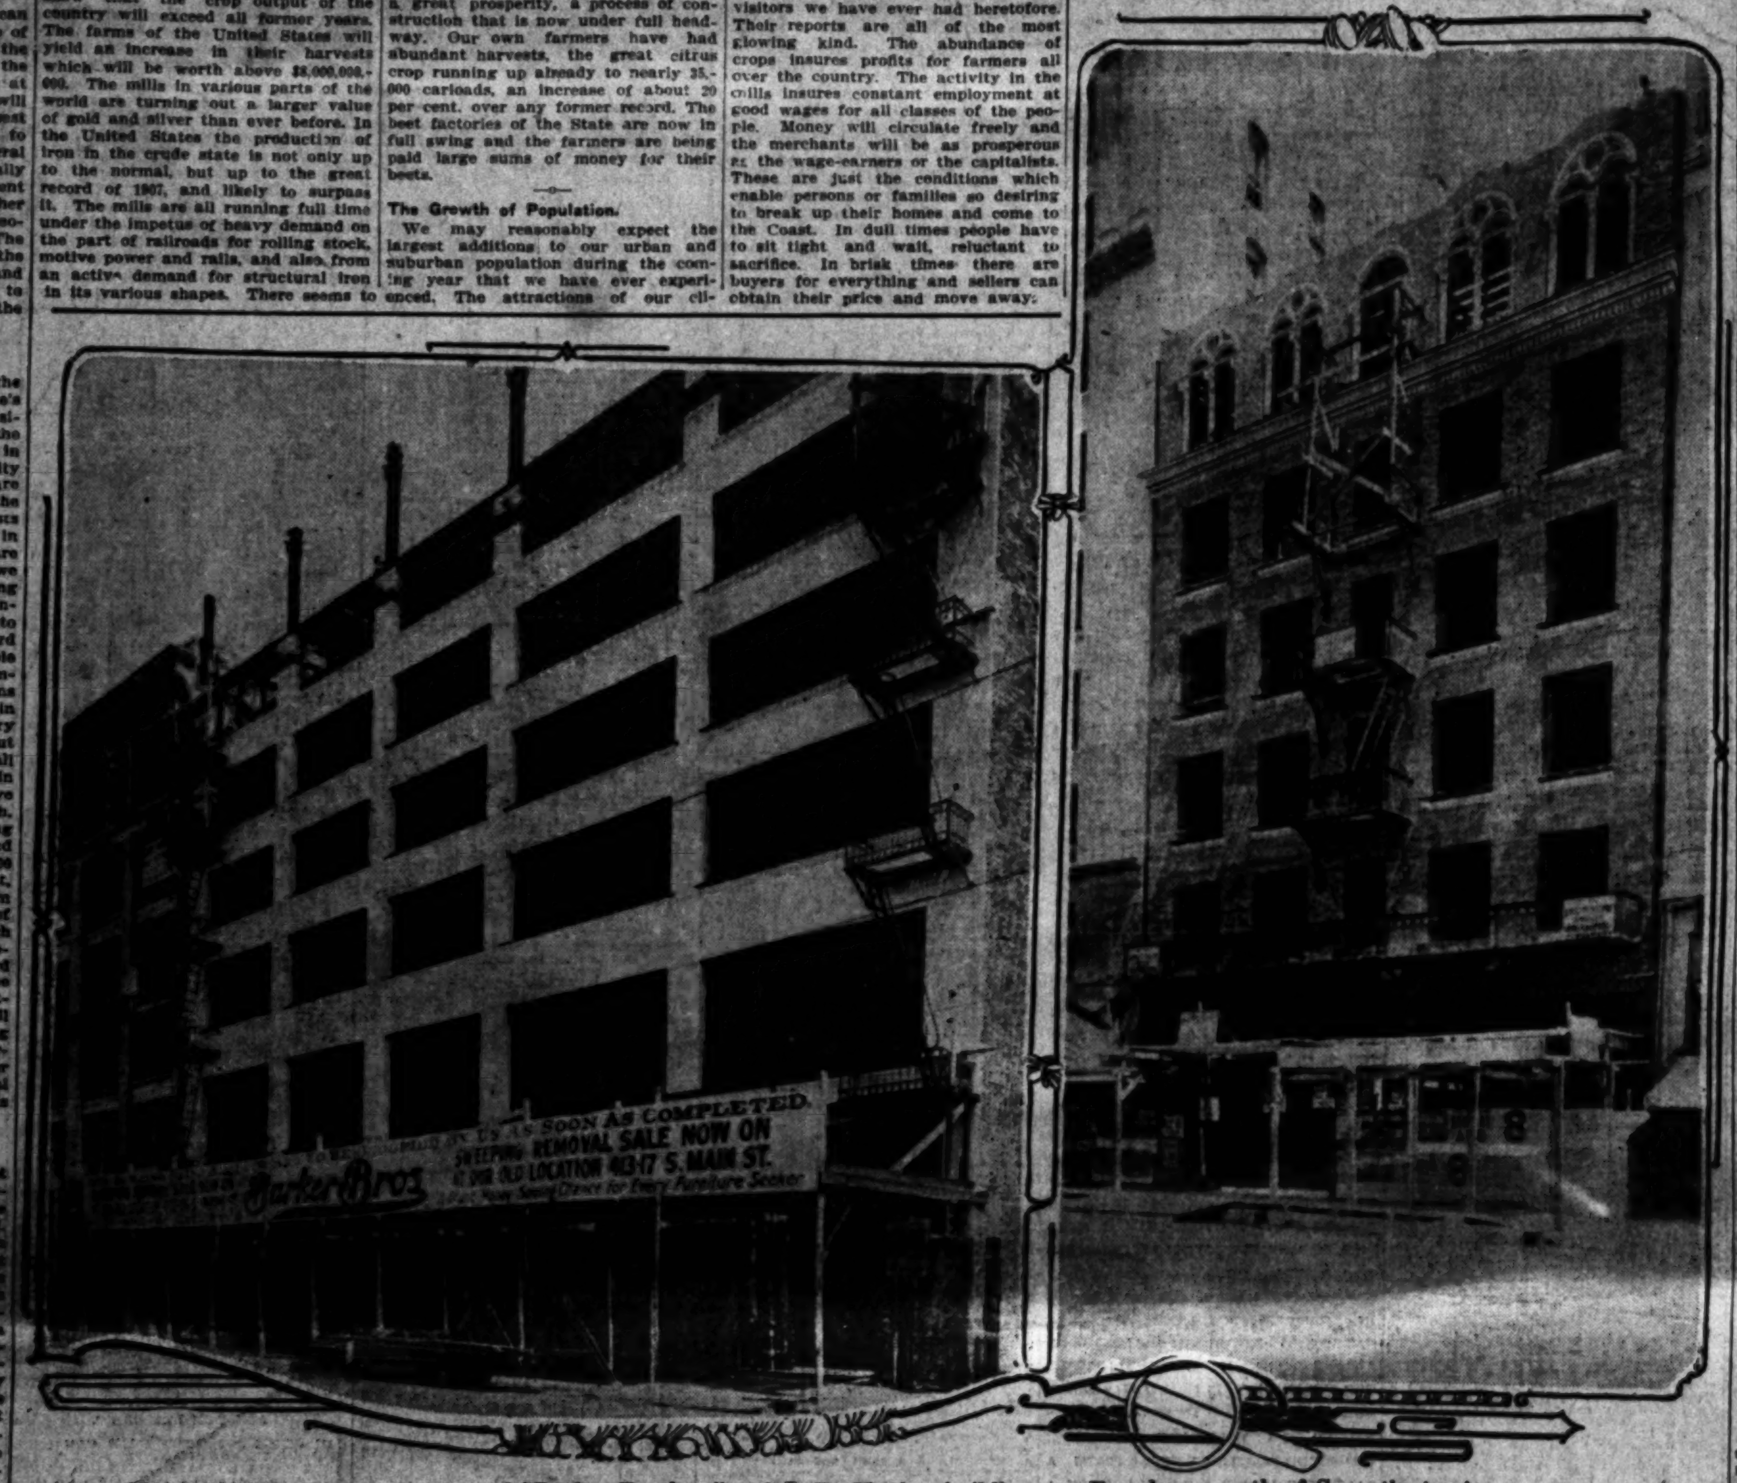
The Growth of Population.

We may reasonably expect the largest additions to our urban and suburban population during the coming year that we have ever experienced. The attractions of our climate, the opportunities for earning a livelihood in this city and its surroundings are more generally understood, not only in the United States but over the whole world, than ever before. We have had the largest number of visitors during this summer that ever came to learn who and what we are, and they have gone home more deeply impressed with the advantages of this country than any visitors we have ever had heretofore. Their reports are all of the most glowing kind. The abundance of crops insures profits for farmers all over the country. The activity in the mills insures constant employment at good wages for all classes of the people. Money will circulate freely and the merchants will be as prosperous as the wage-earners or the capitalists. These are just the conditions which enable persons or families so desiring to break up their homes and come to the Coast. In dull times people have to sit tight and wait, reluctant to sacrifice. In brisk times there are buyers for everything and sellers can obtain their price and move away.



Present appearance of "Barker Brothers" and J. D. Hooker buildings on Broadway, south of Seventh street.

Big Things in Sight.

The whole world has its eyes fixed upon the Panama Canal and is speculating upon the effects the opening of the ditch will have on commerce. It is seen that a great stimulus will be given to business all along the west coast of the Americas from the mouth of the Yukon to Patagonia. Great financiers and industrial promoters are looking up and down the coast with the intention of laying down plants and opening up business in anticipation of the great change coming. Scarcely less is the world-wide attention paid to the great undertaking Los Angeles has in hand to bring a vast volume of water 250 miles from the snows of Mount Whitney to the city and the country round about. The whole valley around the city of Los Angeles is sure to be quickened by its coming, and here again far-seeing people are preparing to reap gain from this near-approaching event.

—o—

Peaceful Conditions Prevail.

The new tariff act is at last passed. It is an excellent law embodying ample protection to nearly all American industries. The resentment expressed by French, English and German manufacturers only emphasizes the advantages the new law still safeguards to American industries. Hair-splitting theorists chopping syllogistic logic may gabble as much like geese in a pond as they please, but hard-headed business men with horse sense know that if the tariff schedules are so arranged as to shut out impossible competition with the products of beggarly-rewarded labor in foreign countries we shall do our own work at home, calling for the active cooperation of every wage-earner in the country who is willing to work, and that under these conditions wages are sure to be better than if half the workers in the country were idle and each one jostling the other for the chance to get a job at any wages. The same geese-gabble may go on about labor gaining no benefit unless foreign immigration is shut out, but practical men know that the competition with even a million immigrants is less crushing on our own people than if they had to compete directly with the 100,000,000 low-priced laborers all over Western Europe and Eastern Asia. Another influence making for peace and so for prosperity is the admirable common-sense poise of our President. In every act of his government he is going to conduct himself with the same restraint and admirable judgment as he displayed in dealing with the tariff question. He was instrumental in getting that law passed more quickly than it would have been without his intervention, and everything he did showed his recognition of the necessity of protecting American labor by crushing the free-traders in Congress.

SELLS LOTS ON SANTA FE.

SOUTHWARD HO!

WILL TRANSFORM WHOLE BLOCK.

BUILDERS FOLLOW "RECKLESS" DEPARTMENT STORE.

Two Business Structures Now Nearing Completion Will Finish Nearly a Half Block of Contiguous Tall Modern Buildings in Keeping With Importance of City.

When the huge building now occupied by Hamburgers was erected "wise ones" shook their heads and pronounced the enterprise sheer folly. Since that date such "folly" has quite a vogue. South Broadway below Sixth street has been literally transformed and made into a new thoroughfare. And the end is not yet. On this page are reproduced two large business blocks nearing completion on this part of the popular highway.

The two buildings pictured will complete nearly half a block of contiguous strictly modern structures between Seventh and Eighth streets, on the east side of Broadway and beginning at the Lankershim Hotel. There is perhaps nowhere else in the business section an unbroken row of structures which are so strictly in keeping with the size and importance of Los Angeles. It will within a short time be the privilege of The Times to publish the perspective of another huge building which is to be erected in the same popular section.

The building for Clara B. Burdette and P. M. Johnson at Nos. 724-732 South Broadway is now completed to the seventh floor. It has probably been erected in what is record time for this city. The entire work will be finished by October 1. Day labor has been used throughout. The structure is a splendid example of the best in Class B construction. R. B. Young, the architect, is personally supervising the building. The cost represented is about $140,000.

The first, second and mezzanine stories will be finished in antique oak, and the floors will be of hardwood throughout. The building will be equipped with two plunger passenger elevators and two plunger freight elevators. The exterior is of white enamel pressed brick, with terra cotta trimmings. The frontage is 110 feet and the depth 150 feet. Barker Bros. will occupy the entire structure and conduct in it one of the largest and most complete furniture houses in the country.

The building for J. D. Hooker immediately adjoins the Lankershim Hotel on the south. It is of Class C construction, and six stories in height. The exterior work is almost completed. It will be one of the handsomest structures in the city. Parkinson & Bergstrom are the architects. The cost is approximately $100,000.

The front is of old gold pressed brick, with terra cotta trimmings, and practically every bit of material used in the structure is the product of Los Angeles industry. The frontage is 60 feet and the depth 150 feet to an alley.

The construction of the building, which was delayed by the plumbers' strike, is now being rapidly pushed forward. The roof will be finished next week, and the interior finish and plastering will be started at once. It is probable that the building will be ready for occupancy within ninety days. F. O. Engstrum & Co. are the contractors.

NEW TURPENTINE PLANT.

Local Capitalists Interested in Building of Thirty-five Thousand-Dollar Factory.

Turpentine and its by-products will soon be manufactured in Los Angeles by a new concern. L. D. Corbett, a Chicago oil man, and for many years interested in the manufacture of paints, has had plans drawn for a factory, which will be erected here, at a cost of $35,000.

The plant, which will have a capacity of 10,000 gallons of refined turpentine a day, will cover about two acres and will include four large stills, five storage tanks of 20,000 gallons capacity each, and a warehouse and office building. It will be owned largely by local capitalists, and be known as the International Turpentine Company.

BUYS LARGE HOTEL.

Bunker Hill Hostelry Changes Hands at a Consideration of Sixty Thousand.

George A. Otis has purchased the Hotel Rowan at No. 123 South Bunker Hill for a consideration reported at $60,000. The seller was H. T. Coffin, and the deal was made through the agency of R. J. Widney. The property was sold under a lease of five years at $450 a month rental.

The structure is of frame construction, with a frontage of three stories on Bunker Hill and of six stories on Hope street. It contains 108 rooms. The building stands on a lot 40x165 feet in size.

SYNDICATE BUYS TRACT.

Twenty Acres Adjoining Eagle Rock to Be Resubdivided Into Half-Acre Lots.

The Edwards and Wildey Company reports the sale for John J. Lindgrin to a Hollywood syndicate of the entire Panorama tract in the central portion of Eagle Rock. The property consists of twenty acres, having a frontage of about seven hundred feet on Colorado street, and adjoins the Eagle Rock Townsite tract on the west.

The new owners will resubdivide the tract into half-acre lots and will immediately install extensive improvements. All the lots will be built upon by the syndicate and will be placed upon the market after improvement with artistic bungalows. The consideration was $20,000. Other Eagle Rock sales by the Edwards and Wildey Company bring their week's sales in this district up to $31,000.

A splendid nine-room house in the choice residence portion of the southwest, near St. Andrews Place. This house was built last June, is in perfect condition and must be sold immediately. The price is a great sacrifice for this property, which is modern in every particular.

The main entrance is into a beautiful living-room, back of which is a large music-room or den. Another door from the front porch opens into the large dining-room. The kitchen and breakfast-room are perfect in arrangement and finish. There are two sleeping rooms downstairs. The two bedrooms upstairs are unusually light and airy, and have commodious closets. The lot is large, and highly improved and has garage. Do not fail to see this if you are looking for a home.

This perfect example of the "Swiss chalet" style bungalow is located in the Wilshire-Normandie Hill district, and "perfect" is certainly the word for it. On an east-front lot 50x150 feet, with eight large rooms, within one-half block from excellent car service, and with a view of mountain and valley which is unsurpassed, we believe you will agree with us that it is without an equal. The interior is the acme of cosy comfort and elegant simplicity—hardwood floors throughout, basement and furnace, two toilets and lavatories, handsome stone mantel, all those delightful built-in features which render furniture almost superfluous, the handsomest lighting fixtures and the finest of triple-satin-finish woodwork throughout. There are four superb sleeping-rooms, part below stairs and part above, one with its own sun porch and outside entrance. Finally there is a good garage with cement drive. Is this not enough to make you desire it—just to read of it? And if anything, our description is inadequate. If you want a home at all, you will certainly fall in love with this one. Just $6500!

The windows are large and of the best French plate. Every room in the house (except kitchen and maid's room) has oak floors. There are two beautiful bathrooms, the main one being one of the handsomest fully tiled bathrooms in Los Angeles. The cellar is large and is equipped with gas furnace and Pittsburgh automatic heater. In addition to the ten main rooms, there is a splendid sleeping porch.

The exterior of the house is very beautiful, the lines are perfect and give the effect of a much larger house.

The fixtures throughout are artistic and beautiful, but not gaudy. In fact, this house represents the highest type of architectural skill we have ever seen displayed in producing a well-built, beautiful and modern house at a moderate cost.

The house is a superbly constructed modern residence of ten rooms, two bathrooms, several balconies and two beautiful porches, and the lot is large enough to hold it nicely, being 60x150 feet, lying within a few hundred feet of Wilshire boulevard in one of its sightliest parts. These rooms are all large and completely appointed, finished throughout with oak floors, and Flemish oak and beautiful white enamel woodwork. The entrance is from a broad stone veranda, and French doors at the rear of the wide hall open to another patio-style porch, beamed over for flowering vines. We must call special attention to the conveniences of this home, for the wide, spacious bedrooms are all supplied with hot and cold water; there is an extra lavatory off the lower hall, the main bathroom on the second floor has tile floor and base and is fitted with an excellent shower, and the servant's bath and private room are large and secluded. A BIG 60-FOOT LOT.

In the very heart of the fashionable and exclusive Wilshire District, and only half a block

WILSHIRE BOULEVARD.

FOR ONLY $1750.
FOR ONLY $1750.

This is positively the cheapest lot, (size, improvements, environs and distance from Wilshire boulevard considered,) in the Wilshire district. Anyone can make this assertion, and lots of people do, but everyone can't prove it. WE CAN. This fact remains: our lots are close in, only half a block from Wilshire boulevard, and we sell 60-foot lots for less money than others ask for 50-foot lots. We offer a 60-foot lot (and not many left,) for only $1750. NOW, ISN'T THAT THE CHEAPEST LOT IN THE DISTRICT?

Magnificent homes going up all over the tract, and over all the adjacent property. The purchaser of 60 feet frontage within half a block of this exclusive thoroughfare today will be able to sell at his own price a few years hence.

FURTHERMORE—We make terms that are easier than is possible for any other owners in this district to make, regardless of the price. See us at once for the largest, best and cheapest lots in the Wilshire district.

FOR SALE—

FRESNO COUNTY LANDS.

STOCK RANCH.

1420 acres on S.P. main line 30 miles west of Fresno. Land is all level and all irrigable. A heavy growth of natural grasses covers this land and there is an abundance of green feed throughout the year. Fresno Slough borders it and the Riparian water is, therefore, obtainable in abundance, for stock as well as for irrigation. Cattle thrive on this land and many of Fresno's citizens have grown rich off the stock ranches adjoining. This is the cheapest proposition of the kind to be had in the county. It can be bought if you act this week at $10 an acre on terms of 1-4 cash. The first party to investigate will buy.

EUCALYPTUS—VINEYARD.

340 acres 16 miles from Fresno, and 2 miles from Kerman, close to schools and churches, and in a district being rapidly improved. A thorough test has been made of this land and experts have pronounced it an exceptionally fine soil for eucalyptus. Surface water is within 8 to 12 feet and wells sunk to depth of 30 to 100 feet supply plenty of water for irrigation. Land is level and easily put into cultivation. Twelve thousand acres of the adjoining land has been improved by orchards, vineyards, alfalfa ranches, etc. This land offers the combination of rich soil, cheap water, near-by markets and excellent transportation facilities. It can be purchased for $16.50 an acre on easy terms.

ALFALFA—ALFALFA.

1280 acres near Wheatville in the alfalfa belt of Fresno county. This land is all level, absolutely free of alkali, and carries a water right to 10,000 inches, being a seventh interest in the Crescent Canal, which runs through the land. At the most conservative valuation this water right is worth $8000. Part of this right could be sold as there is more than enough to take care of the land when cultivated. Forty acres is now in alfalfa and another 40 is checked. Investigation will prove this the best alfalfa proposition now on the market. Price $20 an acre on terms.

LANDS FOR COLONIZATION.

Large tracts of good land, suitable for colonization are rapidly growing less in number. Our recognized standing as the largest land dealers in the San Joaquin Valley enables us to secure the best offerings, and it will pay you to get a list of our properties of this kind, and learn locations, terms and prices before buying. We are offering the following:

COLONIZATION TRACTS.

12,800 acres south of Mendota. This is the best cheap land in California. The soil is the richest in the valley and entirely free of alkali and other objectionable features. Irrigation engineers have, after an exhaustive study of the locality, furnished an estimate which shows that water can be put on this land at an outside cost of $5 an acre. It is offered for sale in a body at $12.50 an acre, on terms.

3000 acres 2 miles from railroad in west side of Fresno county. This tract offers exceptional opportunities for subdivision. An experiment well sunk in the center of the land demonstrates the water supply. The same quality of land retails in the county at $150 to $200 an acre. This land is on the market for a limited time at $25 an acre.

5000 acres 16 miles southwest of Fresno near Raisin City. The soil is good and plenty of water for irrigation can be had from wells 60 to 120 feet deep; surface water at 12 to 14 feet. For a cheap subdivision property there is nothing better now on the market. Price $16.50 an acre, on easy terms.

E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.
E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.

With few exceptions, the entire estate will be sold. This vast estate comprises thousands of acres of the richest farming land in this State. Its merits are so well known that but little comment is necessary.

The Rancho La Puente, in the heart of the great San Gabriel Valley, consisting of thousands of acres of the most fertile soil in Southern California, will be offered for sale and will be sold in tracts of 10 acres up.

Only 14 miles N.E. of the city, between El Monte and Covina, by the S.P.R.R., Pacific Electric and Salt Lake Railroads.

Perhaps you are curious to know what this land is adapted to.

Well, it cannot be beaten for growing

ALFALFA,
WALNUTS,

Fruits, vegetables. Yes, and around Covina, Monrovia and Arcadia, it's first-class

ORANGE LAND.

THE WATER QUESTION.

That is already demonstrated.
There is water under this land.
One plant in operation pumps 200 miner's inches of water. There are numerous small plants, none of which pump less than 150 miner's inches of water.

There is not another tract of land in Los Angeles county or at least that is as close to the city of Los Angeles that can be bought at so reasonable a figure. We are simply besieged with buyers, don't wait until it's too late. Now is the time to buy. If you are looking for a location for a home or for an investment, here is your opportunity.

There is a good home market for all produce, especially for alfalfa.

Go out and see for yourself, that is all that we ask. You will be convinced. One thousand acres sold during past three weeks. Prices and terms at our offices.

Have you ever heard about the DAMP LAND
just south of EL MONTE, 12 miles from Los Angeles, one mile from the electric car line? This land requires no irrigation whatever to grow

ALFALFA, VEGETABLES,
CELERY.

Just think of it. No labor or expense for irrigating; just plant your crops, cultivate them and watch them grow. Perhaps you don't believe this to be possible in this land of rainless summers; well, then, just board the Covina line car for El Monte, go out with us to the tract, and let us "show you" where 14 tons of alfalfa, per acre, can be grown each year, without irrigation. Get in on the ground floor and double your money in one or two years.

We have about 3000 acres of this land for sale, but at the rate it's selling it will not last long. Prices and terms at our offices.

FOR SALE—

I SELL THE EARTH.
R. S. BASSETT.

Fine subdivision tract in the
SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY.
About 600 acres, located between the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific Railroads, and being about 3½ miles S.E. of Corcoran, and about 4 miles due west of Tipton, lying for 4 miles along the township line between these two places; it is only about 1½ miles from the Santa Fe Railway at Turnbull Siding. The land is comparatively level, being slightly undulating in parts. Tule River crosses the property, and its banks are fringed by large willow trees; surface water can be obtained at from 10 to 20 ft. and the property lies in the artesian belt, as is evidenced by a small flowing well now on the property, which was put down as a test well. The property has been surveyed into 40-acre tracts, and the survey been accepted by the County Supervisors. The preparatory work being mostly done, it would require but little work and expense to put it on the market as a subdivision. Lands lying between this tract and Corcoran sell for from $75 to $150 per acre. As subdividing is not "our forte" we have made the price low enough to attract the attention of successful subdividers, and of investors and speculators generally. We will deliver this splendid tract at $35 per acre, on terms of 1-3 cash, balance on time, at 6 per cent., or might take about 1-3 in L. A. clear property.

A CALIFORNIA FOOTHILL HOME.

Located only about 8 miles from Los Angeles; elevation about 2000 feet; magnificent view. Large, modern house; orchard of lemons, oranges and grapefruit brought in last season over $3000, and same will increase yearly with the age of trees. Price only $18,000.

FOR SALE—
85 acres exceptionally good orange land at foothills, north of San Dimas, the supply of good well located undeveloped orange or lemon land in Southern California, except small tracts, is entirely exhausted. Many might be surprised at the statement and perhaps doubt the accuracy; if so insert a few ads. and examine what is offered. Second and third grade orange land only will be found in quantity exceeding five to twenty-acre tracts, and this proven grade of land is very limited. This land being at the foothills with an elevation of more than 1500 feet, is frostless and it is claimed without any contradiction that the equal of this property cannot be obtained anywhere in Southern California. It is located on the main road to Riverside, lays beautifully as to view, or for subdivision or irrigation. The soil is rich and is especially adapted for orange or lemon culture. Price $[illegible] per acre, without water or $200 per acre, with water. Address C. B. HAZEN, Redondo Beach, Cal. x15

ALDERSON BUILDING & INVESTMENT COMPANY,
434 SOUTH HILL ST.

For the past year or two we have in our different ads covered about all the ideas we could think of to show what we offer and what we can do for you.

Today we will sum it all up by saying that WE KNOW WE CAN COMPETE WITH ANY BUILDER,

WE KNOW WE BUILD GOOD HOUSES,

WE KNOW WE ARE RESPONSIBLE,

WE KNOW WE CAN PLEASE YOU, AND

WE KNOW WE WANT THAT OPPORTUNITY TO PLEASE YOU.

Our plan of work, briefly, is to build as general contractors, or we will furnish the mortgage money to enable you to build on your lot, or in some instances, where the general conditions will warrant it, we will help you to clear up the lot you have purchased on installments during the past few years, and then furnish the money to build with.

Do not allow yourself to be deluded with any idea that there is a big "commission rake-off" or "high prices" to "absorb" the cost the money is to us, for there is no such condition to meet.

We need only to talk with you two minutes to dispel such an erroneous opinion from your mind. Our mortgage money is simply 7 per cent. and every payment on principal reduces the interest. There may be some builders in the city who can offer just as good a proposition and who will do as much for you as we will, but we have our own doubts.

JUST CALL IN AND SEE US ABOUT YOUR BUILDING.

ALDERSON BUILDING & INVESTMENT COMPANY,

Make it work for you.
Don't work for it any longer.

We make a specialty of this class of buildings, and we know how to make them RENTABLE.

We can secure you a good tenant for an apartment house at a good rental.

SEE US. SEE US. SEE US.

Lemon or Orange Groves.

FOR SALE—
THESE ARE THE BEST BUYS IN COVINA.
THAT MEANS THE BEST BUYS ANYWHERE.

We attribute our remarkable record of sales in Covina partly to the intrinsic superiority of the district and partly to the thoroughness with which our local representative, Mr. D. W. MacDonald, investigates every grove that can be had for sale.

We spend more time searching out orange groves in this one district and sorting out the groves that in our judgment are of sterling worth and below market value, than we do in showing them to prospective purchasers.

The reason is obvious—a grove of solid producing value, upon which we can secure an agency at a price below its real value, is more than half sold before it is advertised.

Every grove handled by us is exactly as represented, and has cost us far more care and time to secure than we expend in selling it.

FINE YOUNG TEN-ACRE GROVE. $7000. Half Valencias, half navels; new five-room bungalow, good barn, pretty grounds. No trade. $2000 cash, balance easy.

PRETTY HOME PLACE OF SEVEN and a half acres. Navels and Valencias, 14 years old. Six-room house, barn and outbuildings. Contract water. Price $.,000. Will accept L. A. property up to $5000, cash $1800 and balance on mortgage.

EIGHT ACRES SOLID IN VALENCIAS and navels, seven years old. No better soil in entire valley. Half mile to electric. Price $10,000; $2000 cash. If buyer will build good house on property, can be delivered without any first payment.

TEN ACRES WITH EXTRA HEAVY crop; 4 acres Valencias, 6 acres navels, all six years old. Five-room house and outbuildings. Price $15,000; no trade; $5700 cash, balance easy. This is an exceptionally choice grove and fronts directly on the boulevard system.

RIGHT ON COVINA ELECTRIC CAR line, 12½ acres in Valencias, 5 and 6 years old, in splendid condition. New four-room house. Three shares Azusa water to each acre. One of the finest young Valencia groves in the district. Price $16,000; easy terms.

TWENTY ACRES NAVELS AND VAlencias, $25,000. Very choice location. 11 acres in navels, 14 years old; 6 acres in Valencias, 3 and 4 years old; balance vacant. Will accept house in Los Angeles up to $7500, some cash and balance back on grove.

A SPLENDID PRODUCER IN A LARGE grove. Twenty-five and a half acres, in full bearing; 19½ acres in Valencias, 6 acres in navels; good small house, team and all farm implements, wagon, buggies, etc. Fronts directly on Covina car line, in the heart of the best Valencia district in California. Any one looking for large income and who can handle a grove of this size will do well to go carefully into this property. We are sole agents. Price $35,000; easy terms.

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS:
Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1¼c Sunday.
Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.
Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.
The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

Some items about Mohawk Herald: Bought a frame house last Wednesday to take out for men's bunkhouse; bought 12-H.P. hoist gasoline engine, bucket and cable. Friday received letter from Herman Maurer, one of the workmen on the mine, stating struck extra rich lot of ore in north drift; will not take it out until I arrive; so must be something extra. Mr. Eskildsen, the president of the Mohawk-Herald, advanced the money to buy machinery and house; paid spot cash and got big discounts; expect to leave Monday; will take out cook and extra men. Well, I guess things are moving. Mr. Hartsell has his machinery at Banning; he will start over the road with his 20 tons about Monday.

It certainly looks good and is good.
Yours for success,
EDWARD MACDERMOTT, 114 S. Broadway. 15

INVESTORS — WE ARE STILL OFFERing 25,000 shares of our treasury stock in the Western Consolidated Oil Co., an Arizona corporation, for a limited time only at ten cents a share. THE DROP IN SAN DIEGO HOME TELEPHONE CO.
Due to alleged stockholders' differences not affecting the company's interests makes it, we believe, a desirable investment to hold, or average down the cost of present holdings.

This company has over 4000 phones in service, has no floating debt, and is paying 2 per cent. monthly dividends; its surplus earnings, according to official reports, are over 6 per cent. on the stock.

This company's bonds at present market quotations are also a great bargain in our opinion. Reasons and particulars on request.

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS:
Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.

Close calculations covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words in the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad service.

RUSH WORK ON HUGE HOTEL.

Board of Education Authorizes Three New Schools.

Valuable Donation to Further Educational Project.

Continued Activity in the Country Towns.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 14.—The Southern California Hardwood Company is determined to complete the interior of the gigantic U. S. Grant Hotel by New Year's in compliance with its contract. The mills of the company in Los Angeles are busy turning out the windows and doors, while a force of carpenters is expected here soon to put them in place. The finishing touches on the cement work are now in progress. D. P. Hatch, A. H. Sweet and Arthur Wright, attorneys for the hotel company, have filed in court here a certificate showing the bonded indebtedness of the company to be $600,000 and the capital stock to be $1,600,000. The attachment suit of Carl Leonardt against the hotel property has been ordered released by order of court, as a bond for $150,000 has been filed by the company, which is security for all claims against the structure.

The Board of Education this week awarded contracts for the completion of three small school buildings. Eleven bids were received, ranging from $4600 to $5684 for each of the buildings. Charles C. Gruell of San Diego was the lowest bider and was awarded the contract for all three structures.

Bishop Johnson is figuring on the construction of a large building to be used as a school for boys. The location will be at First and Redwood streets. He is also negotiating for the erection of a large building for a girls' school at La Jolla. He has several free offers of sites there, but has not yet made a selection. Miss Virginia Scripps has donated to the girls' school a tract of land valued at $10,000.

Numerous other building projects are in contemplation to be consummated within the next few weeks.

Notwithstanding the season of midsummer dullness, realty sales are now and then recorded involving both residence and business property. One firm during the week sold to the total amount of $21,800. These sales by J. A. Rice & Co. included two lots at the southwest corner of Tenth and G streets to a local business man who will at once begin the erection of a one-story brick building on the lots which are 100x100 feet. The price is reported to be $15,000. The property was sold by L. F. Bass.

The same firm sold for Harry Rudder to a local investor a single lot at the southeast corner of Stathe and Kalmia streets, for $2800. A new cottage is to be erected on the site.

Another sale was the purchase by J. B. Brooks from Sherwood S. Wheaton of a lot on Fifth street near Walnut, for $2500. The purchaser will build a home there. William Shaw bought the west half of two lots on C street between Nineteenth and Twentieth, for $1500. He will build a cottage there.

MOVING SEAWARD.

INTERIOR PEOPLE LIKE BEACH.

BALBOA, Aug. 14.—Ed Roberts, president of the San Bernardino National Bank, recently purchased two lots here and will build at once. A. M. Ham of San Bernardino has purchased a lot of H. C. Hall and will immediately put up a fine beach bungalow. Mrs. Rose Ashley has bought a lot on Newport Heights. C. C. Butterfield of Santa Ana is erecting a new home here. Joseph H. Walker has completed his $2500 bungalow at Bayside.

The Pacific Electric station at Palm street is nearly complete. A platform is under way and a freight office will be run in connection.

Realty is active and a general increase in sandspit property is looked for at any time. The Newport Bay Investment Company report that nearly all their property is sold.

The improved service on the Pacific Electric seems to act as an incentive to bring interior people to the beach. Within the past week the influx from Los Angeles and vicinity has been a marvel.

Charles Way, senior member of the firm of Way & Driggins, operating groceries in Los Angeles and Balboa, has purchased property at Park Place and will immediately begin the erection of a home here.

Progress at Balboa Island has been somewhat delayed by the collapse of one hundred feet of sea wall, which was built too hurriedly. The dredger is rushing the work of deepening the channel in front of the isle and is working day and night with a large force of men.

NEW BUSINESS BLOCK.

LAWYER BUILDS IMPROVEMENT.

GLENDORA, Aug. 14.—The illustration on this page shows the new Converse block at progressive Glendora, on the corner of Michigan avenue, the main street of the city, and the Pacific Electric car line from Los Angeles. The block, as indicated, is a two-story affair, 60x84 feet and of Class A construction, being reinforced concrete all through. On the ground floor are four stores and above are offices, with the Odd Fellows' hall occupying a part of the floor. The Board of Trade of Glendora and two water companies

The grounds for the attack are somewhat similar to those on which was based the fight on the State law, and which was lost to the Socialists through a recent decision of the Supreme Court.

It is declared by the local Socialists that the city primary election law is void because it bars voters of the minor parties from casting ballots for the candidates of their choice at the general election, through the fact that, after the primary election, only the two candidates receiving the highest vote at the primaries may be voted upon.

This, the Socialists declare, gives a special privilege to the two strongest political parties and practically disfranchises voters who may be in favor of other candidates.

The exact manner of the attack has not yet been decided upon. It probably will be in the form of mandamus proceedings. The Socialists have named Fred C. Wheeler, A. R. Holston and O. E. Thompson as a committee to institute the proceedings. They will call a mass meeting of Socialists, at which plans for the campaign will be perfected.

SAN FRANCISCO COUPLE WED AT BAKERSFIELD.

Bride of Eighteen Years Will Live With Mother-in-Law, Who Will Teach Her to Cook and Sew. Fiance Fails to Meet Her at the Railroad Depot.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Alice Gomes, aged 18, left her parent's home in San Francisco last night, ostensibly to attend a concert. However, she slipped away to a train and arrived in this city this morning, expecting to meet her affianced, Charles Wilfor Painter. But Painter missed his train at Tehachapi a cooled his heels there until this afternoon. The wedding was performed this evening by Rev. E. R. Fuller at the Congregational parsonage.

Mrs. Gomes didn't know about the elopement until today. After the wedding the bride telegraphed the news North.

Miss Gomes and Mr. Painter met in San Francisco eighteen months ago. They became engaged secretly. The bride feared her tender years would cause her mother to seriously object. She was much disturbed when on arriving here this morning Painter failed to meet her. A telegram explained the delay and the girl registered at the Southern Hotel under her own name.

"We will live with Mrs. Painter," said the bride, "and she will teach me to cook and to sew."

TOOT-TOOT!

THEIR SALARIES VS. FREE MUSIC.

CITY EMPLOYEES ENVY MUNICIPAL BAND FUND.

Some Who Did Not Get Increases Are Urging Councilmen to Undo Work of Budget Committee and Distribute Ten Thousand Dollars Among the Pay Rolls.

When Councilmen Blanchard and Dromgold, members of the budget committee, return from their vacations, they may find some of their work undone by the Council. But even at that they are voted wise by their colleagues for the work that is to be undone is the regulation of many salaries.

In a number of offices in the City Hall long faces are being worn because it has become known that increases were denied many and that others had been reduced. The list of changes has not been given out but it is known that the recall set is incensed because Oil Inspector Blackmar was raised to $200 while City Prosecutor Eddie was denied an increase. Eddie now receives $150 and he or his friends wanted $200. Likewise others who have been worrying along with $125 or $150 a month and who expected more are pricking their Councilmen to action in the hope of overruling the will of the budget committee. And through it all Chairman Wallace and Auditor Mushet will be left to face the storm that is promised for Tuesday's session.

The item of the budget deemed vulnerable and subject to raid for salary increases is the appropriation of $10,000 for a municipal band. Healy would rather suspend this and apply the money to the street labor pay rolls. Others think it might be reduced and distributed among overworked and underpaid employes. But, even if municipally-owned music must remain, the raiders will turn to Auditor Mushet's $180,000 general expense fund which he hopes to save to pay labor and material bills in the dry months next year.

The committee anticipated a howl from its pruning of everytinhg and prepared for it by Wallace's explanation of the theory of the $7600 salary increases, outside the fire department, provided for. He explained that increases had been made only where the committee was fully satisfied that they were earned and that the one thing for the new Council to do at its first meeting next year would be to revise the entire salary ordinance according to true value of skill or position for he admitted the present arrangement is full of unjust differences.

Jump-Short Pie.

"Jump-short" pie was once eaten by the Rev. R. H. Barham, author of the "Ingoldsby Legends." He was visiting one of his parishioners, was asked to dine and have some "jump-short" pie. He did so and made a hearty meal. "It's very nice—tastes like lamb; why the odd name?" he asked. "Well, sir," said the host, "it is lamb. You see, the young lambs in the pasture try to get over the drains; a good many of 'em jump short, tumble in and get drowned. Then we hooks 'em out and puts 'em into a pie. Have another help, sir?" Barham declined—[Exchange.

The Proportion of Doctors.

Statistics compiled by a technical journal recently show that in Europe one physician can care for 1000 of the general population. If such a proportion holds good for Europe, it is reasonable to suppose that a similar proportion would be sufficient for the United States. And yet, according to the census of 1900, we had one doctor to every 594 of our population. It is estimated that the 1910 census will show at least 154,000 doctors in the United States. It is stated on authority that we are thirty-five years in advance of the natural requirem and this, of course, means not suffering for the profession, but a serious economic problem for the try.—[Cincinnati Enquirer.

How do I get there?"

You can take the coast train from to Guadalupe (pronounced Wada- pa,) about two hundred miles th, and reach Santa Maria by a rt branch road of nine miles, on tric cars, or you can go on to San Obispo and thence back to Santa ria by narrow gauge railroad, the ance being about thirty-two es."

Mc- re, residence, $1600; Mrs. A. M. kins, residence, $1200; Frank elveda, residence, $1200. This is a l of over $410,000.

RESOURCES ARE DOUBLING.

e assessed wealth of Santa Bar- county for 1908 was $25,380,608, king it the seventeenth wealthiest nty in California out of a total of -eight counties. "This part of ta Barbara county has a present essed value of over $9,000,000," said Thornburg.

ostmaster Ketcham informed me the postoffice receipts for the rter ending June 30, 1904, were only 1.22, while for the same quarter year they were $2226.97, having rly doubled in a space of five years. Blochman, secretary of the Cham- of Commerce, informed me that oil production of the district trib- y to Santa Maria was about ,000 barrels in 1901, while for 1908 was close to 9,000,000 barrels. The production of small white beans, or navy beans, was about 200,000 sacks last year, the value being about $600,000. There are in the neighborhood of 12,000 acres devoted to the growing of sugar beets, which totals another $600,000. The Santa Maria Valley has an area of about 150,000 acres of land; so that, after deducting the beet and bean acreage, there remain over 100,000 acres of land which is now largely devoted to growing hay and grain and for pasturing stock. A large part of this land could be more profitably devoted to alfalfa or the raising of fruit, provided a supply of water for irrigation is developed. It can thus be seen that there is an opportunity for a still greater development in the resources of this part of Santa Barbara county in the productions of the soil. The area of the Santa Maria oil belt is now confined to a small section, and even that is only barely touched in spots, so that the great extent of country to the east, which may be as rich in oil as that already prospected, has never yet been drilled. It will require time and the expenditure of many thousands of dollars to prove the territory to the east by sinking wells, and each of these will cost from $30,000 to $50,000. The oil field of Santa Maria is in but its infancy of development. It is already noted for its wonderful "gushers." For example, the Palmer well, on land formerly belonging to L. E. Blochman, flowed during last month the enormous amount of 105,000 barrels of oil, and has been known to flow as much as 14,000 barrels in a day. At 70 cents a barrel the last monthly production means a total of $73,500, a fortune in itself. Not only are these oil wells in the Santa Maria field wonders in their production of oil, but they have a prospective value in the production of natural gas. You can hear some of these wells blowing off the gas into the air with a noise similar to a train of freight cars, and this gas is at present being allowed to go to waste. The day is soon coming when it will be piped to distant points, even perhaps to Los Angeles.

UNDEVELOPED RESOURCES.

There are three sources from which Santa Maria may hope to profit in the future in order to increase its population. I refer to the development of pumping plants, locating of manufactures in connection with the cheap gas, and the increasing activity in the oil fields.

Of the 150,000 or more acres in the Santa Maria Valley only about 10,000 acres are at present irrigated, and most of that by the Union Sugar Company on its beet lands. The remark is often made that the sugar company owns all the best lands in the valley. This is not true. With a water supply developed, for irrigation, there are at least 60,000 acres of just as good soil as that being used by the sugar company. It is the water supply that is needed, and nothing else. The sugar people have installed seven pumping plants, with an aggregate capacity of 10,000 gallons a minute. What Santa Maria wants to do is have every acre furnished with water; then there could be a family on every twenty acres.

Some of the public-spirited citizens of Santa Maria have expended about $50,000 bringing in a supply of natural gas to the town through eight miles of pipe. It takes a monthly income of at least $400 to pay interest on the venture. What must be done is to get manufacturing plants to use this surplus gas, even if at only a price to pay the interest on the investment. I am told the present company will offer very low rates for manufacturing. When the present supply of gas is all used, pipes can be laid to other wells.

There is another enterprise which would benefit Santa Maria. About forty miles up the Santa Maria River is the Cuyeme Valley, sixty miles long and from two to ten miles wide, containing about 150,000 acres of level farm land. A railroad from Santa Maria would open up this section to settlement, and if the land were divided into small tracts, with a developed water supply, would sell and be settled rapidly, and the promoters could make a handsome profit on the venture. At the upper end of the valley, it is probable, will be developed some fine oil territory.

I speak of these possibilities not because they are not known, but because they are not being taken advantage of as extensively as they should be.

IN THE OIL FIELDS.

"The oil districts tributary to Santa Maria," said F. J. Burns, "are what are called the 'old field, or western,' and the 'Cat Cañon, or eastern;' the former being located about eight and a half miles south, and the latter eighteen miles in a southeasterly direction from Santa Maria, and about seven miles apart. In both fields "gushers" have been struck from time to time, producing from 10,000 to 12,000 barrels a day. The Hartnell No. 1, in the western field, belonging to the Union Oil Company, was struck in 1904 and flowed from 15,000 to 18,000 barrels a day of 24-gravity Beaume oil, worth $1 a barrel. This well has delivered over 3,000,000 barrels of oil since then. The other phenomenal well is the "Palmer," on land leased of L. E. Blockman of Santa Maria, which was finished about eighteen months ago and has flowed intermittently from 200 to 10,000 barrels a day. Last month the total production was over 100,000 barrels. In November, 1907, on the Squire lease, the Union Oil Company struck another gusher about one mile and a half west of the Hartnell, from which flowed 5000 to 6000 barrels daily for months. Folsom well No. 2, in the western field, started out at 1500 barrels and is still producing heavily. Brookshire well No. 5, in the same field, started at 2500 barrels and is now flowing 1000 barrels a day and has been continuously flowing for three years. The Santa Maria oil district is peculiar in the fact that the productive oil territory is in fissures and the wells have to be drilled to a depth of an average of 3200 feet and cost all the way from $30,000 upwards. At the present time development work is going ahead steadily, there being about seventy new wells going down in the western field and fifteen in the eastern. The production of the two districts for July, 1909, was 700,000 barrels.

"The Union Oil Company is drilling on the following leases: "Newlove," "California Coast," "Squires," "Hartnell" and "Bell," a total of about thirty-five strings of tools. The Western Union Oil Company is exploiting the eastern end of their property (the Careaga ranch.) The Graciosa Oil Company is drilling on the southwestern part of their holdings. The Pinal Oil Company is running six strings of tools. The Dome Oil Company is operating four strings of tools in the Cat Cañon field, on their property adjoining the Palmer well, some being down to the oil sands, and others just starting. The Brookshire Oil Company is operating three strings in the Old Field. Among other operators are the Rice Ranch Oil Company, the New Pennsylvania Petroleum Company, the Lucerne Oil Company, the West Huasna Oil Company, the Hall & Hall Oil Company, the Coblentz Oil Company and the Radium Oil Company in the Old Field. In the eastern field is the Palmer Oil Company, the Brookshire Oil Company, the Henderson Oil Company, the Sesquoc Oil Company, the Ideal Oil Company, the Los Alamos Petroleum Oil Company, the Carpenteria Oil Company, the West Oil Company and others."

"The Standard Oil Company has an eight-inch pipe line from the Old Field through Santa Maria to tide water. The Union Oil Company has a six-inch and an eight-inch line. The Coast Oil Transportation Company has an eight-inch line. The Associated Oil Company has an eight and a four-inch line. In addition, the Associated has an eight-inch line from Cat Cañon field to their line from the Old Field. The Pinal and Brookshire, jointly, have a line from their wells to the Southern Pacific Railway. The present area of the Cat Cañon district is about three miles long by five wide, while the Old Field is three by four miles. There is little or no "wildcatting" in this field, as it costs too much money to sink a well. People drilling outside the acknowledged proven territory are: The General Oil Company, about seven miles from the Palmer well; the Kernal Oil Company, about nine miles from the Palmer, and the Foxen Oil Company, about eight miles from the Palmer. These wells have been drilling intermittently for the past two years, and are not down to the oil sands, but the indications are good.

"The average of the oil in the Santa Maria field is 25 gravity, Beaume, and the price averages 80 cents a barrel. The oil fields, tributary to Santa Maria, give employment to about 3000 men.

ABUNDANT FUEL FOR POWER.

"A large amount of gas is liberated from all the deep wells. One well (the Brookshire No. 4) is now supplying the whole town of Santa Maria with gas for lighting, cooking and heating, besides supplying power for the several pumping plants, the electric light plant and the electric car line, and still has so much gas at the well going to waste in the open air that it can be heard for a long distance. This gas, as a power producer, has already proven cheaper, and has superseded oil, at 60 cents a barrel. This is why the possibilities of Santa Maria are so bright for its becoming a manufacturing center, when this cheap fuel is utilized. There are over 100 gas-producing oil wells tributary to Santa Maria. The gas can be drawn off while the well is producing the usual supply of oil, the one being no obstruction to the other. The pressure to the square inch is said to be from 150 pounds to as high as 500 pounds (as in the Palmer well.) At present this gas is allowed to go to waste, with the exception of what is used in driving the pumps, etc., at the wells, and the one well whose gas is carried to Santa Maria. There is said to be enough gas going to waste to light the whole city of Los Angeles. This natural gas is said to be purer, makes a brighter light, and contains less poisonous vapors than artificial gas. How far east the oil fields of this section may extend can be known only by the use of the drill, so that the future of the oil industry here can only be conjectured.

FREIGHT RATES.

The railroad charge for freight from Los Angeles to Santa Maria is 2 cents less than from San Francisco; but the rate by water is 1 cent higher from Los Angeles. There is a brisk rivalry for the trade of this section between the wholesalers of the two cities.

NO MORE WHEAT.

A. McNeil, who has been a resident of Santa Maria for the past twenty-seven years, informed me that in the early days at least 150,000 sacks of wheat were raised in the valley. Gradually, during the past sixteen years, the supply has become less and less, until last year it ceased entirely, owing to the more profitable use of the land for beans, beets, oats, barley, fruit, etc. This leaves Mr. McNeil with a useless sixty-barrel roller flouring mill on his hands, which is now used for grinding the 20,000 sacks of barley. This is an illustration of how farming methods have changed in the last twenty years or so. The next change in the vicinity of Santa Maria will be more irrigated land, more fruit, more alfalfa, and the county will never return to the raising of wheat on a large scale.

RAISING FRUIT.

R. C. Wylie, Fruit Commissioner for the Third District of Santa Barbara county, is very enthusiastic over the prospects for raising fruit in this section. He has an orchard of his own, near the town of Santa Maria; in fact, within the city limits, and he has met with very gratifying success. I was told that fruit would not do well, but from what I have seen, I am of the opinion that if the farmers would irrigate, there would be no trouble. Lemons, oranges, peaches, apricots, pears, apples, plums, figs, walnuts, etc., are being grown, and that without irrigation. How much more successful would be the venture with a reliable supply of water! Alfalfa does well, as can be seen on the irrigated lands, and there are splendid opportunities for making money raising it. At present the hay is selling for $12 a ton. With only a yield of eight tons to the acre that brings an income of $96 a year. If the growing of alfalfa were more general, there could be a creamery and an ice plant established at Santa Maria.

Lemons, oranges and grape-fruit are being raised by Messrs. Bradley, Corner, Brown, Lucas, Travis, Finley, Nicholson, Goodwin and others. Walnuts are being grown by Messrs. Goodwin, Wielhammer, Jones and others. The leading apricot orchards are owned by Messrs. Hughes, Nance, Boyd, Wylie, Jones, Davis, Diamond and Klink. Apples of excellent quality are being grown by Messrs. Jones and Rice. Peaches are grown by Messrs. Blochman, Jones, Davis and McKee. The opportunities for fruit growing near Santa Maria are not being taken advantage of as they should be. The solution of a successful orchard is a water supply, and the pumping plant will soon become more general.

FORTUNES IN OIL.

There are some very wealthy residents of Santa Maria, who have made their money out of the oil fields. One gentleman, who sold his land for over $1,000,000, has erected a $20,000 residence, and has just returned from a tour of Europe with his family. Another lucky man in Santa Maria is said to have an income of $120 a day from his royalties. A gentleman who made $5000 on an apricot orchard, which he rented, invested the money in oil stock, and having trebled his money, invested it again, until now his monthly income is about $200, and he has stock in oil wells that promise to more than treble this income soon. The fever for investing every cent possible in the oil business is apparent as you talk with the business men. That is the reason why there are so many opportunities lying neglected, as they do not appeal to the resident as strongly as oil stock. There are excellent chances for the homeseeker in the vicinity of Santa Maria.

PROSPECTIVE NEW COUNTY.

Santa Maria has aspired to become the county seat of a new county, carved out of the northern portion of Santa Barbara county. It would have an area of about 1800 miles. The population would be about 10,000, and leave 20,000 in the old county. The law requires that at least 50 per cent. of the whole vote of the two sections shall be in favor of division. It is said this question of division will be brought up for consideration in 1910.

LOW-PRICED LAND.

About fifty miles due east of Santa Maria is the Cuyeme Valley, a body of about 150,000 acres of land which would make homes for at least 1000 farmers. It is said it can be purchased for as low as $5 an acre. This is a proposition for the promoter, since, in order to make the land attractive for the homeseeker, there must be a railroad in there, and water must be developed. The evidences of oil in the upper end of the valley will tend to bring in the railroad, and the chances for a rapid advance in the land values will be an incentive to develop the water supply. The settlement of this valley will be of decided advantage to the local business of Santa Maria.

A WATER SUPPLY.

Mr. Atkinson of the sugar company informed me that only three miles up the cañon of the Santa Maria River is a site for a dam, to retain the waters of the river, where would be formed a lake ten miles long, and enough water could be accumulated to supply the whole valley. This is a project too large for individuals to undertake, but long-time bonds might be issued, or the general government might be induced to do it. If this project were carried out it would be of great benefit to Santa Maria. The water could then be carried over some of the mesa lands, where there is a lemon belt extending for ten miles or more.

BUSINESS LINES REPRESENTED.

Santa Maria has two commercial banks and one savings bank, the combined deposits reaching as high as $1,500,000. There are in all about fifty business houses. There are four churches, a High and two grammar schools (and another grammar school is soon to be built,) a planing mill, electric light plant, gas plant, two amusement houses, Carnegie library two garages (there are said to be nearly 100 automobiles in and near Santa Maria,) and several livery stables. Business in all lines is said to be active.

LONDON SOCIETY MATCHMAKER.

FINDS HUSBANDS FOR MILLIONAIRES' DAUGHTERS.

Season Just Closed One of Most Profitable on Record for Women With Entree to Good Society, But Little Cash, Who Arrange International Marriages.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 28.—Not in the memory of the most experienced matrons has there been such a season for matchmaking as that which is just closing, and never has there been such an opportunity for the person calling herself a "society woman" to increase her income by a matrimonial turn-over at the bargain counter at Burke's.

But she must evolve and develop new ideas. Old birds in the shape of chaperons and rich American mothers won't be caught unless the proper inducements are used. The lady who undertakes to make matches—this delicate profession is rarely pursued by a man—must be able to prove that she is on intimate terms with a Cabinet Minister or a duchess as a testimonial that she is in the right set.

One very flourishing agency is run within a stone's throw of Grosvenor Square. The ostensible object of the institution is to teach wealthy Americans and women of other foreign nations British court and social etiquette and the art of good conversation. Incidentally a number of distinguished, titled and other men drop in at tea time, and introductions to the pupils are made in the most natural way. It is said that behind this school is a syndicate of society celebrities, who divide the spoils after "alliances" have been arranged.

Here is an advertisement which appeared in the Morning Post recently: "Titled lady and gentleman of high position, large establishment, motor cars, wish young lady to reside with them whom they can introduce into exclusive society. 'Lady,' care of Willings."

The advertiser received over fifty answers, many of which were from Americans. Little did those who tried to avail themselves of the offer know that the advertiser was the wife of a dilapidated knight, whose effects were sold two days before the announcement appeared. Nothing daunted, her ladyship proceeded to a store and ordered on the hire system some far more elaborate furniture than that "sold up." The automobiles mentioned in the advertisement were also hired by the hour, as were the very servants. Upstairs her ladyship sat in state in a bower of flowers. She took care to show a kindly little not she had received some time previously from Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, thanking her for having run across Charing Cross platform just as a continental train was about to start, in order to procure some newspapers the ex-Cabinet Minister required. With the newspapers her "ladyship" deposited her card, so, of course, Mrs. Chamberlain felt it a duty to write and thank her.

Some of her friends recently played a practical joke on another society matchmaker. They told her that Miss Mary Pullman, daughter of the inventor of the railway carriage of that name, was in London and that she wanted chaperoning and introducing. When Lady X. arrived at Claridge's she was shown to the rooms of a Miss Mary Pullman, an acidulated female of uncertain age. In no way perturbed and in the most diplomatic manner she explained her mission. Not one word did the other reply, but when her ladyship had finished she opened the door and pointed to the stairs.

Notwithstanding the vulgarity and the undesirability of the machinations of the professional matrimonial agent, it is to be admitted that several quite satisfactory "alliances" have been brought about through her. A certain Irish peeress, who does most of her matchmaking on board ship, is responsible for the marriage of several interesting and beautiful American heiresses, who are in the front rank of Anglo-American society. A few years ago the countess was in a sad plight with her tenants, who declined to pay rents for the bog and mountain lands on which they starved. Today she can afford to forget she ever possessed a perch of land in Ireland, though, of course, for advertising purposes, it is nice to be able to speak of "my Irish estate, you know."

His Familiar Title.

At the closing exercises of a Syracuse school a little girl was asked: "Who is at the head of our government?"

"Mr. Roosevelt," she replied, promptly.

"That is right," said the teacher, "but what is his official title?"

"Teddy!" responded the little miss promptly.—[Exchange.

Many of the men owed large bills at stores and Lyndora merchants and boarding boses estimate they have lost $10,000 in this manner.

A wicked revenge was taken upon the miners employed in Central Coal and Coke Company's mine at Pittsburgh, Kan. The ventilating apparatus of the mine was deliberately chucked and forty miners narrowly escaped being overcome by coal gas.

SELLS BEAUTIFUL HOME.

Through the agency of J. F. Heber & Co., Andrew Mohr has sold his beautiful home in South Pasadena to Mr. and Mrs. Jean Luc of Bayonne, France, for a consideration of $17,000. The house is almost new and built in most elaborate style. It is at the southwest corner of Oxley and Fair Oaks avenue and contains nine rooms. The house is artistically frescoed throughout and finished in hardwood. A two-story garage stands on the lot. The grounds are improved with fruit and shade trees, shrubbery, a fountain, grotto, Japanese tea garden and children's playground. The lot is 190x264 feet. Mr. Mohr has selected a building site on one of the hills near Oneonta Park for his future residence, plans for which are being prepared by T. Zeller.

BUILD IN PRIVATE PARK.

The Park Apartment house just completed at No. 1134 West Seventh street, is a three-story building of twenty-eight apartments, each with two parlors, two wall beds, kitchen and elaborate bathrooms, all completely furnished. There is a reception-room on each floor and a sun parlor and palm garden on the roof. It is located on high ground on West Seventh Street Heights. The grounds are a magnificent private park, extending all the way from Seventh to Eighth street, and fronting three hundred feet on each of these streets. The lawn is set in palms, magnolias and rubber trees of immense size, and flowering shrubs, collected from all portions of the globe.

TRANSFORMING ISLAND.

The substantial and modern improvements which are being installed at Balboa Island are said to be transforming that tract into an ideal residence section. Permits have been granted and work commenced on the ferry landings which are to bring the island into easy touch with the mainland. Approximately 1800 feet of bulkhead of concrete construction has been built around the shore line of the tract, and this work is being rapidly extended. Nine hundred yards of filling is being done every day, and some of the low spots have been completely transformed. The installation of water mains has been completed and the piping of gas is planned for the immediate future.

I Cured My Rupture

I Will Show You How To Cure Yours FREE!

I was practically helpless and bed-ridden for many years from a double rupture. I wore innumerable different kinds of trusses and appliances. Some of them were tortures, some positively dangerous, and none would hold the rupture in its proper place. The doctors told me I could not expect to have it entirely healed unless I would consent to a surgical operation. I fooled them all, however, and cured myself completely and permanently by a simple method which I discovered. Anyone can use it, and I will gladly send the cure free by mail to anyone who writes for it. Fill out the coupon below and mail it to me today. I will send the cure by return mail, postpaid.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The agreement of the local market dealers to sell cantaloupes at $1.00 per large crate was broken yesterday morning and an advance to $1.25 to $1.50 was made. This raise does not indicate that the melon crop is failing, but just the opposite. The crop is ripening so fast and the prices have been so low during the week that the farmers are feeding the cantaloupes to their hogs rather than bring them to the city. There were but few really good melons at the wholesale market yesterday morning, the majority being overripe and soft.

A few crates of pineapples arrived yesterday morning from Honolulu, and sold at a slight advance over the price of the Friday market. Peaches advanced 10 cents per box and pears made a small jump of 1 cent a pound.

The fish market was very nearly cleaned up yesterday morning. Barracuda and rock bass were the only varieties left and they were rather scarce.

No arrivals of eggs, butter, cheese or onions were reported on the market and although things were quiet, the prices remained the same as Friday.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

NEW MEMBERS INFUSE LIFE.

KEEP MARKET LIVELY IN THE MINING DEPARTMENT.

Prices Generally Strong and Encouraging—Bank List Particularly Healthy in Tone and Security Savings a Trader — Fluctuations in Utilities Slight.

The new members from the defunct Nevada exchange have infused new life into the mining department of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. But for a lively market in the ore list yesterday's trading on the floor of that institution would have presented an aspect of characteristic week-end dullness. Prices, however, were generally strong and encouraging.

The bank list was particularly healthy in tone, although only one stock, that of the Security Savings Bank, was handled. Ten shares of this issue changed hands at 400.00, and the close at 390.00@435.00 was advanced 20 points and 25 points, respectively, in the bid and asked prices.

One-half share of Associated Oil sold at $5.60. Four and a half shares were transferred at 35.35, and a lot of 40 shares at 35.62½. The stock closed strong at 35.61¼@35.87½, up 3-8 point in the bid and 1-4 point in the asked price.

Ten shares of Amalgamated Oil were handled at 77.00, and this petroleum closed weak at 76.50@77.50, off a point in the bid and 7½ points in the asked price. There were no other changes of especial consequence in the oil lists.

Fluctuations in the utilities were also unimportant, with the exception of San Diego Home Telephone, which closed 28.25@30.00, advanced ¼ point and 7 1-4 points, respectively, in the bid and asked price.

In the mining list, 4000 shares of California Hills sold at 4¾@4⅞; 5000 of Clark Copper at 13¾@14, and 5000 at 14 1-8, buyer 30 days; 1000 of Johnnie Mining and Milling at 10; 2000 of Jumbo Extension at 19; 2000 of Red Top at 3 1-4, and 2000 of Searchlight-Parallel at 2¾@3 1-4.

SAN FRANCISCO LIST.

ACTIVE MARKET AT WEEK-END.

SATURDAY BUSINESS BETTER THAN IN LONG TIME.

Goldfield Florence Gains Ten Points. Booth Gets Material Boost—Important Changes in Tonopahs—Comstocks Continue to Show Decided Strength.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 112 West Third St.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14.—There was more business done, today, than on any Saturday for a long time. Goldfield Consolidated made a gain of 2 points, closing at 6.92½ bid. Florence gained 10 points, closing at 2.17½ bid. Daisy was off one point at 23. Jumbo Extension lost 1 and closed at 20 bid. Fraction was unchanged at 67 bid and Sandstorm gained 1, closing at bid.

The strongest cheap stock in the list was Booth which made a gain of 5 points and closed at 18 bid. Silver Pick was up 1 point, closing at 1 bid. Atalanta lost 1 point and closed at 16 bid.

There was no important change in Tonopahs. Tonopah Extension lost 2 points; Montana 2, and McNamara 1.

Some of the Comstocks showed decided strength. Mexican was up to 112½ bid. Confidence gained 20 points, closing at 150 bid. The balance of the list moved within narrow limits.

The action of the Goldfield stocks that have been heretofore neglected is encouraging the public to come in the market, as the close, tonight, shows good profits over a week ago.

Compared with last Saturday's closing Goldfield Consolidated is up 30 cents a share; Florence, 25 cents; Daisy, 1; Great Bend, 1; Jumbo Extension, 2; Fraction, 7; Booth, 8; Silver Pick, 7, and Atalanta, 2.

GENERAL EASTERN.

URGENT DEMAND FOR ASK GRAIN.

MORE RAIN IN THE NORTHWEST ADDS TO STRENGTH.

Wet Weather in Southern Section of Spring Weather Belt Where Threshing Now Is in Progress. Overcomes Pressure of Bears and Causes Prices to Rise.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—An urgent demand for cash grain here, and additional rains in the Northwest caused strength in wheat today. Wet weather prevailed during the last twenty-four hours in the southern section of the spring wheat district, where threshing is now in progress, and rains were also reported further north and in Manitoba, where harvesting has begun.

These conditions inspired active buying throughout the entire day. The market opened strong at gains of ⅛@¼ cent to ⅝ cent, and with the exception of a dip early in the day, due to selling by several influential houses, sentiment continued bullish throughout. September ranged between 98⅝@98¾ cents and 99⅝@99⅞ cents. The close was strong, at almost the highest.

Weather conditions were the chief factor in corn, and, as drought still prevailed in many sections of the corn belt, sentiment in the pit was bullish all day. The market closed strong, with prices ⅛@⅜ to ⅝ cent above yesterday.

Delay in threshing by wet weather, and an excellent demand for cash grain by shippers, caused strength in the oats market. Prices at the close were ⅛ to ½ cent higher.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour, active; No. 2 rye, 71@72½; feed or mixing barley, 48@52; fair to choice malting, 57@63; flax seed, No. 1 southwestern, 1.37; No. 1 northwestern, 1.45; timothy seed, 3.90; clover, 11.50; mess pork, per bbl., 20.50@20.65; lard, per 100 lbs., 11.30; short ribs, sides, (loose) 11.20@11.30; short clear sides, (boxed) 11.50@11.62½.

New York Cotton Market.

[By Private Wire to E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 112 West Third street.]

NEW ORLEANS, August 14.—Developments during the week show the spinners will have taken about 13,500,000 bales of American cotton the past season, and that while the American crop of last year will figure about 13,600,000 bales, exports to Europe have been so heavy, (8,382,000, a new record) that there is less cotton at counted and uncounted towns in the south today than there was at this date last year and the year before last. Notwithstanding the crop of 1908 was about 2,000,000 larger than that of 1907, the visible supply in the United States figures only 290,000 versus 294,000 last year and 391,000 year before last. According to cable from Liverpool Mr. Ellison made weekly consumption of all kinds in Europe during July 190,000 versus 143,000 last year, or 25,000 per week larger than last year, whereas European weekly consumption during June was only 12,000 larger than last year, 190,000 versus 178,000. This is a remarkable showing considering the fact that until late English trade was reported to be very bad."

Logan & Bryan's letter follows: "The end of the week brought very bullish week-end figures. The world's visible being only 300,000 larger than a year ago, the visible, especially that in farmer's hands is probably smaller than a year ago. Mill stocks of Europe are only 130,000 larger than on this date last year, and the crop prospects certainly point to a crop more than a million bales less than its predecessor. Therefore, indicated available supply for the coming year must be at least one million bales smaller than it was a year ago. Trade conditions a year ago were uncertain and the spinning industry in chaos while today we are aware of the fact that with three more weeks to run off the old crop year, we will probably show a final mills takings for the season of close to 13,400,000 bales and the coming twelve months will show a still larger demand."

Southern forecast: Louisiana, rain southwest portion; Arkansas, Oklahoma, partly cloudy; East Texas, West Texas, partly cloudy; showers north portion; Eastern and central belts showers.

Boston Copper Market.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building, Los Angeles.]

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—Copper stocks acted well today, and in several instances the buying was especially good. Lake is being steadily accumulated by Calumet & Hecla interests, and although the local leaders are opposed, the stock is getting more scarce and they are daily observed to cover with losses. There was some little profit taking in Range today, but the buying was all by two houses who have been steadily accumulating it. Scattered orders to buy Shannon kept it strong, while scattered selling orders in North Butte made it weak. We look for a boiling market next week. Joseph Moffatt, the well-known bee man, has organized the Moffatt Apiaries, incorporated, and will again go extensively into the business of honey production. The company has already put out over 6000 stands of bees, in the most advantageous districts, extending from San Dimas to North Ontario, and Mr. Moffatt will turn his entire attention to the business. In years past he was regarded as one of the most extensive honey producers in the United States, and he expects to win back the laurels for the new corporation.

A TOUR OF THE SUMMER RESORTS.

BY HARRY C. CARR.

V.

La Jolla, Its Peculiar Customs and Scenic Charms—A Mistake About Those Bathing Suits.

LA JOLLA, Aug. 12.—I am beginning to have terrible misgivings about the crusade waged in La Jolla against naughty bathing suits at the opening of this season. I am afraid La Jolla wasn't really so shocked, after all.

About the first day of the summer season, the country rang with words of pious horror from some of La Jolla's leading citizens, who swore that immodest bathing suits must go.

The bathing suits didn't go; but a large proportion of the electrified world did. The crusade seems to have had this effect—that people debating on the best place for a vacation dashed in furious haste for the nearest train bound for La Jolla before the threatened bathing-suit ordinance could be passed.

It wasn't passed; but more people are in La Jolla for the summer than ever before, and real estate is going up faster than the Wright brothers.

It may be that the crusaders against the abbreviated skirt were really horrified. Perhaps even now, at the public bathing hour, they run away and hide in an anguish of hot blushes. But I began to lose faith in this eruption of morality when I found that the leader of it was not an aged minister of the gospel, but a real estate agent.

The fact is, La Jolla bathing suits are built on about the same design and floor plan as other bathing suits; but such is the power of reputation that we began to blush twenty miles up the track. The impression we had of La Jolla bathing dresses was that they might be something on the order of the uniform of Gunga Din, as described by Kipling.

"All the uniform he wore
Was a wispy rag before
And something less than 'arf o' that behind."

One of the summer residents quieted our fears, however.

"They wear just what they wear at other beaches," she said. "If you showed half as much anatomy in Los Angeles in January you would be locked up, but it's modest in August.

"I guess what shocked these people is a curious little local custom that prevails here.

"At other beaches, the people go into the surf at various hours all day. Here the whole town stampedes for the beach at the same hour. At 10 o'clock every morning, the population begins a hegira for the bath beach. They all go through town like blue-flannel soubrettes, and upon my soul, the array of legs is startling.

"As for the men, at the hour of 10 a.m. the aggregate masculine attire in La Jolla wouldn't make up material enough for a luncheon doilie."

Of course, as every one knows, the summer population of La Jolla is made up of many of the most exclusive and richest San Diego society people, together with many cultured folk from Los Angeles.

The fact that La Jolla is rather a resort for "high brows" is the funniest feature of the crusade against their bathing dresses.

President Baer of Occidental College is here for the summer with his sons. Dean MacCormack of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral, Los Angeles, is spending his vacation here also. Bishop Johnson of Los Angeles is a frequent visitor.

The bishop is arranging for the laying of the keel plates for the new Episcopal girls' school, which will overlook La Jolla.

The site is magnificent, as La Jolla is fronted by some of the wildest bits of scenery on the Coast. Around the sweep from the sheltered harbor, the surf lashes into the torn headlands and the sea caves, for which La Jolla is famous.

The forty acres upon which the school will be located were donated by Mr. Stough of San Diego. The school will be managed by Mrs. Bentham, who was formerly at the Marlborough School, and whose husband is pastor of St. James-by-the-Sea.

St. James-by-the-Sea is by far the prettiest chapel in Southern California. I understand the architect of the church will also build the girls' school.

There are some celebrated buildings in La Jolla open this summer.

Mrs. Anna Held Heinreich's "Green Dragon" summer place is famous all over the State.

Before her marriage to Max Heinreich, the singer, her name used to make strange confusions.

Mme. Held-Heinreich is a German woman of the widest culture and education and a remarkable personality. She knows every one who has achieved anything and most such have been her guests.

You can imagine the emotions of some of these celebrities to read, through a misguided press, that they had been guests of that fascinating Anna Held whose contribution to posterity is the art of squirming out of the top of her bodice and singing "Won't You Plee Come Out and Play wiz Me."

Gossip says at La Jolla that Mme. Heinreich's marriage, which only took place a year or so ago, was not happy. The scenery of La Jolla and domestic life palled on the lively Max. He is now in New York giving concerts with his daughter, Julia.

Around Los Angeles Heinreich was known as a fine musician, a jolly fellow and a painstaking investigator of the American cock-tail, who had a respectful horror of anyone who could eat Spanish tamales.

"What," he would cry, "You don't like them to eat." Then turning his eyes to a patient heaven, "Ach Gott; he likes dose awful tamales—to eat."

Mme. Heinreich's "Green Dragon" is a peculiarly artistic, charming place; but there are other cottages nearly as attractive. La Jolla is essentially a cottage resort although a pretty little hotel has been opened this season.

There are no street numbers, so the cottages are all named, which adds a piquant summer flavor. Some of the names are quaintly attractive and some are outrageously silly attempts at being funny.

The grandest summer cottage on the headland is that of Miss Ellen Scripps, sister of the millionaire publisher. It suggests some of the Newport "cottages" in its mansionly dimensions.

Separate from her house a thing of vine-strewn walls and Italian pergolas is a little building apart—her library and art gallery. Her books are said to be wonderful.

Back of the line of cottages, and not far from the Scripps, stands a tiny monument to the folly of the young Kansas lawyer, who was drowned at the foot of the precipice where the surf lashes wildest amid gaunt streaming rocks. I don't see how any sane man could have chosen this place to swim.

The night after he went down and disappeared a furious storm came. His bride could not endure hearing the waves that she knew must be hurling his body against the rocks and left for San Diego before his body was recovered.

Immediately above the spot where his body came ashore, the city has put up a little white-painted life-line reel, which stands there like a ghost when the sun has set and darkness has closed over the face of the waters.

The price of residence property on the bluff at La Jolla is beyond all reason and common sense. This is due to the limited space on the headland overlooking the surf.

Below this bluff to the north, however, the ground makes a long sweep to the sea level and to a long fine stretch of breach.

At the end of the crescent is the biological museum which is building with Scripps money, but which will probably pass to the State sooner or later to preserve the wiggling tadpole and the frenzied eel. This will undoubtedly draw the town down that way. The result will be more building sites and cheaper property. La Jolla has just begun.

Among the Los Angeles people who have been at La Jolla this summer are Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Stewart Lobenzier, who have the "Columbine Cottage," William Kay Crawford, Henry Scherer, the bank commissioner, Mrs. M. A. Bennett and daughter, Spencer Thorp, Mrs. R. G. Larimer, Mrs. W. N. Huntsberger and daughters, Mrs. Albert M. Bonsall, Mrs. A. Merrill, Mrs. R. A. Howland, Ora Davis, Mrs. George Hutchins, Mrs. Allan Aldrich, Dr. O. M. Christy.

TALKING BY ELECTRICITY.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

More than 15,000,000 miles of single wire are used by the people of the United States in communicating with each other over the various telegraph and telephone systems of the country.

The division is (Bulletin 102, Bureau of Census:)

	Miles.
Telephone systems	12,999,369
Telegraph systems	2,072,851
Total	15,072,220

This length of single wire would encircle the earth at the equator more than 600 times.

Over the American telegraph wires in 1907 (latest official data) there were flashed 268,470,509 messages, of which 5,869,317 were cablegrams. This is the growth since the first telegraph line in the United States was opened for business in 1844.

It was not until 1876 that the telephone was introduced. At the 1880 census the telephone companies reported 34,305 miles of wire about one-ninth of the then mileage of the telegraph companies. By 1902 the telephone wire mileage had become almost four times as great as that used for telegraph purposes, and in 1907 it was eight times as great.

In the amount of business done, the sum paid in salaries and wages, and the capital invested in 1907, the telephone business was a little over three and one-half times as extensive as the telegraph industry, and during that year it furnished employment for more than five times as many persons.

Between 1902 and 1907 there was an addition of 8,096,918 miles of telephone wire, as compared with an increase of but 259,611 in the mileage of owned and leased wire for commercial telegraph purposes. During only this five years the increase in telephone wire mileage was more than six times as great as the total amount of wire added to the telegraph business in the twenty-seven years, 1880 to 1907.

The statement is made, says the bulletin, that the use of telephones by railroads, exclusively in connection with their operation has increased rapidly since 1902. Although the electric interurban roads early recognized the advantages of the telephone for train-dispatching purposes, the larger steam railroads have been disinclined to substitute the telephone for the long-established telegraph, the general objection being that of the liability to mistakes through the similarity in the sound of different words when transmitted by telephone.

Financial statistics in 1907 of the commercial telegraphs and ocean cable systems are:

Number of companies, twenty-five.

Capital stock and bonds, par value, issued	$220,292,575
Increase in five years	57,347,650
Salaries and wages for the year	17,808,249
Other expenditures for the year	24,071,364
Income for the year	51,583,868
Increase in income over 1902	10,652,530

The ocean cables increased their nautical mileage 177.6 per cent. from 1902 to 1907, owing to the laying of the Pacific and New York-Habana cables.

RACED THE SEA SERPENT.

Ship's Log Contains Record of Vessel's Crew Seeing an Enormous Lizard.

[Boston Herald:] Entered in the permanent log of the British steamship Mereddio, Capt. Clark, is a record of a sea monster sighted while the ship was on a passage between Penarth and Santos. Chief Officer Neil S. Murray was in charge of the bridge at the time and a Greek quartermaster was at the wheel. The quartermaster, who first sighted the monster, was almost petrified with fear and was at the point of permitting the big freighter to take her own course.

"It was like this," explained the chief officer when the Mereddio docked at East Boston yesterday. "The ship was 500 miles from Santos. I saw the Greek acting strangely and followed the direction he was looking.

"My hair nearly stood on end at the sight. Swimming parallel to the ship was a monster lizard. It was big as a whale. The ocean fairly seethed as it propelled itself with enormous dragon's claws. A head as big as a pilot-house and one coil of the beast's neck were above water.

"For a distance of nearly 300 feet the sea heaved and was lashed into foam. I think the lizard was fully the Mereddio's length, and I feared for the safety of the steamship, as the creature, mailed in huge, bony scales of a dark green color, swerved as if to come alongside. It had a saw-like ridge on its back, and its girth was fully as great as that of a whale.

"After the serpent had raced the ship several minutes it humped its back and sounded. The swash from its commotion shook the ship and sent spray over the starboard rail.

"I have followed the sea many years and, mind you, I am not given to fancies. That creature so impressed me that I entered the incident in the scrap log and later made a permanent record of it."

The Mereddio's crew substantiates Officer Murray, while the Greek quartermaster admits he did not recover from the shock for several days.

The Tenderness of Woman.

"There's nothing in all this talk of the tenderness of women," said a Brooklyn man. "I rode up in a Halsey-street car last night. Left the bridge at 5. Hardly a man had a seat. Nearly every bench held a woman. A score of us tired, over-worked men, had to stand and lurch about while the women talked matineé or hid behind papers. Only one of 'em gave up her seat and that to another woman! Never showed the slightest sign of thinking of us weary toilers who rake and scrape for 'em! I guess the issue is going to be female suffrage vs. male sufferings."—[New York Herald.

Benefit of Necessity.

An artist had finished a landscape. On looking up he beheld an Irish navvy gazing at his canvas. "Well," said the artist, familiarly, "do you suppose you could make a picture like that?" The Irishman mopped his forehead a moment. "Sure, a man c'n do annything if he's druv to ut," he replied.—[Philadelphia Inquirer.

Houses, Lots and Lands—Review of Building and Development Continu

THE MARKET.

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES.

Continued Summer Demand for Lots and Residence Properties Encourages Realty Men to Anticipate a Busy Fall—Vast Sums Being Expended in General Improvements.

Considerable activity characterized the realty market of the past week, the reports from some quarters almost discounting many of the traditions of August dullness. Even those dealers who are actually experiencing a decline in business, and naturally enough their number is legion, are sanguine about the prospects for the fall months. There are but few pessimists in the business. No surer index to the confidence of real estate men can be cited than the fact that new tracts in every direction and on every side of the city are being subdivided and improved for the fall campaign. Thousands are being spent in this way every week, and the real estate columns of The Times are replete with the records of acreage transfers designed for subdivision and the expected fall business. The building permit records for the month bear eloquent testimony to the amount of actual construction work that is going on in this city and section. Following is the list of sales reported:

Report Busy Times.

The H. R. Cowan Company reports the following sales and exchanges for the past ten days: Two lots on Crenshaw boulevard, just north of Pico, for $1500 cash; a five-room cottage on a lot 40x140 feet, on East Forty-third street, near Compton, to Samuel Bierson, for $2000; Mrs. Anna Morgan, a five-room modern cottage at Olivito Heights, for $2500; a lot on Pico street to J. N. Smith for $6200. The owner is going to improve with a two-story modern brick building. Mrs. M. A. Platner exchanged a seven-room house on Twenty-first street for a modern cottage at Manhattan valued at $3000, and three lots at Hollywood. J. Hugh Jones exchanged a five-acre orange grove at Redlands for the modern flat buildings at Nos. 836 and 837 Aliso street. James G. Hunter exchanged a lot at Huntington Park for the modern eleven-room house at No. 207 West Thirty-seventh Place, the difference being adjusted by a mortgage. The same firm reports the sale of thirty-one acres of land near Washington street and Ivy Station at the cash price of $850 per acre; an east-front lot on Harvard boulevard, near Sixth street, for $2500; the five-room cottage of H. Bellamy, on East Twenty-ninth street, for $3000; three lots at San Diego for a modern six-room house at Santa Monica, the difference being adjusted by a mortgage. The company has the following houses nearing completion: J. M. Stallmeher, a five-room cottage on Olivito Heights; Edward F. Smith, on Sixth avenue, near Washington street, a two-story, seven-room house; J. M. Clark, on East Thirty-fifth street, a five-room house; a three-story flat building at Ontario for M. Marble.

Awarded Many Contracts.

M. S. Yeager & Co. have been awarded contracts to build the following: George J. Wolper, a six-room, one-and-one-half-story residence at No. 719 West Forty-third Place; Lizzie Harris, a six-room, one-and-one-half-story residence at No. 1427 Helen avenue, for $2080; Maurice Shanahan, a five-room bungalow at No. 625 West Fifty-fourth street, for $1466; W. E. lace, a six-room bungalow at Zaria; W. F. Brooks, a five-room bungalow at No. 310 Metcalf street, Olive S. Myers, a five-room house at Whittier; Samuel Ianz, a three-room house on Isleta street; Robert I. Holbrook, a four-room house on California street; Kate Roche, a three-room house on Bonsallo street; E. B. Espada, a four-room house on Dakota street; Albert Behenke, a four-room house on East Thirty-ninth street; Mrs. J. Murch, a four-room house on West Sixty-sixth street.

Manchester Heights Sales.

The Grider-Hamilton-Oswald Company reports a good demand for lots in their Manchester Heights tract, which is located at the southwest corner of Vermont and Manchester avenues, and has the service of two rapid car lines, the Strawberry Park car, over the Sunnyside division, and the Los Angeles Inter-urban. NEW GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

Local Architects Get Award for Two New Public Buildings in Santa Ana.

The Board of Education of Santa Ana has awarded the contract for planning two handsome new grammar schools for that city to Dennis & Farwell of Los Angeles. Perspectives of the two designs accepted are reproduced on this page. Both are of practically the same interior design and arrangement.

Each structure will be of frame construction and contain nine rooms. The exterior treatment will be rustic and substantial. The principal's rooms will be just off the main entrances, and three other rooms, including kindergarten, will occupy the first floor of each building. These rooms will be 26x32 feet in size. The second-floor class rooms will be 27x32 feet. The basements will be given over to toilets, furnace rooms and bicycle racks.

CORNER BROADWAY AND NINTH.

The recent sale of this corner by the Hamburger Realty Company for $290,000 (being the most notable real estate sale of the year thus far) continues to attract attention to that locality. The price is regarded as significant of the steady advance in values in that direction. The purchasers, The Times-Mirror Company, contemplate the early erection of a handsome one-story building on the premises, the Broadway front to be leased for stores or other business uses, and the remainder, about 80x97 feet, to be reserved for a special purpose, possibly for a new theater, with a narrow entrance on Broadway and an ample public entrance on Ninth. The owners' offer to build to suit the particular requirements of tenants, and may be communicated with by prospective lessees.

BROADWAY HOTEL LEASE.

A deal has just been closed through the agency of E. W. Cason & Co. and R. A. Rowan & Co., whereby Brock & Feagans lease the three upper floors and a portion of the ground floor of the Catalina Hotel, at No. 437 South Broadway, for a term of years to J. R. Hankla. The lease calls for a monthly rental of over $400, and the building contains sixty guest rooms. About $3000 has been spent on modernizing the interior during the past month. J. R. Hankla, the lessee, formerly conducted the Broadway Hotel here, and is well known to local hotel men. About $10,000 will be spent on equipment.

SMALL LOSS IN NEW BUILDINGS.

REPORTS REVEAL A LITTLE DECLINE FROM LAST YEAR.

Small Loss in Valuation of Permits from Last Year Will Be Handsomely Recovered Within Two Weeks When Pending Construction Projects Are Filed.

The building permits issued by the chief inspector of buildings for the two weeks just closed fall slightly behind corresponding figures for last year, so far as valuation goes. The gain in the actual number of items is thirty-one permits. From August 1 to August 13, inclusive, 325 permits, representing a valuation of $410,923, were recorded. The record for 1908 was 294 permits and $418,968 valuation. The discrepancy of $8000 is negligible.

That August will reach comfortably over the million mark, and lead the total of last year by a neat margin, is practically assured by a number of pending construction projects which will be filed within the next two weeks. One of these items alone will be over $200,000. If all the likely projects of the next few months materialize, the autumn reports bid fair to be record breakers.

The Fifth Ward leads in valuation with eighty-nine permits, representing $119,920. The Fourth Ward follows with thirty permits at $72,005 valuation, and the Seventh Ward is third with twenty-two permits and $65,366 valuation.

Following is the classified report and the report by wards:

INDIAN STAR OF THE DAY.

McLean Wins Great Honors in Seattle Meet.

Home Aggregation Takes the Majority of Points.

Rose Sets World's Record in the Shot-Put.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, Aug. 14.—The Seattle Athletic Club won the A.A. U. Championship of the United States, today, with the Olympic Club of San Francisco second, and the Chicago A.A. third.

The total points were: Seattle A.C., 46; Olympic Club, San Francisco, 34; Chicago A.A., 26; New York, A.C., 17; Kansas City A.C., 12; Multnomah A.C., Portland, 5; Boston A.A., 5; Mott Haven, 5; unattached, 5; Missouri A.C., 2; total, 153.

Harry McLean the Mapi Indian of Phoenix, Ariz., who won the two-mile P.A.A. championship in Los Angeles last month, created a sensation by winning the five-mile run in almost record time against a fast field.

One of the sensations of the day was the establishing of a new world's record in the sixteen-pound shot put by Ralph Rose, the husky entry of the Olympic Athletic Club, already holder of the title in this event. His previous record was 49ft. 10in., made in New York, September 7, 1908. Today he hurled the iron ball a distance of 50.26ft. eclipsing his previous feat by several inches.

Rose won further distinction today by securing twenty-one points to his own credit, the greatest number secured by any athlete during the meet.

In the 120-yard high hurdles Forest Smithson of the Multnomah club of Portland, Or., defeated Shaw of Chicago and equaled the previous record of 15 1-5 seconds. The race was run against a strong head wind which undoubtedly prevented the Oregon runner from establishing a new record for this event.

The most spectacular event of the day was the five mile race in which Harry McLean, an Indian from Phoenix, Ariz., was pitted against the pick of the country's runners. The fleet footed red man, who was smaller than any of his competitors, took the lead in the fourth lap and set a grueling pace that soon played havoc with the field.

F. G. Bellars of the New York Athletic Club proved his most dangerous competitor, and soon succeeded in taking the lead from the Indian. He endeavored to slow down the pace, but McLean forced the issue, and by pressing his man tired him so that he could not stand the final spurt, which began as the shot was fired for the twentieth and last lap.

Bellars made a game effort against his Indian opponent, and with a brilliant burst of speed gathered a good lead. He could not hold it, however, for McLean was on his heels at the half, and as they entered the stretch the Arizona runner developed a burst of speed that sent him across the line several yards the winner.

F. Jackson of Seattle, who finished third, came in a lap and a quarter behind the winner.

McLean, who had a local reputation at Phoenix, was sent to Seattle by the Phoenix Elks lodge. As a special event a relay race was run between teams from New York, Chicago and Seattle, representing the East, the Middle West and the Far West, the latter finishing first and the Middle West second, with the East coming in last.

COULTER STILL AN AMATEUR.

TO BOX BOSCHA AT BIG STAG OF ATHLETIC CLUB.

Walla Wheeler Consents to Go on in Exhibition With Willie Coe in Place of Dennis of San Francisco. Cogdill and Beauchamp Should Put Up Great Contest.

Sam Coulter and Charles Boscha are to box three rounds in the wind-up of the amateur boxing and wrestling tournament that is to be held at the Los Angeles Athletic Club Thursday night. Eddie Dennis of the Olympic Club and Willie Coe were at first scheduled to meet in the main event, but as Dennis is ill and will not be able to come South the bout between the crack lightweights was arranged.

Boscha was runner-up to Coulter in the Pacific Coast championships last month. He is fully as clever as the champion, and is only slightly inferior in aggressiveness and strength. The men gave a fine exhibition at Venice.

The programme of the show includes three boxing contests, two exhibition bouts and a wrestling event.

Fred Cogdill, the 145-pound amateur champion, and J. Beauchamp, the former lightweight champion of Southern California, are to box three rounds at catchweights, and are expected to put up the most slashing fight of the show. Cogdill is a hard puncher, but Beauchamp, on account of his greater cleverness, expects to win the decision. Cogdill is counting on a knockout.

Walla Wheeler has been substituted for Dennis against Coe, and many members of the club believe he will give the little champion a hard run for the decision. Wheeler has been out of the game for several months, but has kept in fine condition and is still as clever as ever. He consented to go on in an exhibition.

Two lively scraps in the 105-pound class are expected when Rocco Urgo, the Pacific Coast champion, and Dunnie Rooney of the Newsboys' Club and Freddie Scholls of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, and Perry Hatton of the Newsboys' Club hook up.

THEY'RE OFF.

STEARNS-LOCO TRACK BATTLE.

Tuned Racers Groomed for Today's Contest.

Driver's Duel May Furnish Many Wild Thrills.

Leavitt and Slaughter Have Risked Fortunes.

Charles Soules, one of the best-known track drivers in the West, the only man to give Barney Oldfield a race when the great hippodromist was in his prime, will drive the Stearns car today at Ascot Park in a track duel with "Bill" Orr, a factory man, who will be on the Locomobile.

These two drivers will engage in what promises to be a great struggle of motor car giants for 300 miles. They will watch each other every minute in odrer to grasp the slightest advantage which may offer.

Should one car falter, the other driver will flash ahead in an effort to put miles between his car and the "missing" motor monster. For hours the race will be in the balance, as no matter how far ahead one car may go, the other will always have a chance, as an accident may put the leader out of the running.

Iron-faced Soules, the cool, cold, calculating and crafty driver, has only one desire to win. He did not drive the Stearns car in the other Loco-Stearns race. His place was taken by a younger man. Soules was sore. He modestly asserted that the Stearns would have won had he been at the wheel. There are many who believe him.

This time Charley is to have his innings. If he can make good, great will be his glory. He will receive $500 even if he loses. He is certain that he can win. Should Soules be hurt, his mechanician, Al Livingston, probably would take his place.

"Bill" Orr is an old man, as far as the racing game goes. It is usually a man in whose veins young blood courses who dares to take the risk to win a fast motor car race. The man who is willing to flirt with death is usually well this side of 40. Orr is not old, but he is not young. He is not as enthusiastic as Soules. He may be as calculating, and may have a better head.

MAY SUBSTITUTE.

At the last moment Leavitt may substitute Frank Free for the older driver. Free has nerve. He would drive like the wind. He will take any chance. He has faced death a dozen times.

Failing to get Murray Page, who has the Coast territory for the Locomobile, Leavitt settled on Frank Free. Then the factory took a hand, and as Orr is a Locomobile factory man, and knows a Loco from the radiator to the tail lamp, Leavitt was induced to put his shop foreman at the wheel of his car.

Orr is not the driver that Murray Page is. He is not in the same class with the man who won the twenty-four-hour race, and then won a 150-mile race against a faster car than Casey Jones. But Orr can drive. He has been on the track every day, and he knows his car. He should make a good showing.

Free figured in one of the nastiest accidents which ever occurred on Ascot Park track. His Sunset car plunged through the fence during the twenty-four-hour race. Free escaped miraculously. He is ready to take the same chance again.

Another man also may be substituted at the last moment. Bert Latham works for Leavitt. Bert can drive some himself. He is ambitious to steer a winning car. He has had the loser's end so many times that it is becoming almost a habit. He wants

MOTOR CARS AND FIRE HYDRANTS.

Autoists who leave machines within twenty-five feet of a fire hydrant this week will be arrested and fined. This morning the police will begin to enforce the ordinance relating to leaving motor cars near hydrants. The police have been lenient for a week and many have been warned. Now the grabhooks of the law are out and you must answer to the police magistrate if you forget.

The ordinance was enacted with a view of aiding the fire department. In several instances motor cars have been stopped dead against a hydrant. Before a hose could be attached the car had to be moved. Sometimes the car was shoved ahead only with great difficulty. Now it is a misdemeanor to obstruct the hydrant.

There is not an autoist in town who will object to the ordinance. Every citizen knows that it is reasonable. Heretofore it has only been forgetfulness. Chief of Police Dishman has decided that the autoists have received sufficient warning and those who are careless this week must take the consequences.

RENTON RUNS ROAD MEASURE.

Matheson Six and a Warner Reel Off the Miles.

Distance Disputes Settled by Auto Journey.

Los Angeles to San Diego and Return Trip Made.

Road distances from Los Angeles to San Diego, over which there have een so many disputes, were measured y P. A. Renton and a party last week n a six-cylinder Matheson belonging o Bruce Carter, who drove the car. Renton made the round trip to the outhern city the early part of the week, going down by the coast route nd returning by way of the inland oute. Wretched roads were encountered for the greater part of the journey.

So well did the Matheson behave hat Renton almost decided to make try for the Chanslor-Lyon cup in pite of the rough roads. He drove he car over a portion of the return ourney at a record-breaking clip and he "Little Six" made a wonderful un, going thirty-one miles in thirty-even minutes.

It was on the grades that the Matheson showed best. The Torrey grade, which is difficult to make even on the ow, was topped on the intermediate t thirty miles an hour. The car howed abundance of power and for a ew machine just out of the factory ad plenty of flexibility.

The record to San Diego will not be roken for some time owing to the ondition of the roads. From Los Angeles to Santa Ana the highways are erce. Deep ruts and chuckholes ake fast driving impossible. Touring is not even pleasant until the Orange county roads are passed.

THIS PART GOOD.

From Tustin to San Juan Capistrano the road is excellent. Over a natral boulevard the car can be driven t sixty miles an hour if the motor ill turn fast enough. From San uan to Oceanside the road is nothg to boast about. After leaving ceanside it is slightly better.

When La Jolla is reached the run to San Diego is over as fine a boulerd as can be found in the West. his has been recently improved, and ough it is not as good even as the oint Loma road, it is fine enough to fer excellent touring for all cars.

After leaving San Diego for the me run through the inland route e going is not bad until after the d Mission grade is crossed. Then e roads are bumpy almost all the ay. The Red Mountain grade is in etty good shape. From Corona to e Angeles the roads are not good.

W. H. Halliwell, the Warner speedmeter man, was a member of the enton party. Halliwell had rigged a w Warner to the Matheson, and ith the reading at zero the start was ade from the Renton Motor Works, Main and Pico streets early Suny morning.

From Los Angeles to Downey, the curate mileage as clocked by Halliwll is 13.6 miles. The road is wretch- and must be taken slowly. From owney to Norwalk five miles were ded and the exact reading was 18.4 les from Los Angeles. This section the road is abominable.

WRETCHED ROADS.

The reading at Buena Park was 28.5 iles and at Anaheim 30.8 miles. This ction of the road is as bad as the retch between Anaheim and Santa a, which is 38 miles from Los Anles.

San Juan Capistrano, 22 miles from nta Ana, was made on the run over excellent highway which nature s made. The old mission is exactly miles, by Warner, from Los Ange-

Another dispute was settled when ceanside was reached. By the shortt road to the little city, provided re are not driven along the beach om San Juan, the distance is 95.5 iles.

Del Mar is 113.9 miles from Los Anles. Autoists are welcomed at the tle resort by the sea and many mor parties are learning to tarry at l Mar before continuing the journey uth.

San Diego is 139.2 miles from Los geles by way of the La Jolla road, e best way to reach the city, as ere are more miles of good road by at route than by driving through rrento.

At least a score of different disnces have been given to San Diego. is mark is considered accurate and ay be a guide until the new boulerd, which San Diego will build to e county line at San Onofre, is made. is will shorten the distance by seval miles.

Taking the inland route the distance m San Diego to Los Angeles by y of Escondido, 40 miles, Temecula miles, Murietta 82 miles, Elsinore miles, Corona 117 miles, makes a n of 189 miles to this city. This ves a total of 328 miles for the round p.

Renton made the run carefully. The ne for the down trip was just 6h. m. and for the up run 9h. 25m. The atheson may be sent after the recd, but not until the roads are in mewhat better shape than they are present.

The sentiment in San Diego regardg good roads is such that it is cerin that the work of improvement to be rushed. W. G. Spalding, the seball man, is working with his coat to hurry the improvement.

With $1,250,000 to spend on road imrovements, San Diego expects to place rself decidedly on the map. The conacts for the bridges are to be let t once, even before all the bonds are old. The coast highway is the first be built.

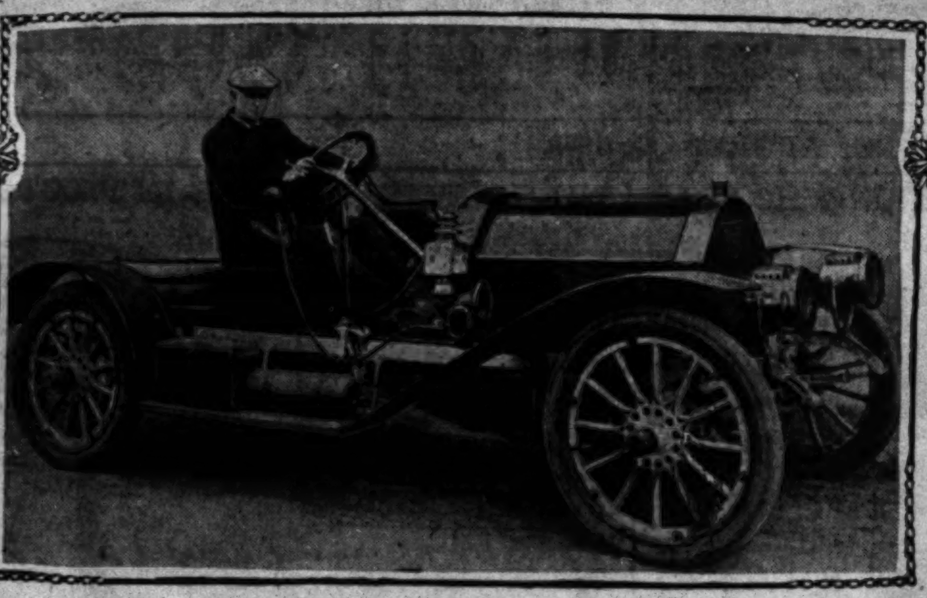
AUTOMOBILE DAY.

enice to Welcome the Motor Cars and Men on October Twenty-eight. Great Plans.

Automobile Day at Venice, August 8, is to be the second annual affair f the kind, when motor cars are to e welcomed at the city by the sea. he Apperson "Jackrabbit," winner the Santa Monica road race, and he winner of today's Stearns-Locoobile race, will have the places of onor in the big car procession.

Venice is to be turned over to the otorists for a day. There will be banquet at noon and fireworks in he evening. There will be prizes for he oldest and for the newest and obbiest machines.

Fred McCarver is managing the afir, which promises to be interesting. ere will be decorated automobiles d motor cars, which have been ugging about the streets for years. he day will be started with the big rade along the speedway.



Walter Vail at the Wheel of a Pennsylvania Roadster, the stunt car which won the Wilkesbarre hill climb in th e East, and which has been sent out here for special races. Vail will enter the car, with the factory's consent, in ma tch events and other contests.

PANHANDLE.

PENNSY CAR MAKES A BID.

WINNER OF WILKESBARRE CLIMB HERE TO STAY.

Makers of Fast Car to Present Themselves Through the Vail Motor Car Company, Which Has Opened Handsome New Garage on Hope Street—Prospects Good.

Because the Pennsylvania motor car factory has an abundance of pride in its stunt car, the machine which won the Wilkesbarre hill climb this year, has been sent out to Walter Vail of the Vail Motor Car Company, local agents, to be used here in speed trials. The stunt car will make between seventy and eighty miles an hour, and has the roar of a flying racer when the muffler is opened.

According to Vail the car cannot be driven wide open anywhere except on a track. He says the factory has given him carte blanche as far as speeding is concerned. He is ready to enter race meets hereabouts.

The new firm consists of two men. Vail and his partner, Charles Crawford. The two young fellows have plenty of enthusiasm. They have removed to a handsome garage on Hope street, near Eleventh. The place has a large showroom and plenty of space in the rear, where cars can be stored.

The first consignment of 1910 cars are here. The Pennsylvania is made in the "Big Six," the "Little Six" and the "Big Four" models. The type "D," five-passenger car, is one of the handsome models which the Vail Motor Car Company has just received.

There is also the "baby tonneau" type, a car that is particularly pleasing and attractive. It has a roomy tonneau, and is low and rakish in appearance.

The Pennsylvania roadster is stylish, and has an abundance of power. It seems to be ideal for gentlemen's use. It is nobby in design and fast enough for most men.

The cars are made with four and six-cylinder motors. The axles are of the full floating type, the transmission is selective, and is on the rear axle. The steering knuckles are substantial in appearance.

The bodies are of metal. The cars are finished in red, green or blue. There is a foot and emergency brake expanding on rear wheels. The wheel base is 110 inches, but is greater in the larger types.

The Pennsylvania factory is at Bryn Mawr, Pa. It has a limited capacity, and has sold its entire output each year with ease. The factory is making its first bid for recognition in Los Angeles through the Vail Motor Car Company.

PACKARDS ON THE WAY.

Western Motor Car Company Establishing Record With Car and Factory in Hastening Deliveries.

Earle C. Anthony, manager of the Western Motor Car Company, expects his Packard "18" demonstrator here this week. The car will have few changes from this year's machine other than added refinements. The 1910 Packard line retains its classy appearance, but has a little more power than this year's car.

Again the question of deliveries is confronting the Western Motor Car Company. The demand for cars at once, and the desire to have the 1910 goods as speedily as possible, seems to have infected the motor-buying public. Sales have been lost because prospective buyers could not have their cars at once.

The Packard people have enlarged their plant. The capacity is much greater than it was last year. In spite of this fact every car has been contracted for.

At the Western Anthony has taken deposits on all cars he can hope to deliver this month. He will receive them as fast as the factory can ship them here, but even at that it will not be speedy enough to suit the urgent demands of the buyers.

A movement is on foot for the formation of a State Automobile Association in Missouri.

MILES OF MOTORCYCLES.

Club Outing Today Will Take Machines to Venice Where Athletic Games Will Be Enjoyed.

About 100 motorcyclists will join the procession, which will leave this morning for Venice, where a special programme has been arranged in their honor. The members of the Los Angeles Motocycle Club are to be special guests of the city by the sea.

The machines will be sent away from the clubhouse at 9 o'clock this morning, and the run to Venice will be made leisurely. There is to be no speeding. Special attention is to be given the amateur riders. This will be a road run in which, it is believed, there will be more motorcycles than have ever before taken part in a club outing.

The committee in charge consists of A. J. Johnson, chairman; S. L. Lyon, E. C. Kiel, who is club president, and Roy Symonds. The members are trying to arrange for a procession of machines five miles long. There are 120 members in the club.

Luncheon will be served. In the afternoon there will be races and other athletic contests. Dancing will be enjoyed. The start for home will be at 6 o'clock this evening.

MOTORCYCLE THIEVES.

Score of Bike Buzzers Stolen While Riders Are Absent for Only a Few Minutes.

Almost a score of motorcycles have been stolen in the last ten days. Systematic thievery of machines makes it a difficult matter for the police to trace any of the miscreants who are riding the bikes away. It seems easy for a thief to mount a motorcycle and skip into oblivion.

F. B. Holbrook is one of the recent losers. He left a handsome Indian motorcycle standing in front of the Los Angeles Gas & Electric Company building on Hill street. He was inside the building five minutes. When he returned some one had taken the machine. He says he has an idea who the guilty party is. He imparted his suspicious to the police and detectives are working on the case.

Time and again complaints are made to the police authorities concerning stolen wheels. In spite of all precautions taken, wheels are purloined. Motorcycle cops are keeping a sharp lookout for certain wheels of which they have the description, license tags and numbers.

RACES WITH OWL.

Troxel and Columbia Roadster Reach Town from San Fernando Ahead of Southern Pacific Flyer.

An exciting race with the Owl train over the Southern Pacific furnished thrills yesterday morning for C. C. Troxel and the passengers in the five coaches. Troxel drove his Columbia roadster over the roads and won the race, reaching this city in exactly thirty-four minutes. The race was witnessed by hundreds of persons.

With a defiant strick the train pulled out of San Fernando just as Troxel dropped in his clutch for the race. The big train was under way first and gained for a mile. Then the Columbia pulled up abreast of the Pullman coaches and along the smooth stretch leading to Burbank held the train even though the fireman shovieled coal and the engineer had the throttle wide open.

The train slowed at Burbank enough to give the Columbia man a chance to slide quietly through town and out on the country road again when the race was resumed with the train making splendid time. The little Columbia bounced along the roads at nearly sixty miles an hour.

Through Tropico the car flashed with the train, making no stops. The engineer and passengers had jumped into the spirit of the contest and the race was as real as if the train and car had been prepared for weeks for the struggle.

On approaching this city the Columbia pulled away from the train and led it into town. First and Broadway was reached forty minutes after starting. Thirty-four minutes after leaving San Fernando the Columbia was on the paved streets near the Plaza.

It is reported that Charles J. Glidden wants the 1910 Glidden tour to start from San Francisco and end at Boston.

GOING AFAR.

EXPLORE OLD MEXICO WILDS.

SARGENT PARTY IN POPE-HARTFORD ON TOUR.

Motor Car Is Curiosity to Natives in Lower California—Roads Are Excellent and Long Chase Is Enjoyable—Coyote Hunt One of Experiences.

Down into Old Mexico in a Pope-Hartford car, and several weeks of touring across the border, are the experiences of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Sargent of Los Angeles, who, with a party which consisted of Miss Ellen Harris and her sister of Chicago and Miss Ethelwyn Sargent, made the trip into the wilds. The journey was enjoyed and was regarded as an adventure by the young women.

The run into Lower California was made over the backbone of the peninsula from Coronado. The roads were found to be in excellent shape for touring. Some time was passed at Tia Juana, after which the Pope was driven across the sands into unexplored regions, where the car was a curiosity to the natives, many of whom had never seen an automobile.

It was an enjoyable vacation trip of 600 miles. After leaving Los Angeles the party toured down the coast to San Diego and, crossing the bay, passed several days at Coronado, making the drives to the other resorts nearby and touring into Old Mexico. They found the roads in the sister republic in fair condition and saw considerable game across the border.

One of the experiences of the long auto trip was an exciting chase of a coyote. The animal was slinking along the side of the road when the car overtook him and instead of chasing off across the field the animal cut out down the road. The car gave chase and it was exciting before the coyote leaped the fence and disappeared into the brush.

The Sargents were absent one week. They experienced no trouble with the car and report a pleasant trip.

MANAGER ROSE RETURNS.

Business Booming in the East and Manager Places Order for One Hundred Machines.

D. B. Rose, manager of the local Elmore branch, has returned from a flying trip to the factory at Clyde, O. Rose found business in the East on the top wave with his factory working hard to keep ahead of its contracts. He states that an increase of 33 per cent. in power will be added to each of the Elmore cars this year.

An order for 100 Elmores was placed by Rose for his territory. The valveless car is popular in Southern California and Rose intends that it shall lose none of its prestige. Twenty-five of the one hundred allotment have been sold to D. J. Bastanchury, agent for San Diego and Orange counties.

The first 1910 Elmores should reach Los Angeles about September 1. From that date on the factory promises to send the Elmore Motor Car Company regular shipments.

FAST RUN SOUTHWARD.

One of the fastest trips of the week was made by Albert Schoonover of San Diego, who drove his seven-passenger Stoddard-Dayton from San Diego to Los Angeles in less than six hours. His running time into Santa Ana was four hours and twenty minutes. This is very fast traveling, but Schoonover says he never seemed to be forcing the car, the riding being comfortable.

Billy Ruess expected to make a trip to Baldy last week in his Pope-Hartford racer, but a bad cold, with a threatened attack of pneumonia, put the active Bill on his back and he will not be in racing trim until the latter part of this week. Even then Husky Bill may be seen driving his car in blankets and overshoes.

NEW LIGHT ON CITY ORDINANCE.

Drivers of vehicles which carry no lights of any kind at night are a menace to all motor car drivers, but have no recourse by law if injured in a collision, or if their rigs are smashed. Ralph Hamlin, president of the Automobile Dealers' Association of Southern California, has ascertained this fact after consultation with attorneys who have examined the new ordinance.

According to Hamlin, the most expert testimony obtainable was secured. As a result, the consensus of opinion is that a man whose rig is smashed by an automobile must bear the damage himself unless he is complying with the light ordinance at the time of the collision, and is not to blame for the smash-up. All vehicles must carry lights or take the consequences.

COWAN RAMBLES FAR FROM HOME.

LOCAL RAMBLER AGENT VISITS FACTORY IN EAST.

Finds Business Booming, With Plant Working Beyond Its Capacity and Preparing to Expand—Only Four-Cylinder Cars to Be Made in the Future.

W. K. Cowan of the Rambler agency returned from the factory the early part of the week filled with enthusiasm and pride over what he considers the bright prospects for the coming season. He passed a week at Kenosha, Wis., where the Rambler factory is located, and says the cars this year are to be better than ever. He attended a conference of branch managers held there and Rambler men from all parts of the United States rubbed elbows.

Sample cars of the new 1910 Rambler models were shown. They contain several new features but in most respects are like the 1909 cars. No radical changes have been made.

The announcement of the new line will not be made for a week. There is a hint of a lower priced car than ever. A Rambler for less than $2000 will be an innovation by the factory. This is a promise and the car is to have a thirty-four-horse-power motor.

According to Cowan large additions are being made to the factory, which is to have an added capacity. The coming season's output will be on the market months earlier than last year's cars appeared.

There will be Rambler cars for delivery in September, says Cowan. Plenty of cars will be available in October when the heavy shipments will be commenced. When the agents and managers had made their demands it was discovered the factory could not supply them and the allotment of each was cut down appreciably. Cowan secured 115 cars for Southern California.

Added floor space will make the Rambler factory one of the large plants turning out motor cars. There will be 800,000 feet in all. One of the larger of the new buildings will be devoted to the testing department and twenty dynamometers will be required to handle the output.

In addition to the already large realty holdings of the Rambler factory Thomas B. Jeffery has added sixty-five additional acres on which to expand later.

The output of the Rambler factory will be confined to four-cylinder cars after the present two-cylinder orders have been exhausted.

STODDARDS COMING.

Fred Flint, manager of the Stoddard-Dayton Motor Company, announced yesterday that the first of the 1910 Stoddards would be on exhibition in the salesroom next Sunday. The new cars will be runabouts of the "Thirty" horsepower type. The other cars are expected to follow within the next thirty days. A shipment of Baker electrics of the 1910 type are also en route. The new "Thirty" Stoddard is to replace the "Twenty-five" horsepower car of 1909, which has made good in the hands of such motorists as Fred Rainey and Roy Hillman. Only a few were received in 1909 but Manager Flint promises early deliveries for the new season.

C. E. Bireley, of Bireley & Young, agents for the Columbia, left Friday for the East. He will visit the Herreshoff and Columbia factories.

Chalmers roadsters will begin to arrive in quantities this week for the Western Motor Car Company.

The 1910 Packard demonstrator "18" will be here this week.

Leon T. Shettler will leave this week for a vacation in the hills near Matilija Springs.

Norman Church left Thursday for the East to attend the convention of Stoddard Dayton agents at Indianapolis. He expects to be gone about six weeks.

D. P. Oatman, manager of the electric department of the Stoddard-Dayton Motor Company, has returned from the East. It has been found necessary to enlarge the space to be devoted to electrics and instead of a room 40x80, a space 130x50 will be used exclusively for electric cars. A complete equipment will be installed and the place will accommodate sixty cars at once. The taking of additional room in the adjoining building gives the Stoddard a garage and salesroom covering 34,500 square feet.

Beginning September 1 the garage of the Stoddard-Dayton company will be open day and night.

S. A. Appold, who is making the round trip from Los Angeles to Seattle, arrived in Seattle on July 7 of this month in his two-cylinder 1908 Reo touring car. He was two weeks on the road and reports having had a good time.

Leon T. Shettler has just closed 1910 agency contracts for the sale of Reo cars with C. W. Pendleton, Buena Park; Fred Fuller, El Centro; George W. Farrer, Alhambra; H. D. Blanchard, Pomona; A. Chaney, Riversidle.

BRIGHT SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

A new automobile manufacturing company has been formed at Joliet. Ill.

The Automobile Club of Colorado Springs has begun the work of signboarding all thoroughfares leading to that city.

A ladies' Glidden tour is now being talked of and may yet become a reality as a result of the barring of women from the regular event.

Business men of Andalusia, Ala., are interesting themselves in the proposal to connect their town with Pensacola, Fla., with an automobile line.

The New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club is arranging a club run for members of the Newark organization to Flemington, N. J., on August 5.

Because of the success of the races of the Columbus, O. Automobile Club in July, it has been decided to hold another meet some time in September.

A number of prominent men in Central Valley, N. Y., propose to oil the highways in and around their town. A carload of oil, 4500 gallons, has been ordered.

Great things are promised of a new storage battery which is being tried out on vehicles in New York City. It is said it may revolutionize the motive power of electric vehicles.

A splendid automobile road has been almost completed from Toluca to Tenancingo, Mex., as the result of the efforts of a number of prominent Mexican officials who reside along the route.

It is quite probable now, so it is said, that American makers, drivers and motorists in general will have their fondest wish gratified, as a transcontinental tour for 1910 is all the talk.

Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of the province of Quebec, who was recently presented with a fine touring car by a number of his admiring friends, is an ardent motorist and staunch advocate of good roads.

The problem of curbing reckless motor drivers has vexed the authorities of Atlantic City, N. J., for some time, and the city officials have decided to buy a couple of fast motorcycles for the use of the police force.

Because many Baltimoreans and Washingtonians are away from town during July and August, the Motor Car Racing Association of Maryland postponed its twenty-four-hour race at Benning, D. C., September 13.

Records kept by the local government board of London show that instead of increasing, as many persons claim, the cost of maintenance and of cleansing streets in that city, it has actually been lowered since the advent of motor traffic.

Fast Racing Pair.

Santa Barbara will have a chance to see two of the cars which figured so prominently in the Santa Monica road race. Harris Hanshue will drive up in the Apperson Jackrabbit this week and will be accompanied by W. P. Fessenden of Riverside, in the Stoddard-Dayton "sixty" which he purchased soon after the race. Fessenden says he has never turned the racer loose, sixty-five miles on the third speed being the best he has gotten out of it. If these two cars should get to racing on the Santa Barbara highway there should be some speedy traveling. Fessenden is contemplating a trip to San Francisco in the Stoddard.

REGATTA AT BALBOA.

Power Launches and Sailing Crafts Are to Contest for Prizes on the Bay This Afternoon.

BALBOA, Aug. 14.—A regatta is to be held on the bay tomorrow afternoon, the feature of which is to be a six-horse-power launch race between the Sea Fox and the Eagle for the Collins Cup. The Sea Fox, of which R. Irving is the owner, has never been beaten since it was launched four years ago, but W. S. Collins, owner of the Eagle, believes his craft can turn the trick.

The yacht Ida H. of Balboa and the Did of Venice, are to meet in a one-mile race. Don Wright, owner of the Ida H., nosed out a victory over the Did last Sunday, but the finish was so close that the loser would not admit that the winner was the faster craft.

A two-paddle canoe race, canoe tilting and swimming and diving events also are to be held.

CLASSIC TENNIS EVENTS.

Arrangements Are Completed for Twenty-second Annual Coast Championship at Del Monte.

The twenty-second annual tournament for the lawn tennis championships of the Pacific States is to be held, under the auspices of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, at Del Monte for ten days, beginning September 6.

The usual events are to be held. The men's doubles will not be played for championship honors, as the title in this class was contested for in a tournament at Long Beach last month, in order that the winners might compete in the preliminary round for the national championship that was held at Onwentsia. McLoughlin and Janes won at Long Beach, and then were victorious in the sectional tournament.

The Del Monte tourney is open to all amateur players, whether or not they are residents of the Pacific States, but the tournament committee, including S. M. Sinsabaugh, C. R. Gardner, A. V. Duncan, E. P. Finnegan, reserves the right to pass upon the eligibility of all entrants. The entries are to close with E. P. Finnegan, Del Monte, September 4.

The present Pacific States champions in the various classes are: Men's singles, Melville H. Long; women's singles, May Sutton; women's doubles, May Sutton and Elizabeth Ryan; mixed doubles, May Sutton and S. M. Sinsabaugh; junior singles, Robert Strachan; junior doubles, B. Batkin and Robert Strachan.

BALLS AND STRIKES.

Tub Hackett, the elephantine catcher who jumped the San Francisco outlaw team to Sacramento and was then reported to have signed with Graham's Coast League Senators, has turned tail again and is still with the Sacramento outlaws and says he will stay until the finish. He would add no luster to the Coast League. He was no wonder when he was in it.

Danny Shay seems to have instilled some new life into the Kansas City club since he joined it several weeks ago. He has lifted Carlisle out of left field and put in Love and this looks as if Carlisle might go.

Manager Henry Berry of the Los Angeles team is inclined to be a trifle sore over the way some of the big league clubs are scouting in the Three-I league for ball players. He thinks that league is his own stamping ground and right now is after a pitcher and an outfielder. In the way of outfielders, it might not be a bad idea to take a chance at Congrove of the Springfield team, who is hitting hard and playing a good right field.

Charley Graham of the Sacramento team now claims to have signed Darringer of the South Michigan league and as Berry and Hogan both deny they have secured him, it may be possible that Graham is the lucky one.

Christie Mathewson, the great New York Giant pitcher, won thirteen straight games before he lost to Pittsburgh in that city July 30. A single, two doubles, a sacrifice and a single in succession in the first inning settled Matty and he quit the game in disgust, with but one out and three runs scored.

In forty-one games Pat Donahue of the Boston Americans hit for .206. When the American League averages were figured up the last time, Easterly was leading Hal Chase five points.

If Cal Ewing has sold Zeider to the White Sox for $5500 and two Class A players, it shows that Rolla is thought to be worth almost as much as Marquard, the $11,000 fizzle that the New York Giants paid some lucky man for. Both Zeider and Beall are peaches and how Comiskey let these two slide and kept some of his present collection, would keep a strong man tired guessing.

Gray, Groom and Johnson have not pitched up to their standard this year and are far down the list in number of games won. It is very difficult however for even a good pitcher to make any kind of a showing with a tail-end team like Washington

Ben Henderson, the former Portland pitcher that left his team to play with the outlaws, now understands what it costs to be independent. Cleveland offered him $7000 for two seasons and $1000 advance money but he turned it down. Later on when he wanted to accept it, the Cleveland team wired that he was not wanted. Such is stubbornness!

It need not surprise any one if Gray and Cravath should be back in the Los Angeles team next year. Neither have done well in the big bush this year and as they were stars in this league it is among the possibilities for them to return. Oakes and Ellis are about the only ones to make good.

STEARNS-LOCO RACE.

to break the hoodoo. Bert believes the Loco could turn the trick.

These three drivers may be pitted against Soules. Orr may start, Free may drive a hundred miles, and Bert Latham may make the grand finish. It is up to Leavitt.

AGENTS TO GENERAL BATTLE OF MOTORS.

Two giant motor cars which rank among the fastest racing machines in the world, will engage in a dual automobile track race today at Ascot Park.

There is little to choose between the two machines. The Stearns has shown itself a trifle faster than the Locomobile in practice but the race may not be to the swift.

The Stearns-Locomobile return match race should be one of the best contests ever pulled off. There is ginger enough in the drivers and speed enough in the cars to produce thrills every minute of the long 200-mile argument which must be fought out between 10 o'clock this morning and 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Starter Mott will send the cars away as close to 10 o'clock as possible. The drivers will toss for position of start and the machines will be worth watching as the drivers jockey after the gun is fired.

Soules wants to lead all the time. It is impossible to predict the kind of race Orr will drive. Soules will try to keep his car in the van, knowing that he has a little more speed to draw on at any time of the race.

IT ALL DEPENDS.

Should Orr decide to make it a plugging race Soules will not let out his car. He will take the position that Latham took in the Stearns-Loco race which Page won, but will not be content to stay a mere one-half mile in the lead. He will want to have enough space between the cars to allow the dust to roll backward. Orr will not be caught napping. He will be careful of the exposed working parts of his car.

This race is to again be generaled by Leavitt. The big man likes to win too well to trust his car to any driver. By a series of signals known only to Orr and himself the big man will guide his machine, making it go either fast or slow as the need may require.

Should the fortunes of war favor Leavitt he will allow his driver to keep plugging along, reeling off miles in from 1m. 4s. to 1m. 6s. This should be fast enough to win. The race will probably be won in about six hours, an average of fifty miles an hour for the entire contest. This will be fast time for so long a race.

SLAUGHTER'S EYE OPEN.

Coney C. Slaughter has also reserved the right to guide his car in the race. When Soules receives the prearranged signal he will cut down his throttle or speed ahead. He must drive as he is told. His judgment must be the judgment of the owner. No matter how hard it may be to choke down the flying Stearns he must obey Slaughter, as win or lose he will receive the $500 which the Stearns owner has promised to pay.

The Loco looks fit for a thousand mile grind. The car was working perfectly yesterday. There was not a falter in the rhythm of the four-cylinder motor. The car is fast and seems sure.

For the second time the Stearns was disassembled Thursday. Every working part was examined, even to the cylinder rings, valves, and connecting rods. The gruelling tests on the track had not loosened a part.

Ascot Park track was never rougher. The practice stunts of the week have cut the surface into deep ruts which will chop down the time of the flyers. The curves are particularly bad. These were given attention yesterday but it is impossible to make them what they should be. Ascot Park will never be a fast automobile race course until it is resurfaced.

NOT JUST THE THING.

This track, which served so well for horses, is not the thing for automobiles. The dust cannot be laid. The fine clay lends itself to the chopping-block process of the whirling wheels and is churned into the smallest particles.

Clouds of dust blow over the grandstand. The track will be soaked this morning before the race and this, it is hoped, will serve to lay the dust for today's race. Until the surface is cemented Ascot Park will never see an automobile track record broken, auto men say.

Just what the rough track will do to the racing cars is hard to surmise. Both may be out of the running before 100 miles is covered. There is every reason to believe, however, that both machines will be able to fight out the contest to a bitter finish.

There will be no preliminaries and no aftermath. The public will come to see the two fast cars try conclusions. The thousands will have eyes only for the Locomobile and the Stearns. There will be enough to see in the five or six hours of races and the public will be willing to go home at the end of the long tussle.

HUNTING.

KILLING BUCKS BY WHOLESALE.

Party Bags Four in Frazer Mountain Trip.

Forest Ranger Kills Two in One Afternoon.

Drops Second Deer With the Last Shot He Had.

Four big bucks, each weighing close to 150 pounds, were bagged by a party including S. S. Skidmore, T. W. Skidmore, J. B. Gibson and George Elliott of Downey, during a ten days' outing in the Frazer Mountains. They returned from the trip early last week.

The party traveled in a wagon and n the return trip the "schooner" was ecorated with the antlers and hides f the game that had been shot, and t looked like a typical outfit of the ays of '49.

Leaving the regular road at Gorman tation, the party struck into the mountains in the neighborhood of epec. The deer were shot not far rom the place where they camped.

Two deer were shot by Bert Stephnsen, a forest ranger, while patrolling is division between Lucas and Verugo cañons, near San Juan Capistrano, early last week. While riding long the top of a ridge Stephenson potted the animals in the cañon bew him and leaving his horse on the rail he started to crawl toward them hrough the brush.

Stephenson only had seven cartidges. When he got within good hooting distance he opened up. Three f six shots hit one of the animals, hich was a spike. The other, a hree-pointer, ran over the point of a ill. The spike, though wounded, also tarted to run away, but the ranger's og seized it by the nose and held it ntil Stephenson came up and cut its hroat.

The three-pointer swung around the ill and came straight toward Stephenon. The ranger fired his last shot nd the bullet bored the deer through he shoulders, killing it instantly.

Local hunters had a bad week. Although many nimrods took to the ills, they returned empty-handed. everal of them said they saw does, ut that all the bucks apparently had een killed. The old-timers assert hat the game has been scared out of he easily accessible places and that unters have little chance of having ny luck during the remainder of this eason unless they take to the real all and uncut."

Adolph Mass and Max Frese passed he early part of the week on a ranch the Santa Monica Mountains, and y that, while they saw several does nd plenty of deer signs, they did not ven get a glimpse of a buck.

Lou Guernsey and "Dutch" Clockey ft last night for the Canejo, where ey said they had friends who had romised to steer them within shootg distance of a deer and also into a od flight of doves.

E. Skelton is going up the Kern iver today after deer. He also excts to fish for trout. Bernal Dyas ft last night for Matilija Springs, here he says the trout fishing is betr than it has been for several weeks.

Adolph Schultz returned Friday om a fishing trip to Lake Tahoe d reported limit catches of trout.

A sixteen-inch rainbow trout, weighg a pound and three-quarters, was ught by Raymond Guthrie, a 12-ear-old boy of this city, in the West ork of the San Gabriel, a quarter of mile below Camp Rincon, Friday fternoon. It was the first trout ever ught by the youngster, and the oldmers who were fishing close by and ere having poor luck could hardly elieve their eyes when the tyro pulled e big fellow up on the bank.

The boy fished with a spinner. He eliecea "there is nothing to it," and romises to develop into one of the ost ardent anglers in the South.

PARENTAL BARS DOWN.

George Baer, the Occidental sprinter and basketball player, is to try for the quarterback position on the football team, this fall. He is practically sure of making place, as he showed great possibilities on the second team, last year. He probably would have made the first team if his parents had not objected to his playing in the intercollegiate games.

ON DECK.

SLUGGERS ON FIGHT CARD.

Thirty-two Rounds of Hot Stuff Lined Up.

Burns to Have First Chance at Real Fighter.

Webster-Kutchos Bout Looks Good to Bugs.

Whatever some carping critics may think of the next card that is offered by the Pacific Athletic Club on August 24, all must agree that it certainly promises some slugging that should be remembered by the fight bugs for some months. The four bouts have been arranged and they are for pugs that heretofore have given a good account of themselves in every fight and the indications are that they will furnish the same kind of contests this time.

The programme is to be as follows:

Jim Barry and Jack Burns, about 195 pounds, ten rounds.

Danny Webster and Mike Kutchos, 116, at 3 o'clock, ten rounds.

Gene Sullivan and Billy Walsh, 135 at 3 o'clock, six rounds.

Boston Joe Kelly and Jimmy Brady, catchweights, six rounds.

Jack Burns and Jim Barry are 195-pound heavyweights who are fairly well-known in this city, particularly Barry, who has fought both Kaufman and Langford here. While he was beaten by both men, there was no one to find fault with his work as an aggressive, energetic pug with a hard wallop and more or less science and one that is not afraid of the big ones.

On the other hand, Burns is practically a new fighter, having fought here but once and that time with the big negro, Cameron, whom he beat. Burns is believed to be one of the youngest fighters in the business that has any claims to class, for he has been a professional only one year. During that time he has beaten many men, two of his latest victories being over Terry Mustain and Jim Hornbuckle at an oil town in the San Joaquin Valley. He is said to be a man that does not indulge in excesses of any kind, and being blessed with a wonderful physical development, he may become a good fighter. He has a very classy try-out horse in Barry, who has met some of the best men in the country, and if he can beat Barry decisively, there may be a future before him.

The semi-final of the card will be ten rounds between Webster and Kutchos and this promises to be exciting, for the boys are to fight for a side bet and a winner-take-all purse, according to the story. Danny is the best of his weight in this end of the State, while Kutchos has always given a good account of himself. The odds favor Webster, but as prize fights are never over until the final blow, it is hard guessing who will win.

The other preliminary will be between Walsh and Gene Sullivan and this should be a hummer, for Sullivan had the better of things in their last fight until the last round, when he was practically knocked out and would have been, had not the final bell saved him. He wanted another chance to show what he could do and will have it next week.

Jimmy Brady, the colored lightweight of San Diego, and Boston Joe Kelley were matched yesterday afternoon to fight six rounds in the curtain-raiser. Kelley recently fought a ten-round draw with Muggsy School, who knocked out Charlie Dalton in five rounds at Denver. Brady has been hunting a fight for several weeks. He made a good record in San Diego. The boys are to fight at catchweights, which means that they will weigh about 137 pounds.

Jack Burns yesterday started in earnest to get ready for his battle with Barry. He went on the road early in the morning and did not return to the training quarters until noon. In the afternoon, he puched the bag, shadowboxed and fought with the Turk for three rounds and with Jack Guyer for two rounds. Burns is a hard worker and has a heavy punch in either hand. Jim Tremble is to be added to Burns's corps of assistants, today, and is to box several rounds with the Salinas giant.

Jim Barry worked out at Venice. He is to box five rounds with "King" Hogan this afternoon and has aranged some special stunts.

NEEDS MORE TIME.

KETCHEL IS RECREANT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14.—Stanley Ketchel, who has been matched for a ten-round fight with Sam Langford in New York September 3, is in the wilds of Mendocino county, and is expected to return here by steamer from Port Arena.

The next vessel from that place will not reach here until next Monday. Allowing him a very brief rest, he could hardly get to New York before August 22, which would give him only twelve days for training.

This, local sports declare, is not sufficient time in which to prepare for an encounter with such a man as Langford.

CHAMPION WELTER.

LEWIS SEEMS TO BE GOOD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Willie Lewis's defeat of Sailor Burke in the sixth round of what was to have been a ten-round boxing contest places him in the role of a contender for the welterweight championship.

Lewis's recent trip abroad, where he whipped all the fighters pitted against him in Paris, seems to have done him good, as the fight last night showed he had lost much of his old wildness and had science. His condition also has greatly improved and his friends believe he will have a good show to defeat even Ketchel. Figuring that he can whip Papke, his backers already are mentioning Ketchel as his next opponent.

Griffin Sails Away.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Charles Griffin, the Australian lightweight fighter, sailed today on the steamer St. Paul for Southampton. Griffin said he would challenge the winner of the Driscoll-Moran match, which is scheduled for September 13, at the National Sporting Club, in London, but that he would meet any one up to 142 pounds. He intends to return here in the fall and engage in several fights.

WOMEN TO WRESTLE.

Lulu Olson, who claims to be the champion woman wrestler of the world, is to meet Jennie McGratch of this city on the mat at Chutes Park this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The bout will be the first of its kind ever held here.

Miss Olson says she has engaged in 116 contests and has only been defeated once. The contestants are to make 145 pounds at the ringside.

May McFay and Anna Fansay, local women, are to wrestle at 120 pounds as the curtain raiser. Tony Munkers and Fred Ryan are scheduled for a fifteen-minute exhibition bout.

a square footing. Other auto men and the public in general should refrain from taking snap judgment on anything that may come up today. It is not only unkind, but unjust and unsportsmanlike. On the other hand, should there be cause for charges, they should be given publicity in as great measure as the race itself. This principle applies in the abstract to this race and to any others. The horse-racing game has met its doom through crooked dealing; the auto races should be held above reproach to avoid a similar fate.

Stone Pile for Jim Barry.

Jim Barry has proved himself an undesirable citizen for Los Angeles and vicinity and he should be driven out of town, not only for the maintenance of law and order but because such men injure the boxing game more than all the knockouts recorded. Barry has caused some sort of trouble every time he has appeared here, but it was placed to his eccentricity. The last fracas in which he whalloped Phil Brock over the head with a broomstick, jabbed the broken end into the side of Tom McGinty and fired a revolver recklessly, should be sufficient to cause real concern over his actions and to have him barred from the city and ring here. There are many good citizens among boxers, notwithstanding popular disbelief. It has become a business with these men and in private life their conduct is irreproachable. They should not be made to suffer because of a rough-neck of the Barry type. If Barry is suffering from temporary insanity on such occasions, he is to be pitied; yet he is none the less dangerous and undesirable.

Introduction of Rugby.

The determination of the Los Angeles High School authorities to introduce Rugby football this year meets with much opposition from the students, as it did in the northern universities. It was easier to foist the game on Polytechnic High School as that institution was newly organized and had no traditions to maintain. With Los Angeles High it is different. For several years the football team has been at the head of the southern interscholastic schools and in one season defeated all the intercollegiate representatives, and last year was beaten by but one. It will be pretty hard to wipe out all these memories and begin anew—not only to establish a record, but to learn the game and develop the fine points of enthusiasm. It takes four years to awaken undivided interest in a school, for those who have played the American game never go back on their first love, and the alumni up to this time will never become reconciled to the change. This has been so at California and Stanford.

Who Is Tennis Champion?

W. Mace is accredited with being the tennis champion of Southern California. While he plays a grand game, it is hard to see how he comes by the title undisputably, for in the same Long Beach tournament, in which he became champion, Ward Dawson decisively defeated him in the junior singles. In the senior events Dawson was eliminated in the preliminaries, while Mace had rather easy sailing, as he met Ralph Noble, never given credit for being runner-up, when the latter reached the finals through default of Freeman, who was injured. However, there is some satisfaction in heralding a new champion, as the old fellows have had the title sewed up for some time.

Why Is an Amateur?

If Sam Coulter boxes before the Los Angeles Athletic Club Thursday night the organization may have to answer to a charge of professionalism to the A.A.U. Commission, the Holborow case being cited as a precedent. In the latter instance, Holborow was "expelled" because he had written a letter to persons employing professional life guards, asking for a position. Later it was shown that he wrote the letter to obtain information for a friend and not to secure a position, and he was reinstated. Coulter has been dickering with Manager McCarey of the Pacific Athletic Club to fight professionally. The A.A.U. may consider the case similarly.

RETURNS FROM ANTIPODES.

Head Coach Schaeffer of California Says Coast Players Know Little About Rugby.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Aug. 14.—"More sensational and on the whole as good a game as the old one," is the opinion of Rugby held by Head Coach Jimmy Schaeffer since returning from his recent Australian trip. Schaeffer passed seven weeks in Australia and ten days in New Zealand studying the English game this summer and he has come back full of enthusiasm.

He says that the first thing he learned was that Californians didn't know anything of particular value about the game as it was played in the Antipodes but that he feels he acquired sufficient knowledge on his trip so that the Blue and Gold 'varsity this fall will play far better Rugby football than ever before.

The coach did practically nothing but study, talk and play Rugby football. He reached Australia during the off season and did not get to see many of the famous championship series but he saw more games where Rugby could be studied to a greater advantage than in the championship series. He was allowed all sideline privileges and either participated or officiated in a large number of the matches.

As his assistant this year Schaeffer has secured William J. Howe, "Mother" Howe of Sydney, secretary of the Metropolitan Rugby Union and lock man in the scrum of the All-Australias for several seasons. Howe has the reputation of being one of the best Rugby men in the south, both in theoretical knowledge and playing ability. He will reach Berkeley, August 28.

Schaeffer will have to find more men for places on the 'varsity than was at first anticipated for the opening of college has revealed the absence of several veterans who were counted upon to return. Freeman, who has played three years, will not come back and will leave a big hole in the rear rank, while Sorenson, who played the other rear rank last year, graduated. Budelman and Barnicott, lock and side rank, respectively, last year, also graduated, making at least four new men to find for the scrum. Webster will not be back at three-quarters nor Butler at full.

Capt. Cerf and Elliott will return for five-eighths while Watts, Harris and Johns will again be on the three-quarter line. Dwiggins will be back for half, Swartz for wing forward and Markwart, Phleger, Pauly in the scrum.

NIPPONESE ATHLETICS.

Novel Contests Are to Be Held at Santa Monica Canyon Today at Japanese Picnic.

The employés of one of the local Japanese stores are to make merry at Santa Monica cañon today and a programme of sports, peculiar to the Nipponese, has been arranged as the feature of the outing. A chidori race (whatever that is) in which about sixty persons are to participate heads the list, and head-piece races, lame races, blind and dumb races and fifty-seven other varieties seldom heard of on this side of the pond, are to be held.

The boys are to engage in a dressing race, in which the scratch man undoubtedly will attract the most attention. Wrestling matches and a tug of war, Japanese style, promise good sport.

It is estimated that about 37,000 persons have taken out driving licenses in Massachusetts.

Sharks broke several lines at Redondo and almost put the sport "on the bum" early in the week. One angler lost six lines Sunday, and then bave up in despair. Good results were obtained by trolling outside.

Dr. H. C. Royer fishing with artificial bait which he invented, and T. M. Williams, caught thirty bass outside the breakwater at San Pedro Sunday. Trolling in the outer waters invariably brings good results.

H. J. Frost and E. T. Hart of New York fished at Catalina early in the week, and got a couple of large yellowtail and several big bass.

P. E. Peterson and A. Edison are going to Catalina the latter part of this week in quest of the big fellows.

SWIMMERS IN DEMAND.

Local Association at Request of Portola Festival Management Is to Send Four Men to San Francisco.

The Southern California Swimming Association has accepted the invitation of the management of the Portola Festival, which is to be held in San Francisco in October, to send four men to compete in the aquatic tournament that is to be included in the athletic programme, and Les Henry, secretary of the local organization, intends to hold a try-out early next month, in which all Southern California amateur swimmers will be given a chance to win the trip north.

Frank Holborow and Marcus Lee, who between them hold four Coast championships, will not have to enter the try-outs in order to swim at San Francisco, as the association has decided that they deserve places on the team. For the other two places the competition promises to be close. Abegg, Taylor, Watkyns, O'Malley and Crary are among the men who are desirous of accompanying Lee and Holborow and they intend to train hard for the try-outs.

The expenses of the four men are to be defrayed by the Portola management and they only will be required to participate in one tournament.

Holborow and Lee are to leave here for Seattle tomorrow, where they are to contest in the national amateur championships at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, August 24. Holborow is to race in the sprinting events and Lee has entered the 440-yard and 880-yard races. Although they will be pitted against some of the best water dogs in the country, their chances for success are considered good.

Holborow has decisively beaten all-comers in the 50 and 100-yard events in several tournaments during the last eighteen months, and Lee, while not having been in the game long, created a sensation by winning the 220 and 880-yard events in the Coast championships in the fastest time that has been made for several years.

There are several cars built in this country, the makers of which advocate the use of nothing but castor oil for the cylinders, although other oil may be used elsewhere on the machine.

BEAR PARTICULARLY IN MIND

That the above record is figured impartially and based on strictly reliable observations. (Detailed figures sent on request.)

Many conflicting claims as to tire performances in the Glidden Tour will be made. Read them all, put confidence where you will, but the above is the record reduced to dollars and cents. Representations will come to you that such and such number of cars went through on original casings. So did the cars on Diamond—every one of them—but not on all four original casings, in every instance.

AND NOTE THIS

No Diamond casings or tubes suffering injury were repaired en route and returned to cars to permit of advertising a finish on original casings or tires. It is known this was done in various instances.

REMEMBER

No penalties were or could be imposed for tire trouble. Tires could not contribute to or detract from any car's chance of winning the Glidden or any other trophy.

Any contestant was at perfect liberty to change tires at any time without penalty.

A perfect or imperfect score bore no relation to tires, one way or another.

The only measure of comparative tire efficiency available in the whole tour is that of cost for the mileage delivered. But what measure is better suited to determine relative tire values?

AND REMEMBER

That scores of other public events—and thousands upon thousands of individual tests have confirmed the annual Glidden Tour verdict—Diamond Tires are the best and most economical.

Take the 1000-mile tire test made by the Chicago Motor Club, a conspicuous Diamond victory—take the six months Upkeep Contest of a well-known automobile manufacturing concern—also won on Diamond Tires—take endurance runs, sealed Bonnet contests—take any test you will—IN POINT OF DURABILITY DIAMOND TIRES HAVE NEVER SUFFERED A DEFEAT.

REMEMBER ALSO

That although the course of this year's tour was nearly 1000 miles greater than in 1908, and the roads worse, Diamond Tires made the same good showing they made last year, and, conditions considered, a still lower mileage cost.

Announcement

As a result of our dropping the agency for the White cars there has been a great deal of anxiety expressed among White owners as to where they can go for repairs on their cars and where they can secure spare parts for same.

In order that they need have no further anxiety on that score we desire to announce that until such time as the White Company cares to provide for the needs of the purchasers of their cars, we will continue to carry a stock of White parts and to do repair work on White cars, providing, of course, that the White Company will sell the parts to us. This we will do solely for the accommodation of those who have favored us with their patronage. We have no intention of deserting our patrons, even though we have ceased to represent the White Company.

As to our reasons for giving up the White agency, regarding which there are a great many rumors afloat, we wish to put ourselves on record by saying that the action was taken entirely of our own free will, and regardless of the fact that unusual inducements were made us to handle the White line for 1910.

Next week we will have an announcement to make regarding a new line of cars for 1910, which we promise will be full of interest to the entire motoring public.

TOZER AGAIN BEATS SEALS.

Holds Them to Five Singles and Scatters These.

Dillon Sprains Ankle and Daley Is Bounced.

Largest Week Day Crowd Sees Exciting Contest.

Los Angeles, 2; San Francisco, 1.

Tozer tore another hole in the sealskin this afternoon before the largest Saturday crowd that ever saw a ball game in Los Angeles, for he held the enemy to five swats, and if Daley had not booted a hit to center field in the second round, it might have been a shut-out for the leaders. On the dope the locals would have won in the end, for they managed to earn a run in the eighth inning.

The fans had plenty to look at, for the game was close and exciting from the start, there being just enough errors to keep every one guessing. While at bat in the fifth inning McGreevy called a strike on Daley that did not suit and when Daley stated that he ould hit Mac over the head some day ith the bat, Mac threw him out of he game.

In the second inning for the Seals, ith Bodie on first from a hit, Orendorff tried to catch him off the bag. n attempting to make the catch Dillon fell over Bodie. Players rushed to Dillon and found that his right ankle ad been sprained and that he had een lightly spiked. He will be out f the game for several weeks.

Bodie finally got to second on Melhoir's pass, to third on Berry's hit center and scored the only Seal run hen Daley juggled the ball.

In the fifth for the locals Orendorff ingled and advanced on Tozer's sacrifice. While at bat with one strike n him, Daley was thrown out and odwin took his place. This bird apped a sacrifice bunt toward third hat Zeider threw wildly to first, alowing Orendorff to score.

Ross opened the eighth with a swat o right, advanced on Wheeler's sacrifice and easily scored on Beall's doule to the score board, to the howling elight of the big crowd.

Although there were six errors in he game there were enough pretty lays to make up for these, the feaure being three fast double plays by Delmas, Howard and Wheeler. Zeier made one beautiful running foul atch to the bleacher fence back of hird base, Mohler and Howard rabbed everything and Delmas was here as usual with his customary tunts.

Both Tozer and Griffin heaved fine all, but Tozer had it on the Seals, as e always has, only three of them eaching third base after the second nning. He fanned one man, but with ew exceptions he made them hit the all where some one was. Griffin did airly well until the eighth inning hen he was soaked hard.

It was easy to play ball under such onditions, for the day was a pleasant ne and the big crowd of fans aplauded every play. Almost every seat n the grand stand and both bleachers as filled and it being "kids' day" the eft field bleacher was packed with owling boys. Each team had a hance to win at any stage of the proeedings and the locals finally did beause they connected with Griffin in he eighth.

EVANS WINS CUP.

Western Golf Champion Beats the Field in Annual Open Tournament at Onwentsia Club.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the western champion, won the Mayflower Cup, the principal trophy of the annual open golf tournament of the Onwentsia Country Club, by defeating Gordon Copeland of Skokie, by 7 up and 6 to play, in the final round today.

Evans also tied with H. Chandler Egan of Exmoor for the Onwentsia trophy, with 153 for 36 holes medal play, but Egan won on the nine-hole play-off with 35 to 36.

Both Egan and Evans had the same card, 75-78—153, but the veteran proved too much for his opponent in the play-off.

Ralph Hoagland of Riverside won the Lake Forest Cup, for 36 holes medal play, for men over 30 years of age. His score was 78-80—158.

GREAT RECORD.

BAKERSFIELD BALL TEAM.

The record for straight baseball victories in the San Joaquin Valley is held by the Bakersfield semi-professional team, which has won twenty-three games this season. It has played almost every team between Sacramento and Tehachepi.

Last Sunday Bakersfield defeated Tehachepi, 15 to 0. Several members of the team promise to develop into big league material.

CINCINNATI (O.) Aug. 14.—Harry Manss, wealthy manufacturer and member of the city Board of Public Service, is said to be negotiating for the interest in the Philadelphia National League Club held by the late President Israel Durham. The outlook is that he soon will complete the deal. When the Philadelphia club was in Cincinnati a few days ago Manss and Secretary Shevline had several long talks about the matter. Since then Manss has been in communication with the Philadelphia club officials.

TURN OF TIDE.

HITT BLANKS WEBFOOTERS.

BERNARD SCORES ALL THE RUNS WITH FOUR-SACKER.

Hooligans Blanked Until Eighth Inning When They Drive Garrett to the Bench—Beavers Only Get Two Bingles Off Vernon Pitcher, Who Heaves in Rare Form.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Roy Hitt was on the slab for Vernon today and the big fellow was in rare form and won his game easily, 2 to 0.

Hitt had the Portland batters swinging their heads off and threw curves which broke fully a foot just when the Beaver batsmen had it all planned to send out a hit. Two bingles were all that Portland could make off his delivery, one a scratch in the seventh by Graney and the other a clean drive by Armbruster in the eighth.

Garrett heaved for the Beavers and he was hit freely throughout, but managed to keep the Vernonites runless until the eighth, when two runs came in on Bernard's home run drive through the fence. Four hits were made in that inning and when Jess was jerked out and Guyn sent in. Guyn had a bad inning in the ninth and had the bases full, but ended the agony by fanning Truck Eagan before a man had crossed the pan.

Vernon had the best of the going all the way through. The atmosphere was squally for Garrett in the second and again in the fourth, but until the eighth there was nothing doing.

In the fourth Eagan hit, went to second on Coy's hit and to third on an infield out. His slow base running there prevented a score.

Brashear was put out of the game by Umpire Toman and was also ordered off the grounds, which order he refused to obey and the park policeman had to be called.

The Portlands played ragged ball all through the game. Garrett fielded his position poorly and allowed at least two men to reach first by failing to cover the bag. The infield seemed to lack pepper, but with all the poor play it was clean hitting in the eighth by Vernon which cost the game. Then with one down Haley singled, stole second and scored on Bernard's home run along the first base line. The ball went through the fence, but Haley would have scored anyway, as he had a big lead. After that Eagan and Coy both singled and it began to look like a slaughter when Olson speared a hard drive by Mott and retired the side.

The Beavers finished the game with but three men left on bases all through. It was one, two, three for the first five innings, but in the sixth Armbruster drew a pass and was sacrificed to second, where he died. In the seventh Graney singled, stole second and died there, while Armbruster's single in the eighth failed to place him any further than the initial sack.

vast difference between a strike and a muley cow, Hogan did. Some fellow once said that Delmas ate be-deviled crab every day and in about two years would be able to cut paper with his fingers like a scissors, but this same fellow probably had a bet down that a certain player would reach first base if he happened to hit a grounder to Delmas. Fat chance such would have of getting there!

Even if Delmas is what some people call a crab because he kicks at what ball players and umpires do, he has not been at it only eight years. He was born in San Francisco twenty-five years ago and after the usual sand-lot experience of all ball men in that town, joined the San Francisco team under Henry Harris eight years ago. He played for Harris two years and then was a year each in Salt Lake, Vancouver and Fresno and came to Los Angeles three years ago when the Fresno team was dropped out of the Coast League.

When at the tender age of eighteen years and while in Salt Lake, Delmas pitched one game because he says Tozer would not, Tozer being on the team at that time. He cut out the flinging however because he wanted to stay in baseball and since then has been almost continually at shortstop and second base. He is the busiest man in the Los Angeles team and when it comes to throwing a ball a hundred yards, he can beat a dove coming back at sundown to roost, and that's going some.

Dillion does not mind the crabbing because Del could not play ball if he could not pan some one. Cap forgets it when he sees a batsman hit a ground to short and you would too if you sat in the grandstand all season and saw him wing 'em over. The fellow who beats the throw to first thinks he has cheated some one.

CAMP PERRY RANGE OPEN.

Rich Prizes Are Offered to Soldiers and Marines.

National Contests to Be Held in Marksmanship.

Herrick Cup for Teams Is the Top Trophy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CAMP PERRY RANGE (O.) Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Everything points to a most successful week for the sixth annual tournament of the Ohio State Rifle Association. More riflemen are here than were in attendance on these matches last year or the year before, attracted by the unusually rich prizes and the variety of the matches.

During the week the officers of the range have been busy getting up tents and otherwise completing the arrangements to take care of the teams and individuals who will occupy the range for the next two weeks or longer.

The Ohio National Guard matches, which closed Friday, were the most successful in the history of that organization, and the places vacated by the State Guardsmen are being taken by those from all parts of the United States.

Tomorrow the Catrow cup will be contested for, and the large list of entries tonight gives promise of exciting sport. The conditions make it a rival of the Leach cup, being seven shots at 800, 900 and 1000 yards. Col. H. G. Catrow of the O.N.G. has given a $500 cup for this match, and there and twelve cash prizes, with a gold medal to the winner, who also keeps the cup for one year.

Tomorrow afternoon the "reëntry team skirmish match" is scheduled. This is unique, from the fact that teams can reënter, and it is open practically to everybody desiring to compete, except that teams in the national match are not eligible for prizes except those which correspond to their standing last year. As the number of teams an organization may enter is unlimited, as is the number of runs to be made, a wildly exciting contest is expected.

NEW "WIMBLEDON."

On Tuesday the adjutant-general's cup match will be shot, with twenty trials at 1000 yards. This is a new match, corresponding to the time-honored "Wimbledon cup" match, and carries with it a $500 cup, a gold medal and twelve cash prizes. In the afternoon is a skirmish match and an individual tyro match.

The prize for this match is $250, to which the Ohio State Rifle Association has added $150, the money being divided into forty-three prizes. The distance is 800 yards, and the match is open to any one who has never won a first, second or third prize in an N. R. A. match, the national individual match, or who has not shot on one of the first six teams in a national match.

The Herrick trophy match on Wednesday should bring out a large number of teams. This is one of the richest matches in the country, and carries with it the Herrick trophy, valued at thousands of dollars, and presented by former Gov. Myron T. Herrick of Ohio. It is open to teams of eight, and there will be fifteen shots per man at 800, 900 and 1000 yards.

The winning team will hold the trophy for a year, and will receive $200 in cash, and individual medals. It is strictly a military match. On Thursday the Governor's match will be shot. This match is designed to correspond to the President's match, which is shot under the auspices of the National Rifle Association, and includes a skirmish run, 200 yards slow fire, 600 yards slow fire, 200 yards rapid fire, 800 yards and 1000 yards. For this match there are eighteen prizes for aggregates, and additional prizes for the skirmish run, rapid fire, slow fire and long range fire.

Other matches during the week are: All comers off-hand, all comers 600 yards, Buckeye 1000 yards, individual rapid fire, all comers mid range, 500 yards; individual skirmish and medal and aggregate matches, in addition to a number of revolver matches.

SHOOT POSTPONED.

Inter-City Rifle Contest That Was to Have Been Held Today Moved Forward One Week.

The telegraph shooting match that was to have been held today among the Spokane, Tacoma, North Yakima and Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver clubs has been postponed until next Sunday as the North Yakima team was unable to get into shape to shoot today. It is probable that Seattle also will participate in the match.

The North Yakima Club includes the crack shots of the State of Washington and every man on the team is said to have shot at Sea Girt or Camp Perry with the Washington State rifle team at some time or other.

The local men are to shoot at the Glendale range today, and will devote part of the time to running the skirmish, the remainder of the time being devoted to rapid and slow fire.

The skirmish ranges were chained off Wednesday, and the stakes set for the different ranges. The 600-yard firing point has been put in shape, and this range will be used hereafter in addition to the 200, 300, 500 and revolver range.

Following the match with the northern clubs, the local team is to meet the Bisbee Rifles. The club also will have a team in the newly formed National Revolver League, which is being organized by the United States Revolver Association.

BUTTON CONTEST.

RIFLES TO SHOOT NEXT SUNDAY.

The Southern California Rifles expect to hold their annual marksmen's button shoot at Schuetzen Park and on the Santa Ana range next Sunday.

The competitions are to be held on the 200, 300 and 500-yard ranges, and the men making 50 per cent. or better of the possible scores will be given buttons.

JOHNSON BEATS LARNED.

SOUTHAMPTON (N. Y.) Aug. 14.—Wallace F. Johnson, Pennsylvania State champion, won the singles cup in the tennis tournament on the courts of the Meadow Club here today, defeating E. P. Larned, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, 6-0.

Schorr Re-enters Game.

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) Aug. 14.—Brewer John Schorr is again to enter the racing game upon a large scale, giving up his interest in his Memphis brewery, according to a report published in a Memphis paper. Recently Mr. Schorr has been purchasing a number of young horses and his colors, the famous orange and black, have been seen occasionally this year on northern tracks. One of his youngsters, Penn, broke a record last week.

SAN FRANCISCO WINS.

KNOX SHOWS CLASS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Aug. 14.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Athletes of San Francisco took the major part of the honors in the Midsummer track and field contests held here today. With about two miles to spare, Johnson of the Swedish American Club, trotted across the line in the special eighteen-mile Marathon in the excellent time of 2h. 4m. 30s. His nearest opponent was Wilder of Palo Alto, who was forced to fight off an attack of cramps during the long route, and whose gameness only prevented him from dropping out.

Points were not counted, but if they had been an object, Knox, the only Olympic Club entry, would have won the meet for the Winged O. This versatile athlete took five first places handily and probably would have captured more if he had had time to enter more events.

The feature race of the day was the 440-yard dash, in which Elliott, the well known Barbarian athlete, defeated Morris of Stanford in a fast finish. The time was 52 2-5s.

Rogers, a young High School lad, made a very creditable showing by running second to Knox in both of the dashes.

The winners follow:

The 100-yard dash—Knox, (O); time, 10 1-5s.

The 220-yard dash—Knox, (O); time, 23s.

The 440-yard dash—Elliott, (B); time, 52 2-5s.

Mile run—Hemphill, (S); time, 4m. 51 3-100s.

Hammer Throw (12 pounds)—Olson Seffer, (P.A.); distance, 104ft.

Shot put (12 pounds)—Knox, (O); distance, 51ft. 7½in.

Pole vault—Knox, (O); height, 10ft.

High jump—Risling, (P.A.); height, 5ft. 5in.

Broad jump—Knox, (O); distance, 21ft. 4½in.

Marathon race (18 miles)—Johnson, (S.A.C.); time, 2h. 4m. 30s.

The Perfect Automobile

This splendid car, with its improved cooling system, is easily the sensation of the 1910 season. There is nothing to compete with it. "Remember, it's air-cooled," and the fan has been dispensed with, making Franklin more than ever the lightest and strongest car in its class.

Franklin also carries the largest tires of any car made this season. Oversize tires and a light-weight car mean minimum tire bills and the maximum of comfort.

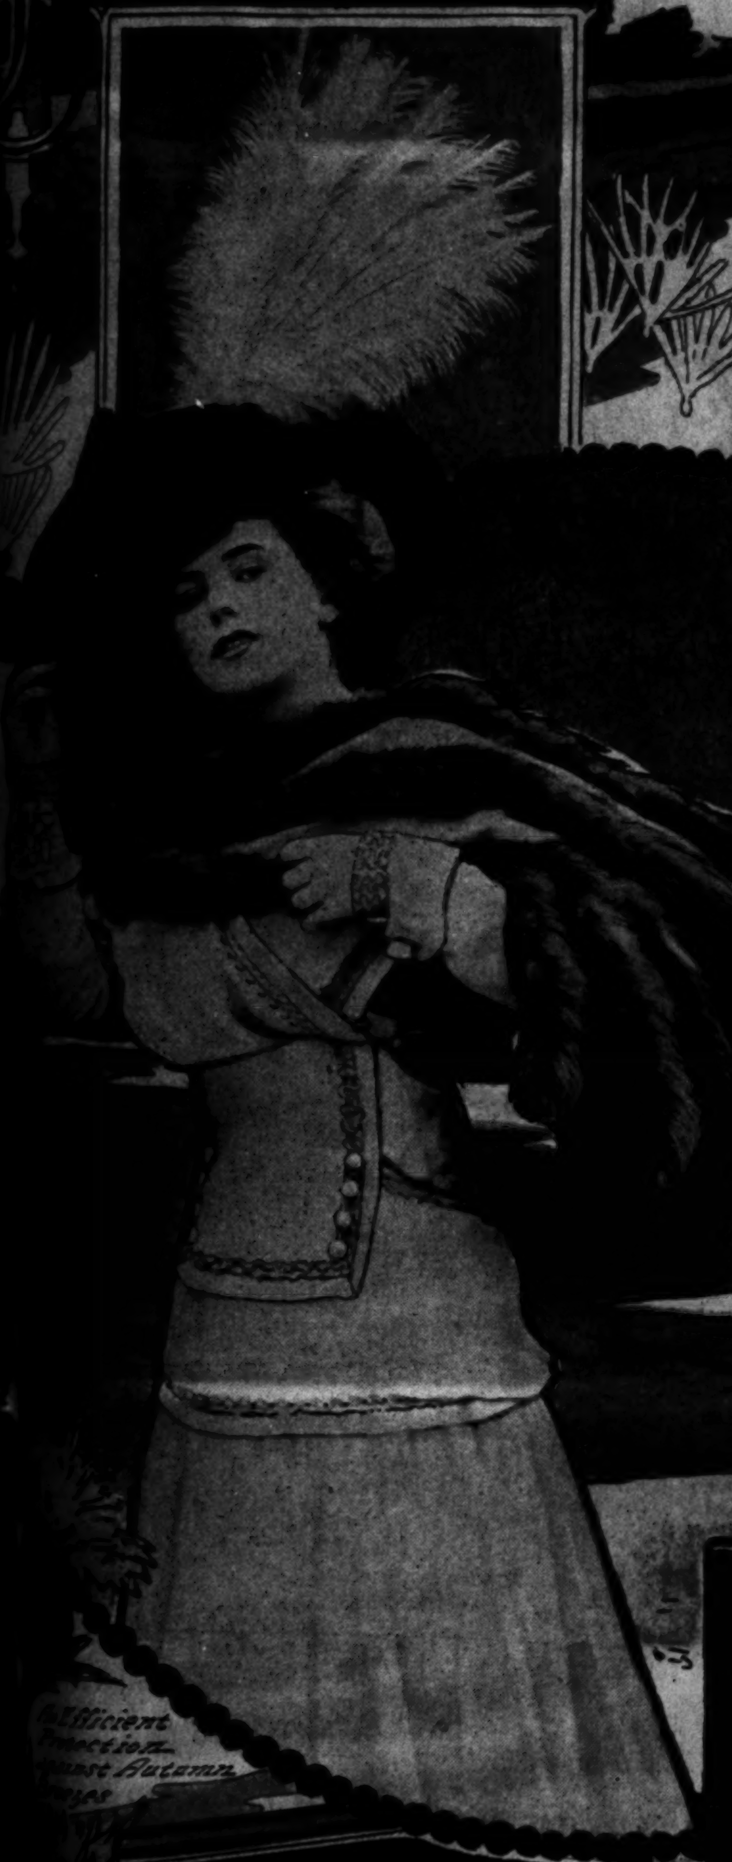
The Summer Substitutes for Furs



Efficient Protection Against Autumn Breezes

A Short Scarf of White Marabou.

Almost as Warm as Fox

Marabou and Ribbon to Match the Dress

Boa of White Ostrich Tips.

Of Feathers that Look Like Fur.

A Stole of Downy Feathers.

DURING the warmest days of the year most people are only too glad not to even think of winter clothes, but as September approaches and the leaves turn, fickle woman seizes with delight her new opportunity to invest in the novelties laid out to snare her.

Among these triumphs of the maker's art we find lovely soft feathers made up as substitutes for furs—and these airy affairs are really a protection, too. They look as light as thistledown, yet, in spite of that, they may be worn in quite severe weather. The very warmest of these summer or autumn furs are made of marabou, or, rather, they are made of the downy feathers taken from the wings of that African stork. Even the most devoted bird lovers need feel no qualms in wearing these warm ruffs, for the feathers may be taken from the bird with no more pain than the ostrich suffers when his glorious plumes are plucked.

Sometimes the feathers are brown and sometimes white. Indeed, a combination of the two is not rare. This is admirably shown in the short scarf of white marabou, for here the ends of the feathers shade toward a golden brown.

A stole of downy marabou is all of dark brown. This is formed by three long ropes of soft feathers, caught together at intervals with brown silk thread. The whole is so light that no stronger fastening is necessary. Quite on the same order is the white stole, and it is as warm as fox. If fashion did not decree that marabou must not be worn in too frosty weather, it might well replace the usual pelts. Indeed, these feathers so much resemble fur that the short shoulder piece might easily be mistaken for it. This one is rounded at the ends and finished with long silk tassels, while its lining of satin gives it a heavier look.

Sometimes the feathers are grouped thickly together, forming a ruff to be worn tightly round the neck. Such a one may be fastened with a large satin bow. It is better, when buying marabou of this type, to select both ribbon and feathers to match the dress. The effect is then very good.

A novelty this year is the marabou and satin scarf made of three ropes of feathers fastened on a band of colored satin. It is a graceful adjunct to any costume. The girl in the picture wears a gray voile gown and a black hat, while her scarf is of black marabou backed with gray satin. It affords an efficient protection against autumn breezes, and it is extremely becoming.

But sometimes ostrich tips are used instead of marabou, and these are usually arranged in boa form, a style which has always been greatly favored by the Parisienne. Boas are either allowed to ripple gracefully over each shoulder or else they encircle the neck, one end hanging down the front, the other down the back. A woman who contemplates buying furs when winter comes, or even later, after Christmas, will find that one of these fascinating summer furs will prove sufficient protection to carry the economical one over until she finds it convenient to invest in a more expensive outfit.

AFTERNOON TEA on the VERANDA

"A light basket of cookies is passed."

"An aproned maid spreads the tea cloth"

"A single vase of flowers — not a mixed bouquet."

"She slips the cozy over the pot."

"The Tea Equipage with the Swinging Kettle."

LIKE that word—"veranda"—better than "piazza," and it expresses something that "porch" does not cover. The latter word is synonyous with the old Knickerbocker oop." Both imply roominess and y comfort, a secluded corner in ich mynheer and his hausfrau could e their ease, with pipe and mending sket, when the hard work of the day s done. The neighbors gathered there summer evenings, and the air was ck with tobacco smoke and gossip. s a rule, the mistress of the house couraged the growth of vines about square stoop. They were harbors mosquitoes and slugs, and dry ves and dropping flowers littered the r.

ur veranda would not deserve the e-syllabled word were it bared of draping vines. We got it from the ntals, with whom it signifies seclun gained by lattices and shutters and es. An English lexicographer apds to this definition the gratuitous ervation that "The veranda is errously called a 'piazza' in the United tes."

fternoon tea and the rechristening porch, stoop and piazza have come ue simultaneously, and they have ne to stay. It may be long before, m mansion to hovel, tea will be made l served at 5 o'clock throughout the gth and breadth of our land, as in gland, Scotland and Ireland. Were vapor of the tilted teakettle visible, would obscure the face of the sun ween 4.30 and 5 in the British isles. een and washerwoman drink together n, and the clink of china marks the r as faithfully as the town clock.

WHEN SHADOWS LENGTHEN

With us the pretty custom has gained or so fast within a quarter of a ceny that it is an exception when the that cheers but not inebriates is offered to the afternoon guest. In usands of homes it is as truly a ily meal as breakfast.

have called the custom "pretty." It never a more graceful function than n carried out upon the veranda. The plest country cottage where the it prevails is furnished with a ker table, or one of "mission" mancture, that stands on the veranda the time. It has a modest corner for own and keeps in the background until the "bewitching hour" of afternoon tea approaches. The aproned maid then sets it in the foreground, spreads the teacloth and brings out the tray upon which is arranged the tea equipage.

If the beverage is to be brewed by the mistress or by a daughter of the house, the teakettle and a spirit lamp form part of the pleasing array upon the tray. Or a 5-o'clock-tea stand precedes the appearance of the tray and is set beside the table. A silver or copper kettle swings over an alcohol lamp. Boiling water was poured into the kettle before it left the kitchen. The spirit lamp makes sure the actual boil before it goes into the teapot, which must be hot from a recent scalding.

AFTER THE ENGLISH

The cozy, another English importation, is almost an essential when tea is served upon the veranda. If there be any breeze in the long summer day, it may be depended upon to spring up as the sun nears the western horizon. Moreover, the canny housemother sets the table in the coolest corner of the shaded veranda. She slips the cozy over the pot after the latter is filled, and leaves it there for the two minutes that are requisite to draw out the flavor and tonic properties of the Celestial herb without poisoning the infusion with tannic acid. The hot-water pot flanks the teapot, in case it should be needed to weaken the beverage for a "nervous" drinker. An alcohol flame burns under it while the function goes on.

Don't cumber the simple and elegant ceremonial of afternoon tea by numerous and various appointments that make it heavy and expensive. I have in mind one city of fair size and abounding hospitality where the custom degenerated into "receptions" demanding salads, ices and a dozen etceteras, entailing an expenditure of labor and money that made this form of entertainment impracticable for the woman of limited means.

Ask half a dozen of the nicest neighbors you have to take a cup of tea with you on the veranda on a given afternoon when you have a choice friend staying with you. Group easy chairs and wicker rockers invitingly in the corner sacred to the tea hour, and assemble your guests there as they arrive. Your prettiest teacloth should drape the table, and all the features of the "equipage" must be the best you can bring to the front. A single vase of flowers (not a mixed bouquet) should grace the center of the table. As you make and pour the tea, see to it that the talk flows on smoothly. There should be no break in the thread of anecdote and chat. Silence is always formality under these circumstances.

Have a plate or basket of thin bread-and-butter. Some tea-lovers prefer this accompaniment to sandwich or cake. If you or your cook can make good Scotch scones, for which you shall have a recipe presently, they will be received gratefully by those who have eaten them "on the other side."

Another pleasant accompaniment of tea is the toasted sandwich. That, too, we will have by and by. Sandwiches of tongue and ham and chicken are popular at all times. In hot weather I prefer the lighter varieties of tomato, cress, nasturtium and lettuce sandwiches. On very warm afternoons you may substitute iced for hot tea. Yet, since this cooling drink disagrees seriously with many persons, it is best to have hot tea for such as prefer it.

A basket of light cake or cookies is passed after the bread and sandwiches. For those who take no sugar in their tea, cake is not amiss. It vitiates the taste of the drink for such as qualify it with cream and sugar. In addition to cream jug and sugar bowl have a plate of sliced lemon, and if you serve cold tea, a bowl of cracked ice.

Stop there! Bonbons, fruit and "frappes" are foreign to the genuine, quietly refined function. You vulgarise it by introducing any of them.

Afternoon Tea Scones.

Sift a quart of flour three times with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one of salt. Chop into this a tablespoonful of butter and one of lard for shortening. Mix in a bowl with a wooden spoon into a dough by adding three cupfuls of sweet milk, or enough to make a soft dough. Do not touch with your hands. Lay the dough upon your kneading board and roll into a sheet half an inch thick. Cut into round cakes with your biscuit cutter and bake upon a soapstone griddle to a light brown. Split and butter while hot.

Line a tray or plate with a folded napkin and lay in the scones, folding the corners of the napkin over them to keep them hot.

Toasted Sandwiches.

Cut slices of white or of graham bread thin, butter lightly, and spread one with cream cheese. Press the two slices firmly together and toast the outside of each before a quick fire. Send to table wrapped in a napkin.

Cream Cheese and Sweet Pepper Sandwiches.

Scald the peppers to take off the biting taste, and drain them. Lay on the ice for some hours. Wipe and mince. Mix two-thirds cream cheese and one-third peppers into a smooth paste. Spread upon lightly buttered bread and put together in sandwich form.

Tomato Sandwiches.

Butter thin slices of bread and lay between them slices of fresh ripe tomatoes from which the skin has been pared. Spread each slice of tomato with mayonnaise or a good French dressing.

Lettuce Sandwiches.

Butter thin slices of bread and lay between them in sandwich form crisp leaves of heart lettuce which have been dipped in mayonnaise dressing. One leaf of lettuce suffices for each sandwich.

Nasturtium Sandwiches.

Substitute for the lettuce leaves petals of nasturtium flowers dipped in French dressing. This is a piquant and appetizing sandwich.

Old Virginia Corned Beef

MY WIFE and I have lately come from the old country to reside here. We want to "catch on" to new cusms, etc., and we have received great sistance from the Exchange. We have t yet seen a recipe for corning beef, d as we are fond of this article of daily od, we should like to get a rule for tting it up, so that we could corn choice ts of beef for ourselves. Will you kindoblige us? JAMES G. (Seattle, Wash.).

cannot prove my willingness to serve ("and your wife") more strongly an by turning over to you the recipe which my mother had beef corned forty years. I have never eaten ned beef equal to hers anywhere else. e agreed with you in that she put wn the choice cuts. The average tcher corns the less desirable parts the animal. That may be one cause the prejudice against the corned beef d in the shambles.

Virginia Recipe for Corning Beef

Rub each piece of beef with saltpeter xed with ten times more salt than you ve saltpeter, until the mixture lies dry on the surface. Set aside in a cold ace, covered to exclude dust and incts, for twenty-four hours. Repeat the ocess then, rubbing in the mixture very oroughly. You will be surprised to see w much of the salt and saltpeter the at will absorb at the second rubbing. t away again for another twenty-four urs, by which time you should have pickle ready.

Pickle for Corning Beef.

To five gallons of water allow a gallon salt and four ounces of saltpeter, with pound and a half of brown sugar. Boil gether ten minutes after the salt and gar are completely dissolved; let the ine get perfectly cold; wipe each piece beef dry and pack in a keg or barrel. ur the brine over all. The meat should covered to the depth of several inches. t a cover on the vessel and set in the llar.

Examine the contents weekly to see if it is keeping well. If there be the least unpleasant odor, or if an offensive scum rise to the top of the pickle, take out the meat without the delay of an hour, wipe it perfectly clean and rub in dry salt, leaving it thus while you prepare new brine. Scald the keg or barrel and set in the sun for an hour or so before repacking the meat in it.

What Are Ice Cream Cones?

Will you kindly send me a recipe for making ice cream cones?

I have been trying to make them, but those I make are too brittle. Can you tell me how to overcome this defect?

A. M. B. (Cincinnati, Ohio).

We cannot engage to send recipes by mail. In this case I could not, if there were no such rule, for I have but an indefinite idea of what an ice cream cone is. Correspondents better versed than I in the technicalities of the confectioner's art will help you out of the dilemma.

Canned Rhubarb and Pineapple

Some weeks ago I saw in the Exchange a recipe for canning rhubarb and pineapple, which I mislaid. Send it to me if you still have it, please.

M. L. K. (Tolono, Ill.).

I do not recall the recipes to which you allude. Instead of spending valuable time in looking them up, I offer the following, which I know to be good.

Canned Rhubarb.

Cut into inch lengths without peeling. To each pound allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Put the sugar over the fire with just enough water to dissolve it thoroughly, and boil to a thin syrup, skimming off the scum as it rises. Turn the rhubarb into the boiling syrup and cook for five minutes. Take up the fruit with a perforated spoon and transfer to heated jars set in a pan of hot water on the range. Fill to overflowing with the boiling syrup, clap on the sterilized rubbers and tops and seal at once.

Canned Pineapple.

Select the ripest fruit you can find. It is a pity that all the pineapples brought to our markets are gathered so unripe that they are likely to toughen in the cooking.

Pare the "pines" with a sharp knife, slice, and extract the cores. Drop into cold water as you go on, to keep the color. Unless you are positive that the fruit is really ripe, it is safer to cut it into dice than to leave the slices whole and round. Measure all when ready to can, and allow a cupful of sugar to four quarts of the pineapple dice. Pour a pint of water into a preserving kettle; put in a layer of fruit; strew with sugar; put in more fruit, and so on until all is in. Cover closely and bring slowly to a boil. Cook tender and clear. Fifteen minutes should suffice. Can as I have directed in the preceding recipe, and seal immediately. Wrap the jars in thick paper to exclude the light.

On Coloring Candy

Mrs. G. A. C. (Los Angeles, Cal.), asks how to make pink candy without using red sugar.

If she will get a small jar of fruit color paste, sold by druggists and some grocers, she will have a coloring matter that will give her any tint required, according to the quantity used.

In making up a quantity of candy, I put into the white fondant the least bit of paste, and have a delicate shade of pink. I flavor with rosewater.

Another batch is colored to a deeper shade and flavored with wintergreen. Yet a third is really crimson and flavored with cinnamon. These various colors and flavors have one foundation in fondant and color paste. You may buy the paste in divers colors. The candies will keep indefinitely, and the paste has the advantage over liquid coloring in not affecting the consistency of the fondant.

M. L. P. (Oak Park, Ill.).

We are indebted to you for a succinct and practical contribution. I wish you had told us something of the composition of the "paste." I take it for granted that it is based upon gelatine and colored with vegetable matter or with harmless ingredients, such as cochineal?

More Soapmaking

I am an old woman and I did not imagine that I could be of help in the way of contributions to the Exchange.

But a recent article on soapmaking starts me to writing. I made my soap yesterday. I make it twice a year, and always have good luck. I keep it for scrubbing and for washing overalls, etc., my husband being an engineer.

I buy one can of dry lye powder to put with the grease I have saved from time to time. I try the grease out in the oven and strain it. The lye is dissolved in a pailful of rainwater, allowing a pound of grease to the can of powder and pail of water. I put all into a kettle and bring it slowly to a boil, watching to see that it does not boil over. It is allowed to boil about half an hour. I then put it away to get cold. If it separates, I add a little water and boil again. Sometimes the lye is too strong to allow the grease and water to mix. Keep the soap covered. I keep mine in the cellar.

I like "Heavenly Hash." I have made it often, but I call mine "Fruit Salad." If this is worth printing, I may come again.

H. H. (Beloit, Wis.).

Come again and as often as you have something to tell us that is for the good of Our Family at large.

Many Things

1. I am glad you took up the matter of borrowing and lending in the Exchange. It was all new to me when I came North to live. I could not but look my surprise when a neighbor would run in to borrow an egg or a bit of butter or even a slice of bread! I could not understand it at all. I thank you for speaking out so plainly of the habit, which seems to me actually vulgar!

2. I should like to know if Augusta Evans' book, "At the Mercy of Tiberius," was drawn from life. It seems so real, as if it must have been founded upon fact.

3. Say to "M. E. L." (Benton Harbor, Mich.) that one of my sons had the "itch" she describes. My doctor said it was a disease of the nerves and the blood, caused by a general "run down" condition. He treated it, and successfully, through the blood and nervous system.

4. Don't publish any country woman's letters telling how a family may live on $5 per week in California. There they can get almost twice as much for that sum as we can here. I have a son living in California. He writes that the best steak may be had at the rate of two pounds for a quarter of a dollar, while we pay twice as much. He gets butter for 25 cents a pound, and I pay 40—and so on and so on. It is not fair to judge us eastern housemothers by that standard of prices.

5. I hope you will write some time of the way young girls have of expecting young men to spend nearly all they make upon them and their frolics and pleasures. If a poor fellow has to steal in order to get funds for all this, they don't care. I never heard of such disgraceful doings in my young days. Mrs. P. (Darby, Pa.).

I should be willing to wear my pen down to a stub if, by so doing, I could reform the abuse of which you wish I would "write some time." A girl of sense and feeling—I might add of common honesty—who has one grain of tact, can prevent a young man from spending money upon her which he cannot afford to let go in that way. I know girls who insist that they prefer the balcony of theater or concert room to the orchestra chairs, and who "never eat late suppers," because they know their escorts have their own way to make in the world, and that $2 seats and an oyster and game supper are sheer extravagance.

I am sorry to add that I likewise know those who are not withheld by these considerations from pressing gallantry in the way of choice seats, cabs and "treats" to the utmost limit sanctioned by convention. Our correspondent fits an ugly word to one of the frequent consequences of this cruel extortion. A man who "borrows" from his employer's funds rather than submit to the odium of being set down as miserly by a woman he admires and whose favor he would gain, might often have company in the dock if justice were not too blind to seek and find the instigator of the theft. "Look for the woman!" was the first order of the most celebrated of police chiefs when news of a crime was reported to him. Our girl would be confounded were she to be told how often the accomplice in peculation and false entries and mad speculation might be found in her giddy self.

A Few Hints

IT IS sensible to soak the string or twine you mean to use in tying up crocks of fruit butter or pickles. This will prevent its slipping while you are tying it, and will make a tighter job, because the twine will shrink after it is tied.

It is said that a pinch of salt put in a can of tomatoes when preserving time comes will help to keep the vegetables a long time. Every one knows how flat canned tomatoes sometimes taste, and perhaps a little salt will help to overcome this objection.

Clean brass with pumice powder, wet with spirits of turpentine.

The old or frayed rag is a delusion, not a duster. Its particles of lint and ravelings will make double work.

[illegible] Ass, grievously insulted, brayed indignantly: "No, he isn't, I am the Ass; and I'm proud of it, Antelope. I wouldn't talk if I were as near to being a cantaloupe as you are."

The Council was rapidly becoming disorderly. Chacma Baboon tried to steal tall feathers from the Ostrich, while a playful Vulture pecked at the eyes of Rhinoceros.

Just as King Lion rose to call for adjournment, there galloped tempestuously into the jungle clearing a herd of zebras. With grunts long drawn out and shrill whistles, they announced:

"They've come! They've come on the Smoking Horse!"

Thereupon the Lion, the Leopard and the Crocodile, who are not protected from hunters by the Game Law of Man, gathered together for a three-part weeping. So deep a pool did the Crocodile weep that Lion and Leopard had to swim to reach land.

"Hold!" cried the Elephant, so that his trumpet blast was heard above the din; "let us stand loyally by one another in this hour of stress."

"Poo-oo-f! Poo-oo-f! Poo-oof!"

Immediately every creature assumed an attitude of strained attention; then each forgot about the loyal stand, and dashed, plunged, crawled, waddled or flew as speedily as possible into the jungle. All vanished—except the foolish Hyena, who stood stockstill and grinned at the approaching Iron Horse.

The story of Humpto and others—and you
Now have in a nutshell a yarn truly true.
—Bwana Humpto's Diary.

"It is nice," said he, "to ride upon the cowcatcher of a locomotive and to see all these Noah's Ark and Zoo animals turned loose and running wild.

"It is nice," said he, "to watch the thousands of creatures which my good father, Bwana Humpto, tells me are lions, rhinoceri, hippopotami, hartebeests, zebras, giraffes and whatnot. I do hope that soon I may photograph a whatnot."

"Whatnots are sometimes photographed, my son," observed Bwana Humpto, with a laugh which showed all his teeth. "But, speaking of cowcatchers, you must remember, my boy, that this is a zebracatcher. Inquisitive zebras, not cows, obstruct the rails in the African wilds."

Photo leaned against the pilot of the engine and pondered, as the train sped over plateaus covered with crinkly grass and among rocks and sparsely wooded hills. Then Photo Humpto took a snapshot.

"Is there not a troop of zebras ahead of us?" asked Doctor Pillo, unslinging his rifle.

Bwana Humpto leveled his field glass, and said there was.

The lad cried, excitedly: "Oh, Doctor, please kill one!"

"Bloodthirsty boy!" reproached Doctor Pillo, "we must slay animals only for food or to preserve their skins. Here is a good verse for you to memorize:

"Shoot not at the little zebra,
As he gayly wags his tail;
Shoot not at the playful zebra—
Or some day you'll land in jail."

"Just shoot their stripes off!" begged Photo.

But the Doctor said the stripes were put on with indelible ink and they would not come off. So Photo Humpto took a snapshot.

"I, also, know a little poem," volunteered Photo. "It was written by Mother Goose with a goose quill, and it begins:

"Goosey, goosey gander, whither shall I wander?

"I don't remember the answer, but the verse reminds me very much of this Ugander Railway, which winds in and out like the crooked lanes in the crooked town that you reached by the crooked stile."

"The name is Uganda," said Gwana Humpto, severely, "and it does arrive somewhere, which is more than can be said of you in your rambling speech. Yonder lies the station of Kapeti Plains."

Photo confided to the Doctor that when at Messina Italians had kissed the hands of his father and himself, and that he still suspected his fingers had been somewhat grimy. "Ever since," whispered the boy, "I've desired to wash my hands before entering a town."

However, the Doctor advised him not to bother. Even should the natives kiss his hand, they would like a flavor, Doctor Pillo said.

As the train drew up to the station a number of porters, lined along the edge of the platform, saluted Bwana Humpto and cheered him lustily. Photo thought he knew the chap on the end of the line. This porter resembled Sam Johnson, with whom Photo was acquainted at home. But Doctor Pillo said that more likely it was a woman, because the natives deem it an honor to permit their wives to do the work.

"Sam thinks the same," reflected Photo, "so I guess it's Mrs. Johnson." Then Photo Humpto took a snapshot.

The Titled Englishman met the party when Bwana Humpto, Doctor Pillo and Photo slid from the zebracatcher and Elephant Hunter, Bosso Trappo and the other members disembarked. He shook hands cordially with each newcomer. Afterward, he invited them to a luncheon of wildebeest sandwiches and goats' milk.

"Is a wildebeest really a wild beast?" innocently inquired Photo. The Titled Englishman stared, but said very politely that he thought it was.

Photo was discouraged; therefore, he went and hobnobbed with the headman of the porters. This native was a genuine chieftain, who wore a top hat and several other things not worth mentioning. He himself said that he was a cannibal chief. Altogether, he was a much bigger personage than Sam Johnson, whom Photo had always admired. The greatest feat Sam had ever done was to swallow a pie in two bites. Gooboo, as the chieftain called himself, could do much better than that even in pie-eating, Photo was sure.

"Soon 'sadari'—camp out—an' go with porters and beaters," Gooboo informed the youth.

Photo nodded. He thought the natives looked very much like carpet beaters, and was pleased to find his opinion ified.

The carriers now burdened themse with luggage and provisions, prep tory to marching toward the cam place, a short distance from the road. A queer, monotonous song started. Trappo consented to tran the song for Photo. He said it merely the African dialect words

I've been working on the railroad all

Rising early in the morning to whil hours away.

"That may be the correct tra tion," murmured the lad, "but I'd ger my kodak that none of these lows would work just to while hours away."

Gooboo smiled as very pleasant hearing this that Photo enthusi reached into his pocket and hande chieftain a coin. In a moment he th the cannibal chief would be offe but the headman of the porters a ed the money exactly as Sam have done. Indeed, Gooboo rese Sam in many ways.

"'Pon muh word," shouted the Englishman, rushing toward Phot clapping the boy violently upo back; "you ah a clevah young wondahfully clevah, don't yuh kn

"I beg your pardon!" gasped P

"My deah fellow, I want to say that you ah wondahfully clevah. just thought of the bright little you told me—the one about th tamed beast, you know!" was th thusiastic explanation, as the Englishman proceeded once mo pummel the youth's spine.

"Do you mind standing while I tograph you now?" eagerly asked to. "It's quite an unusual laugh, sure."

The Titled Englishman didn't Photo Humpto took a snapshot.

Then Photo Humpto discovered he had been using the same kodak films twice.

The Happy Mishap

[illegible] I will have my Carlo!" cried Philomena determinedly. Hastily wiping away the tears, she trudged forward resolutely. She was going to find Carlo and bring him home.

It was a long way, and the road ran steeply from the Italian town of Avellino, upon the outskirts of which the little girl dwelt. Past the ruins of the ancient town of Abellium she went. She saw barefooted pilgrims ascending the mountain to reach the convent of Vergine. But she gazed without interest, for her only thought was to find her Carlo.

Finally, the little girl felt sure that her precious doggie was not to be found along the main highway. Into a lane she turned, and followed its windings through beautiful chestnut groves and chestnut copses, until she came to a tall, neatly trimmed hedge.

Philomena was not tall enough to peer over the hedge, and it was too thick to afford her a peep through it. On she stumbled, toward the gateway. In a moment she would have a view of the grounds, in the midst of which stood a handsome villa.

Philomena shaded her eyes and looked, and then—

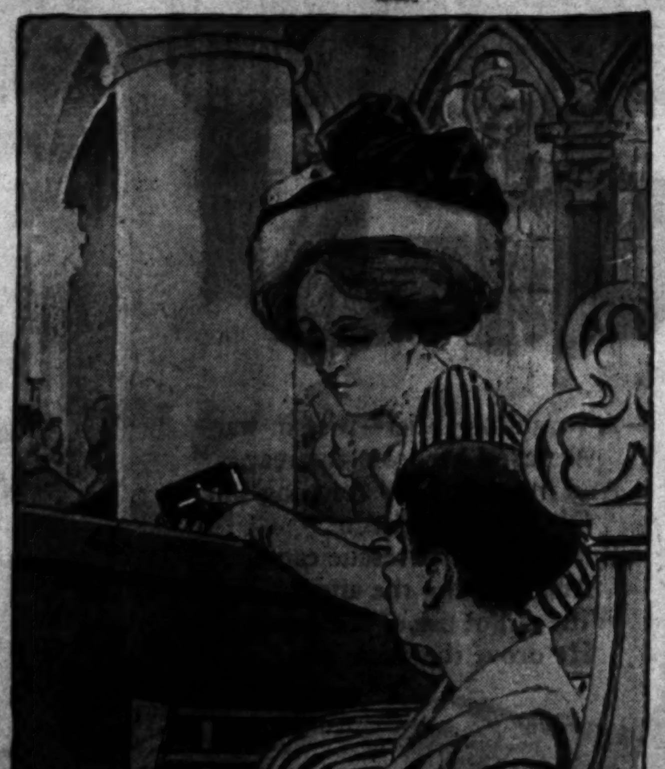
Madly rushing across the lawn to the gates came a cunning little puppy, excitedly barking with all his little might. Yes, it was Carlo. It HAD to be, else the mishap that fell upon this Italian bambina when she lost her pet might not have ended in happiness.

How Philomena caressed and fondled the doggie through the iron rods of the gate! And how appealingly Carlo besought his mistress to rescue him, as he licked her hands and wagged his stumpy tail!

Then the rich American lady walked across the lawn. Philomena was sure she would not like her. How could she like anybody who had taken her dear Carlo away? But when the lady heard Philomena's story, and not only gave Carlo back to her for keeping, but also presented the little girl with several shining coins and good things to eat, Philomena knew that the lady had not intended to be cruel.

"I want you to keep Carlo for me," the lady said, as she directed the coachman to drive Philomena home in the pony cart. Philomena promised; but the lady never asked for Carlo, and doggie still owns the same mistress.

CHURCH



WHEN Muvver, dear, takes me to Church, I 'joy so much to go
An' watch the pretty candles perch, all twinklin', in a row.
The minister's dwessed up in w'ite, wif' lots o' lace an' bands
He looks so queer an' clean an' p'lite, wif' ruffles roun' his hands.
Sometimes a lot o' ladies sings some awful drony airs—
'Don't know edzackly what it is, but 'fink 'ey're singin' "Prayers";
An' I yawn an' feel SO sleepy, an' ask, "Can I go home?"
En' Muvver frowns an' looks so good, an' I feel ALL ALONE.
Some mens come roun' wif' baskets FULL wif' MONEY. Why do we Have to give 'em our five-centses, when 'ey've plenty? Do you see?
But when at last we're goin' home, I 'mos' could dance a jig;
I guess 'at folks don't get so tired IN CHURCH when they are big.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

TO CONRAD BURGESS, a member of a boys' secret society which at each weekly meeting appoints to one of its members some task, falls the duty of making a journey to and from San Francisco within six months. Refusal to act or failure to perform means expulsion from the circle as a coward. Taking the sentence seriously, the lad steals away at midnight, spends the night in a wood and sets out at daylight in company with Bugs, a tramp, whom he meets and who shares his food. They cross a river on a raft, and after a day's tramping obtain a good meal and night's lodging from a kind farmer. After breakfast the two board a freight. Bugs is able to give valuable advice on the best methods of freight riding. When their destination is reached, they elude the trainmen and make for a nearby house. This, Bugs explains, is a haven provided especially for hobos. Inside are gathered a number of men, who, after a hearty supper, spend the evening in exchanging stories of tramp life. Conrad passed a sleepless night, but in the morning is ready to start again for the railroad. A glance at the engineer of a freight locomotive strangely excites Bugs, who mutters of vengeance for some previous wrong, and then springs into the cab, shouting to Conrad to follow. Another moment and they are speeding away from the wondering engineer.

DODGING THE POLICE

ON THE locomotive rumbled, as Bugs opened the throttle wider and wider. The tramp was enjoying himself greatly, and Conrad's eyes glowed with feverish excitement. It was rare sport, they thought.

"We'll hop off afore we reach the next station! They'll wire ahead to ketch us, mebbe!" shouted Bugs.

Then, catching the boy's look of amazement at the ease with which he ran the engine, the tramp explained that at one time he had been a fireman. "Been most everything!" said he; and Conrad found afterward that the hobo had spoken the truth.

With eyes glued to the rails in front, the two adventurers did not think of looking behind until there came an ominous rumble from the rear. Bugs gave one look in that direction and yelled:

"What rotten luck! They've got a fast passenger loco on our trail!"

He quickly reversed the throttle. Before the engine came to a standstill the companions had leaped from the cab and were running helter-skelter for cover in a wood that lay beyond.

They were none too soon, for within a minute's time the passenger locomotive also slowed down, and several men jumped from it and followed in pursuit of the fugitives.

Suddenly Bugs and Conrad stumbled from the woods. A broad lake stretched before them. Bugs gave a shout of joy as he perceived a number of rowboats drawn up close to the bank. Without hesitation he sped toward a boat.

"Cast them other boats adrift!" he cried to Conrad, while he himself searched for oars among the craft. He was agreeably surprised by the discovery of a pair. Then the man and boy flung themselves into a boat, and had pushed a distance from shore by the time their pursuers came into view.

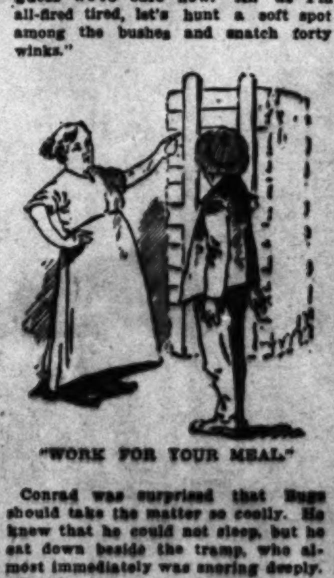
"Stop, or we'll shoot!" was the command.

"They're railroad detectives," muttered Bugs. He added, "Don't pay any 'tention, but dodge when yuh see them ready to fire."

It was a great risk. But the pair were too much excited for reason. Fortunately the shots were wild, and the distance was too great for accurate shooting. At last they arrived at the opposite bank, when they lost no time in plunging far into the woods.

Almost a mile was traversed in this headlong fashion. Bugs then paused, announcing, between pants for breath:

"I know this here country. There's a picnic park not far in front. I guess we're safe now. An' as I'm all-fired tired, let's hunt a soft spot among the bushes and snatch forty winks."



"WORK FOR YOUR MEAL."

Conrad was surprised that Bugs should take the matter so coolly. He knew that he could not sleep, but he sat down beside the tramp, who almost immediately was snoring deeply.

To the lad it seemed many hours before his comrade awoke. In reality, only sixty minutes had passed when the tramp lazily stretched himself, and suggested that the journey be continued.

Further into the woods they penetrated. After a while, a large, partly cleared space lay before them, and they stepped out upon the deserted picnic ground.

A few rods distant there stood a long, shed-like structure, which Bugs correctly guessed contained a bowling alley. Inquisitive as ever, he pried open the door.

"Ah! Here's several balls and pins!" he announced after a search in a remote corner. Thereupon he gravely placed the pins in position and commenced to bowl, inviting the lad to join him.

While in the midst of their sport, the door opened and they heard a voice shout:

"Hey, Jack! Seen any pesky tramps around here?"

Quick as a flash, Bugs seized and hurled it toward the figure appeared in the doorway. The ma stunned. Bugs pounced upon hin producing a stout cord in the sam terious way Conrad had observe employ before, tied the man ha foot. Conrad saw for the first tim the man was their enemy, the de

Another footfall was heard Bugs motioned for silence, and another detective stepped into th to investigate the disappearance comrade, Bugs threw himself u man, and after a struggle overca The fellow was bound in the sam ner as was the other sleuth.

Bugs now paused for a mom consider. The spirit of mischi reflected in his eyes.

"Help me carry 'em!" said he, ly. Noticing how frightened t looked, he remarked:

"These chaps 'll come too. been hit a little hard, but it hurt 'em."

The detectives were carried to rousel, where Bugs, with grim bound them fast to the grinnin of wood. As soon as this wa the tramp and his comrade toward the railroad.

A handcar approaching at th ment, they accosted the section riding upon it, and requested th ilege of a ride.

"Come on!" said the men chee

Naturally, the invitation was ed. The fugitives rode until was sighted, when Bugs remark ually that "they'd better get off

So, after thanking the railroa Bugs and Conrad climbed a fen squatted under a tree.

"Detectives 'll be on the look that town. That's why I didn't get too close," he explained.

"Now," observed he, taking beard and mustache from his "I'm going to fix myself up so 'll ever reckernize me. I learned in' up while travelin' with a wunst."

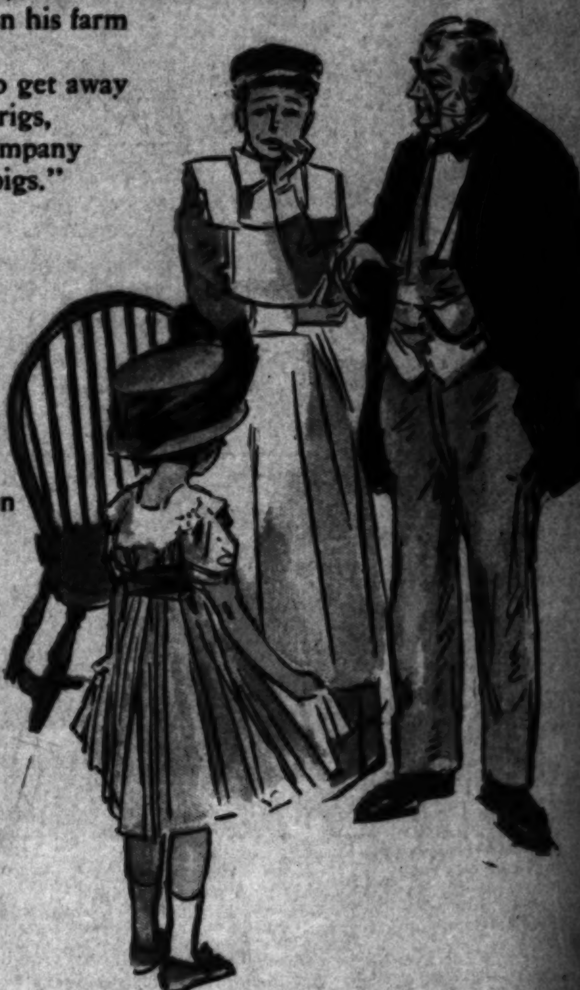
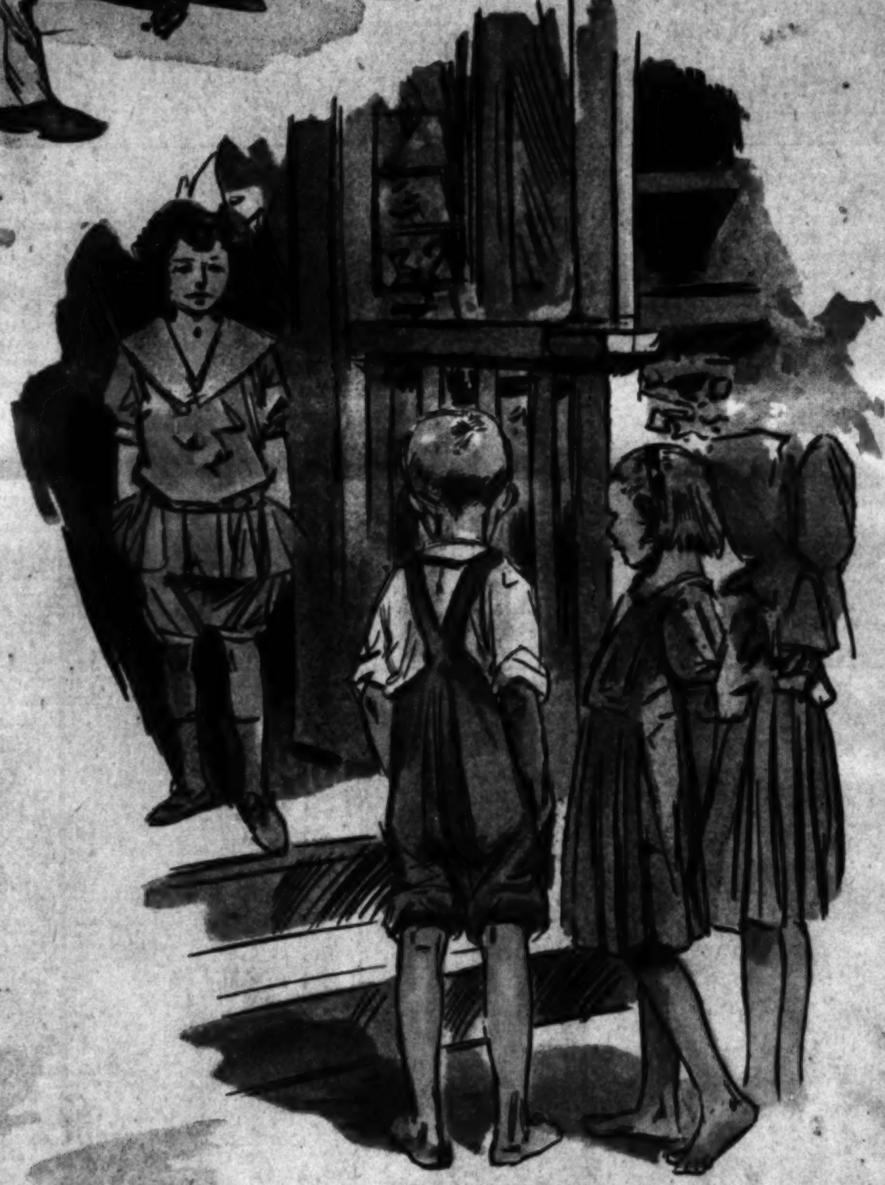
1.—Perhaps our Cynthia wasn't pleased
To hear her mama say,
That they to Grandpa on his farm
A visit were to pay.
"I'm glad," she said, "to get away
From all these little prigs,
I'll gladly trade their company
For lambs, and even pigs."

2.—The farm was just the spot on which
To have a jolly time,
With brooks to fish in, cows to milk
And lots of trees to climb.
When Grandpa meets her at the train
He solemnly avers
That every thing upon the place
Is absolutely hers.



3.—He then to nurse some sage advice
Did forcefully advance.
To "Get them fancy dresses off
And give the kid a chance
She must be tired of dress parades,
And while she stays with me
From them confounded city cares
She's goin' to be free."

4.—A romping suit was improvised
As specially required,
And she for any kind of play
Was sensibly attired.
Some country children hovered near
Whose jovial looks betrayed
The fact that they were there to join
In any escapade.



5.—To mingle with this rugged group
She gladly condescends.
Two minutes' time sufficed to make Them all devoted friends.
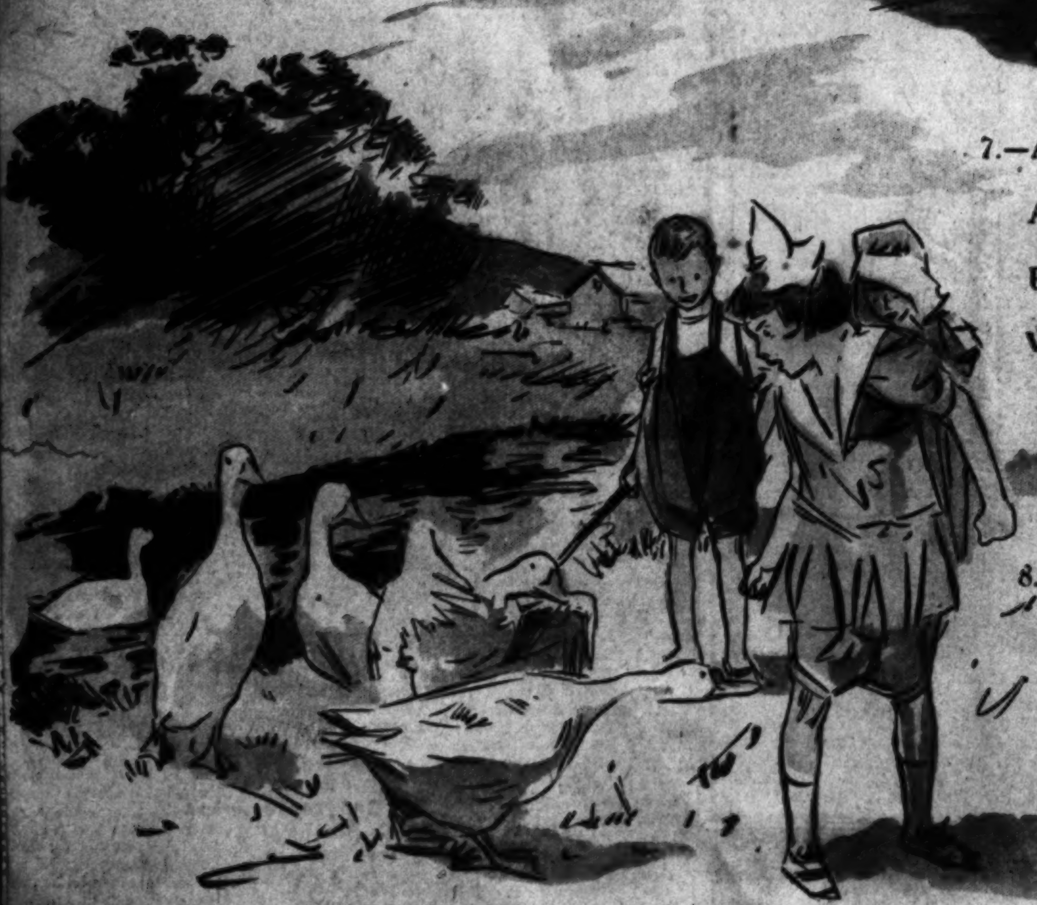
Then little Ann Jermima Jones
And Ezra Jimpsonweed
Said they could show her pretty geese
That she might like to feed

6.—When nurse for Cynthianna made
That romping suit of red
'Twould have been better had she used
Some other tint instead,
For when the geese get sight of her
They angrily object
To taking food from any one
So brilliantly bedecked.



7.—A wrathful gander—wise in war—
Attacked her from the rear,
And from the fiery romping suit
Obtained a souvenir.
But Ezra to her rescue came,
And entering the affray,
With skilful use of sticks and stones
He drove the geese away.

8.—When Cynthianna's tears were dried
And frowns exchanged for smiles
She said she never knew before
That geese took note of styles.
"And whether I shall ever like
That gander much depends.
His fresh deportment makes me think Of Seymour Dividends."

THE ATHENS OF AMERICA.

is Los Angeles. This is rapidly becoming one of the leading educational centers of the continent and will be in time the leading one of all in the whole world. That is a strong statement, but it will be proven within a long period of years. The same influences which made Athens the intellectual cradle of the century preceding the Christian era exist here and will bring about the same results. There is a similar climate, sky, bright, stimulating thought and creating ness of mind and cheerfulness of spirit. The health of all is bettered by living here, and the same is true of the mind. Invalids come to this place desperate, and those born or raised here are stronger in body and mind than those raised in less favorable climes.

There is like scenery to inspire the artistic spirit. "Old poetic mountains' inspiration breathed around" Athens, and they were less lofty, less beautiful, less in the evening sun, less wonderful in their light and shade, than ours. Besides a great school system, Los Angeles has special schools classes, of all grades, for all intellectual development, including special courses in arts as well as general courses for broader culture. schools are good is proved by the large at them. Few young people go away from to obtain educational advantages, but on many come from near and far to enjoy offered in our institutions of learning. come here from various parts, even lands, and establish homes in order that the boys and girls may have good schools, general and special, to attend.

This is a progressive community, and in nothing more so than in education. The schools of the city and those near by never stand still. Additions of various kinds are made to the facilities all the time in order to keep them in all respects up to the highest mark.

Last, there are to consider the advantages of a social nature to be found here. The people of this city and of those around are highly cultivated and refined. The moral atmosphere is pure, and the religious privileges not excelled in the country. Churches of all shades of doctrine abound, and they are presided over by able, devoted ministers, many of them preachers of the widest reputation. The home atmosphere here is pure, and the young people enjoy unsurpassed opportunities for social intercourse, affording enjoyment for the moment, and giving a polish to the manners that make those so brought up, welcome in social circles all the rest of their lives.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The teachers in the public and private schools of Los Angeles and throughout all Southern California have not as many complex human problems to solve as have the teachers in the educational institutions of the East. The reason of this is that what is known as the "foreign element" does not figure here to an appreciable extent. Our boys and girls are almost entirely American.

Doubless the climatic conditions that prevail in California have also a great influence on the characters of our boys and girls. This is an open-air country. No one is shut in. Even in winter the windows of a schoolroom are kept wide open. Thus the physical bodies of our children are not exasperated by the confinement which seems unavoidable in those portions of our common country where severe climatic conditions prevail during nearly the whole of the school term.

The bulk of the men and women who constitute the population of California were born and reared in the East, and they can remember vividly their experiences at school, back yonder, when they were youngsters. They can remember the heavy snowfalls, when it was necessary for teams to open up pathways to the little red schoolhouses. They can remember the bitter cold winter days when the big boys in the schools spent nearly their whole time keeping the stoves going with wood or coal so that the little folk would not suffer. Windows and doors were shut tight. As a consequence the children became nervous and "cranky." The switch was a great deal in evidence, those days. We are glad to be informed, however, that corporal punishment has now been quite abolished, even in the East.

There can be no doubt that the school boys and girls of California are far less troubled with "nerves" than are the children of less favored climes. They have more opportunities for physical exercise, and that results in keeping them in good health. The teacher, of course, has less trouble with a healthy child than with one who is a bundle of nervous distractions.

Taking them at any point of view, we believe that our boys and girls are the most amenable school attendants in America. Clear-eyed and clean-limbed, they are destined to become a race of which the nation may well be proud and from which it will receive great comfort.

We are also proud of the fact that our boys and girls are impregnated not only with a desire to acquire learning, but that they are far better-behaved than are the youngsters of many another place. What is known as the city "hoodlum" is rarely seen in Los Angeles. As sons and daughters of well-to-do and God-fearing American parents, our boys and girls are well-behaved from instinct. They are respectful to the old and kindly to the weak and helpless. It may be that the old Spanish sense of chivalry and a heritage of good manners from the same source has an influence here, also. At any rate, our young people are singularly free from objectionable conduct.

Altogether, we are extremely proud of our boys and girls. We believe that, as generation after generation passes, there will spring up in this favored part of America an almost ideal race, which will be strong in mind and body and great in soul—a race that will more nearly than ever before reflect the design of the All Wise Creator.

COMMON SCHOOLS OF CALIFORNIA.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

A fact of quite significant interest to California is made known in the 1908 report of Dr. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, United States Commissioner of Education. It is that of the 382,451 young people of school age (5 to 18 years) in 1907, 335,645 were enrolled in the common schools of the State.

The enrollment has grown as follows:

School year.	Enrollment.
1870-71	91,332
1879-80	158,765
1889-90	221,756
1899-1900	269,736
1906-7	335,645

The 1906-7 enrollment consisted of:

Boys	171,756
Girls	163,889
Total	335,645

The percentages of enrollment to school population have been:

School year.	Per cent. of enrollment.
1870-71	63.63
1879-80	73.37
1899-90	77.38
1899-1900	79.56
1906-7	87.76

These percentage figures show gratifying progress in the State, educationally.

The per cent. of the total population of the State enrolled in the common schools rose from 15.61 in 1870-71, to 20.04 in 1906-7.

The record of average daily attendance is:

1870-71	64.286
1879-80	100.996
1889-90	146.589
1899-1900	197.395
1906-7	247.880

In this period the average number of days the schools were kept during the year increased from 123 to 171, giving, in 1906-7, an aggregate of 42,387,480 days' attendance. The average number of days attended by each pupil in that year was 126.3.

In 1906-7 the teachers numbered 9,714, of whom 8,439 were women and 1275 men. The average monthly salary of the men is $112.04, and of the women, $76.06, making a general average of $80.54.

The number of schoolhouses in 1906-7 was 3868, and the value of all school property totaled $36,680,310. Both of these items are larger now.

In addition, 37,226 pupils were enrolled in the private schools of the State, making a total public and private school enrollment of 372,871, out of the total school population of 382,451.

The year's total school revenue (excluding balances on hand and proceeds of bond sales) was $10,913,730, derived from:

Local taxes	$ 6,020,156
State taxes	4,300,379
From other sources	593,195
Total	$10,913,730

besides the income from $5,314,050 permanent school funds.

The total school expenditure for the year, exclusive of payments on bonds, was $12,218,705, of which large sum, $7,422,575 went, and properly so, to pay teachers' and superintendents' salaries.

California's expenditure of more than a million dollars a month ($49.29 per pupil per year) is really California's best investment.

THE FIRST SCHOOL DAY.

The bells rang out their wild alarms,
One morning sweet and cool,
And then they scrubbed his wee brown arms
And sent him off to school.
They robed the wee brown legs of him,
They shod his bare, brown feet,
And sent him with his bright eyes dim,
The vague, dread task to meet.

The squirrel on the old fence rail
Looked sad when he passed by,
And signaled with his bushy tail
The bee and butterfly.
He wandered o'er the dimpled stream,
That wept its tears of mists,
To see him pass from lands o' dreams
With gyves upon his wrists.

Many a lingering look he turned
Upon the fearsome road,
And hot his heart within him burned
Beneath the cruel goad;
And when he turned and saw her there—
His mother at the gate—
He wrestled with his first despair,
And railed his first at fate.

Well it was for his grand emprise
That sped by mire and moat,
He could not see his mother's eyes
Or hear her sobbing throat;
He could but hear her cheery calls,
And see the proud, high glance,
That bade him storm the foeman's walls
With shield and lifted lance.

He left, at last, his native street,
To brave strange fields and new,
The surging, alien crowds to meet
Where friends were all too few;
He bravely passed with sturdy tread,
Nor quailed at shout and din,
And lifted high his sunny head
When closed his dungeon in.

O little boy, with heart care-free,
O little bare, brown feet,
That wandered with the bird and bee
On mornings cool and sweet,
Rough is the path you now must dare
O'er valley, plain and hill,
But then, as now, while on you fare,
May God be with you still.

German Universities.

The number of students at the German universities continues to increase. There were 51,700 matriculated students this year, compared with 47,799 last summer. Of these 25,638 attended the Prussian universities. The chief increase took place in philology, medicine, natural science and especially in dentistry. There were 11,657 law students, 9642 in medicine, 13,911 in philology and history, and 7385 in mathematics and natural science. Berlin, as usual, heads the list, with 7194. There were at Leipzig 4581; at Bonn, 3801; Freiburg, 2760; Breslau, 2347; Halle, 2310; Gottingen, 2239; Heidelberg, 2171; Marburg, 2134; Tubingen, 1921; Jena, 1606; Munich, 1547, and Wurzburg, 1369.—[London Athenaeum.

The Public School System of Los Angeles.

PUPILS AND TEACHERS.

HOW THE CITY SCHOOLS WILL BE OPENED NEXT MONTH.

ON THE morning of September 13, in this Queen City of Southern California, an army of more than 40,000 students will move from all parts of Los Angeles to the eighty-five school buildings, where 1164 teachers will stand ready to meet them. The school year of 1909-10 will have begun.

The remarkable number of institutions, pupils and instructors in this city make of the event one of great importance. In order that this date may be well defined in the mind of the public, the Board of Education has decided that the opening of the public schools will hereafter always take place on the Monday nearest to September 10. This year it will fall upon the 13th, and at 8 o'clock in the morning of that day, the enrollment of the student body will begin. No ceremonials will be observed, and the work will proceed as quietly and quickly as circumstances will permit.

Of the vast army of 40,000 students, about 35,000 will be comprised in the classes of the first eight years, to be instructed in the kindergarten, primary and grammar schools. The balance of approximately 5000 will frequent the High Schools. The probable attendance of the night schools will be in the neighborhood of 500 for the elementaries and of 1500 for the High Schools. Their number is comprised in the total of 40,000. While this last figure represents a tolerably correct estimate of the initial enrollment, it will in all probability be greatly augmented during the school year, especially in the months of February and March. At that time, the army of students may be swelled to some 50,000, and the force of instructors proportionately increased.

THE STUDENTS' QUARTERS.

There are at present in the city eighty-four school buildings, of which four, however, are classed as temporary structures. They are: The Fifty-first-street school, the Fifty-second-street school, the Sixty-eighth-street school and the Marengo-street school.

Another similar building at East Sixty-sixth and Main streets, known as the Sixty-sixth-street school, will be ready for occupancy on the opening date of the school year, September 13. Of the eighty permanent structures, four are High Schools, known, respectively, as the Los Angeles High School, Polytechnic High School, Gardena High School and Olive-street school. The last-named was opened to students in February, 1909. The other buildings are kindergarten, primary, grammar and evening schools.

The problem which the school board is constantly facing is to give accommodation and instruction to every pupil that applies for them, whether in the elementary or in the High Schools. If the total enrollment were not in excess of 40,000, the solution would be achieved by erecting buildings, or frame annexes to the main schoolhouses. This course was followed during the past year, 1908-09, when additional quarters were added to the Vernon-avenue school, the Fourteenth-sreet school, the San Pedro-street school and the Hooper-street school. But these provisions could not prevent overcrowding, nor avoid a diminished efficiency in the instruction of the classes. During that year the maximum enrollment was 43,716 for the elementary and 4711 for the High Schools, including the attendance at the night institutions. The overflow, which worked hardships upon the system in general, was about 800 for the lower grades, and perhaps 300 for the High Schools. These were cared for in the manner stated, and caused much dissatisfaction. From present indications, it appears that during the coming year the overflow in the High Schools will easily exceed 400, and while no estimate can be formed upon that in the elementaries, it will undoubtedly be much superior to last year's. According to the school officials, the same adverse conditions already experienced will be renewed when the work of instruction begins again. All through the Ninth and Sixth wards the congestion will be great. The Cornwell-street, the Bridge-street and the Euclid-avenue schools are expecting to be overcrowded, although provided with temporary extra quarters. The institutions in the southeast sections will suffer likewise, despite their annexes.

NONE TURNED AWAY.

In all probability many families will send their sons and daughters to private institutions, as was the case last year, and if this movement takes place to any considerable extent it will bring about some relief. However, the school board officials affirm that no applicant who desires to frequent the schools and receive instruction will be turned away, and that, should the situation warrant it, some of the pupils will be put on half-day time in order to make room for others.

With regard to the night schools, the expected increase over the attendance of last year will be cared for by making use of the day schools' quarters, by which system it is proposed to avoid any crush.

Actual relief can only be obtained, it is said, through the erection of new permanent buildings, and for this purpose large sums of money will be necessary.

NEW BUILDINGS PLANNED.

Plans have been made for the following definite projects:

(1.) The erection of a modern manual training High School, to be located, probably, in the south section of the city.

(2.) The enlargement and completion of the Gardena High School.

(3.) The building of an addition to the Polytechnic High School.

This will be accomplished with the High School portion of the bonds. The money obtained form the elementary school bonds is to be devoted to the construction of new grammar schools, according as their need is made manifest.

Citizens of the southwest, southeast and northeast sections of Los Angeles are clamoring, according to the Board of Education, for school facilities, and it is affirmed their demands will receive attention immediately following the legalization of the school bonds. A school building in the northeast part would relieve the Cornwell-street school, and it is also planned to form a new district there. An institution at Sixteenth and Arlington streets is considered indispensable.

TEACHERS EMPLOYED.

The erection of new buildings is not the only consequence of the increased number of students. Proportionately to the enrollment, the force of teachers must also be augmented. The precise number to be employed the coming year cannot be determined until September 1, whn the board will convene, but the following figures are believed to be what the circumstances will require. (The number employed last year is noted for comparison:)

	1908-09.	1907-08.
Kindergarten	110	106
Special teachers Increase, none.	14	14
Primary and grammar Increase, 30.	807	840
High School Increase, 9.	170	161

The number of primary and grammar school teachers includes those of the deaf and dumb, of the cooking and of the evening elementary schools, and also the principals, of whom there is one to each institution. Last year the evening High School teachers numbered eleven, while this year an increase to fifteen is foreseen. Some of these, however also teach in the day schools.

Whether or not the bond issue is made legal by the courts, the increased number of teachers will be maintained. The schedule of salaries for the previous two years will be readopted, the maximum for the elementaries remaining at $984 and that of the High Schools at $1500. If the number of pupils increases during the year to such a degree as to require a further augmentation in the force of teachers, this will at once be made.

FINANCIAL SITUATION.

At the beginning of the last school year, the High School department had a credit balance of $14,499.93, and the lower grades a balance of $262,565.96. The total income during the year ending June 30, 1909, for the High Schools was $237,276.85, and for the lower grades it amounted to $1,236,518.91.

The total expenses for the High Schools, not including money paid for sites, buildings and furniture, for the same year were $254,105. The total expenses for the elementaries, excluding the same items as for the high grades, were $1,017,766.

The valuations of the buildings and sites for the last two years are as follows:

1907-08—Value of school buildings and furniture, $2,254,287.

1907-08—Value of school grounds, $2,427,100.

1908-09—Value of elementary school properties, including libraries and general apparatus, $4,058,839.

1908-09—Value of High School properties, including same items as with elementary schools, $839,590.

The liabilities for the school year ending June 30, 1909, amount to $200,000, approximately.

The average number of pupils to each teacher in charge of a class-room was, on average daily attendance, 33; on enrollment, 46.

The average cost per pupil on current expenses was, on attendance, $42.75; on enrollment, $30.32. The average cost in the kindergarten was $21.59; in primary and grammar grades, $29.23; in the High School department, $63.99. The average cost per capita for school purposes was $5.38. In the opinion of the school officials, when the figures corresponding to the above for the school year ending last June are compiled, it will be found that their average has been increased. This, it is believed, will be especially noticeable in the cost per capita.

It is the object of this city to have many moderate-sized schools, rather than a few large ones, and this entails the employment of an unusual number of principals. The extension of the special work, as of the kindergarten, to every part of the city, and to include every child, the introduction of medical inspection, the extension of several kinds of manual work to every grade, the establishment of ungraded rooms and truant schools, with small numbers of pupils, all contribute to swell the expenses of the school system. Still, it is shown that the current expenses of this department are lower than other cities of its size, the average cost per capita for school purposes in thirteen of the most important cities in the United States being about $5.87. During the year 1907-08 the total cost of schools per capita of pupils in average attendance, including cost of building, a 20 per cent. increase in the salaries of the teachers, and other expenses, was $51.10.

The United States Commissioner of Education gives the following figures as the average cost per pupil in average attendance:

New York State	$51.10
Montana	49.40
Nevada	72.15
California	49.29

These figures were published three years ago, and are officially reported to be lower than those piled on last year's reports.

The total cost per capita of pupils in average ance in cities containing over 8000 inhabit year 1906-07 was reported from the being:

BUSINESS PRACTICE.

YOUNG WOMEN

Would You Be

A more practical musician and artist;
A more successful physician and nurse;
A more resourceful writer and author;
A more influential leader;
A better teacher and superintendent;
A more capable business woman;
A more efficient home maker?

"Just like a woman," is often said of the fair customer after some unbusiness-like transaction on her part. You do not want to be criticized in that way. The Los Angeles business course will protect you from embarrassment, dependence, inefficiency and want.

About half of our students are young ladies. They come from families of refinement and common sense. They come to be with superior students, and to enjoy the instruction of superior teachers. They come to qualify for the best positions, and they are not disappointed.

SHORTHAND & TYPEWRITING DEPARTMENT

In teaching Shorthand, our plan is to give you, first, a thorough knowledge of the principles. To increase your shorthand vocabulary, we give you a variety of work, and watch your notes carefully to see that you make correct outlines. We work for accuracy first, last and always.

The typewriting is arranged in regular periods. You learn the touch method, so that you can look away from the keys while writing. Our special service to you is the careful correcting of all papers.

Most stenographers are more or less deficient. Business men tell us this; also that the majority are inaccurate. We want you to graduate above criticism, and these are the reasons why we have strengthened our course at every point.

Your work includes correspondence, billing, tabulating, filing, duplicating, mimeographing, and a hundred practical office details—novel and interesting.

Briefly, this course will cultivate in you the habits of: (1) alertness, (2) accuracy, (3) system, (4) observation, (5) expression, (6) self-reliance and (7) action, which will be sources of satisfaction to yourself and to your associates as long as you live.

One of the most noted educational institutions in the Southwest is the Brownsberger Commercial College, located at No. 953-7 West Seventh street. This College was founded by Mrs. Florida Brownsberger in July, 1902. For three years previously Mrs. Brownsberger had conducted the largest shorthand school either in the city or State. The expert teaching and management of her shorthand school, and its phenomenal growth and singular success, created a demand on the part of the public for full commercial work under her supervision. Accordingly, the latter department was added in 1902. The animus and controlling principle of this College is for the moral uplift of its pupils, in connection with unusually sound and thorough business teaching and training. In harmony with this governing principle, Mrs. Brownsberger always has, and always intends, to keep her pupils a little removed from the business center, and surrounded with beautiful, attractive and refining environments. Her great home on West Seventh street has been adapted to the higher as well as the business needs of her students, and in this great institution is seen, in wonderful harmony, a unique combination of the best a modern, high-grade business college can offer, with the elevating, refining, satisfying conditions of a great home, in a setting of lawns, palms, vines, ers, recreation grounds and open where pupils are perfectly at home, contented and safe. Such a combination achievement is possible in our beautiful ern California, and appeals strongly thoughtful, discriminating parents and people, as well as to those who have for studied under the usual conventional tions of the schools, and who realize that restful mental atmosphere of Brownsberger is satisfying and helpful.

Mr. Charles Benson, the principal of the Brownsberger Commercial School, has for a number of years past been one of the most successful commercial teachers and principals of the East. After graduating from the public schools of Iowa, Mr. Benson spent several years in attendance at the great Iowa State Normal School, and received a life diploma for teaching in Iowa. He was then engaged in public school teaching for several years, later becoming connected with an old-established commercial college of Iowa, and was the head of the institution a year or two later. We have no hesitation in saying that all students who are so fortunate as to come under his instruction will find him a most sympathetic and capable teacher.

Mrs. Charles Benson, principal of the Brownsberger Typewriting School, was thoroughly educated in the public schools and colleges of the East. After teaching in graded schools for some time, she made preparation for commercial teaching, in which field she has had remarkable success. She is the author of a system of touch-method typewriting, and an expert typist. Her students regard her as a master of the subject she teaches. Her efficiency, together with her winning personality, make her popular in the classroom as well as out of it.

Mrs. Anna M. J. Crouse, principal of the Brownsberger Penmanship School, formerly resided in Iowa, where she received a thorough education, including a complete business course. She afterward took special instruction in penmanship and pen art from such renowned penmen as A. N. Palmer, L. Madaraz, L. M. Thornburg and C. W. Ransom, all of whom are at the head of their profession. After receiving her business education Mrs. Crouse was bookkeeper in the late Gov. Drake's bank at Centerville, Iowa, for several years, and later was supervisor of penmanship in high schools. President Sweet of Santa Rosa College, former president of the Oregon State Normal School, says: "I regard Mrs. Crouse as the finest lady penman living. If she has an equal, I do not know it." Mrs. Crouse has proved her efficiency, not only as a teacher of penmanship, but as an instructor in bookkeeping, arithmetic and other branches.

The managers and principals named above, with the other instructors of Brownsberger, constitute the strongest corps of teachers in the State of California.

It is a significant fact that the Brownsberger Commercial College draws students from nearly every State in the Union. We present above a group containing thirty of the forty or more representatives from different States and counties, who were enrolled within the past year. We venture the assertion that no other commercial college in the United States enrolls students from so wide a field.

Interior View of the Shorthand Halls—seating capacity 250.

The Commercial School

The commercial course includes bookkeeping, double entry, business practice, retail, single and double entry, columnar books, wholesaling and manufacturing, business practice, office work, banking and experting, business arithmetic, commercial law, business correspondence, business penmanship, spelling and rapid calculation.

The stenographic course includes shorthand, typewriting, grammar, penmanship, business practice, spelling, defining, punctuation, filling out blanks, billing, preparing account sales, invoices and bills, mimeographing, neostyling, tabulating, writing postal cards, legal documents and telegrams, the use of letterheads, personal voice dictation and use of phonograph records in both the shorthand and typewriting rooms.

The Brownsberger owns nearly double the number of machines to be found in any other business college in Southern California. The reason for this heavy investment is that the Brownsberger graduates may be known as excelling all others.

The Brownsberger Evening School is under the same management and instructors as the Day School. The same subjects are taught, pupils are graduated, receive diplomas, and are assisted in obtaining positions.

The Study of Music.

EXCEPTIONAL ADVANTAGES OFFER IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

AS THE balmy climate, sunny skies and invigorating outdoor influences of Southern California naturally predispose her people to the arts, so is there a bent in particular towards music.

That Southern California, per ratio of its population, develops more great singers, wonder-violinists and geniuses of the piano than any other section of the country can be easily proven. Southern California girls are prominent, this year, in opera in New York, Paris, Brussels and throughout Italy. Los Angeles boys are winning fame as instrumentalists in almost every continental capitol.

And as these natural products arise with greater and greater frequency, the teaching and general education facilities of Los Angeles and its immediately surrounding territory increase in equal proportion.

Two or three of the music schools of Los Angeles are on the way to become among the largest in this country. Quite a number already rank with any institution as to the standing and past accomplishments of teachers already employed.

It has been proven by carefully-compiled statistics that there are not less than 10,000 music students in Los Angeles, and this number is increasing every day.

To care for these there must be not only teachers with private, individual clienteles, but schools—big schools, schools which give the student a chance to hear fine works finely played, institutions where not only the actual performance, but the history, science and veritable art of music is correctly set before the pupil.

A number of the best music schools in Los Angeles have arisen in the outlying districts. Many of these teachers went out from five to ten years ago, when land was cheap and residences few, and accumulated some property and also a sort of professional prestige in their respective neighborhoods. Then, as settlement proceeded rapidly, and all vacant lots were taken up, these schools were enlarged, facilities were added and from the undertaking of the private teacher, possibly assisted by his family, the school-form has grown into actual fact.

The writer has in mind several schools of this kind, all of them flourishing, all of them legitimately conducted, with a high and honest purpose as the dominant motive, and all of them sending forth a regular quota of cultured, artistic young people every year.

Downtown, at least one building—the Blanchard—has become notable throughout the country for its many musical activities. The Blanchard building is a sort of Los Angeles Carnegie Hall, and many are the teachers who have busy days upon its three floors.

Yet other large new buildings in the downtown district have been making places for studios and music-school facilities. The building of the Young Women's Christian Association, Hamburger's Majestic Theater building, and other modern structures might be instanced here.

As far as special branches are concerned, voice seems to have the lead among teachers and pupils, with violin and piano closely seconding, and perhaps tying each other for second place.

The vocal teachers of Los Angeles represent the foremost schools of every country. There are teachers from Paris, teachers from Berlin, teachers from Milan, and teachers, also, from our progressive American institutions which, it must be remembered, appear to take the best of every country by a process of careful selection.

The pianistic teaching ranks are really notable, including a number of men who have won recognition for their own meritorious performances in every European capital.

The same may be said about the violin teachers, several of whom are not only well-known as instructors of others, but have themselves been virtuosi of no mean renown.

Even composition is honored in Los Angeles, for the writings of Los Angeles musicians are being published monthly by music-houses practically around the world. Church pieces by one Los Angeles teacher are presented in every English-speaking country. Another teacher has composed some brilliant piano music, while a third has jumped into celebrity as an orchestral composer.

The orchestral field is not neglected, either, as there are instructors here in every orchestral branch, and their pupil-products, aggregated into several non-professional orchestras, give very enjoyable concerts at intervals during the year.

As for the fakir: he is under every brush pile of large teaching, but the musical profession of Los Angeles has waged for him and his unclean kind the most vigorous campaign ever given in this country, without doubt.

Years ago, when the field was new and the picking good, indeed, the half-baked, ignorant teacher, flourished here.

But his downfall came with the organization of the powerful Gamut and Dominant Clubs, two of the most unique fraternal bodies in American music. The Gamut Club, especially, since it is a regular club organization of men, has waged increasing war on the fakir, and the brotherly intercourse of musician and musician, and the club's various public-spirited promotions, have done much to cleanse the musical atmosphere of the town.

All in all, the teaching profession in Los Angeles, as far as music is concerned, is one of the finest and most representative bodies in America—wide-awake, progressive, keen to its own shortcomings, even after the newest and best in method and production.

Los Angeles is famous for the musicians it has sent forth into the great and critical centers of the East and Europe—but it could not have become famous without the faithful, honest, persistent and talented teacher behind the prodigy.

Music and Arts.

LOS ANGELES CONSERVATORY OLDEST INSTITUTION OF KIND IN CITY.

THE Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts, now in its twenty-sixth year, is the oldest establishment of its kind in Southern California, perhaps the only one in the entire State that has been continuously under the same management for more than a quarter of a century. It was founded in 1883 by Mrs. Emily J. Valentine, who still remains its active director and president, and who probably has tutored more pupils in music than any other teacher in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Valentine reports that the past year has been the most satisfactory and successful in her long career of conducting the Los Angeles conservatory. This happy result is due in a great measure to a change in the location of the conservatory from No. 327½ South Spring street, which was the home of the school for eight years, to the Walker Auditorium building at Nos. 730-732 South Grand avenue, where the institution has more commodious quarters and better facilities to accommodate its growing patronage.

Branch studios are conducted at University, Boyle Heights and Highland Park, this city; Long Beach, Pasadena, Tropico, Glendale and Burbank, with competent teachers in charge.

The course of study is graded from kindergarten to post-graduate. Monthly ratings and quarterly annual examinations make it impossible for be promoted except on merit. Certificates are to preparatory intermediate and academic pupils finish the various grades of their work. The advanced pupils receive silver and gold medals to the diploma, and finally post-graduate study. ers' certificates are issued to those taking the course.

The branches taught are: Vocal, piano, organ, violoncello, cornet, clarinet, flute, harp, guitar, lin and banjo.

The faculty consists of ten principal teachers twenty assistants, or studio teachers, all under rection of the veteran principal, Mrs. Emily J. tine.

A very notable addition to the faculty has been made in the person of Mr. Vincent Morgan, known vocalist and composer. Mr. Morgan has of the glee club, which is one of the popular of the conservatory.

The roomy and elegantly-appointed halls Walker Auditorium building give ample room for recitals and entertainments by pupils in music, various drills and recitals given under direction Laura Hoxworth Weston, principal of the school tory, which is included witn the conservatory.

The Los Angeles Conservatory of Music cial opportunity for orchestra work, Earl tine, director of that branch of the conservatory one of the foremost orchestra leaders of the Valentine is instructor of the violin, viola, and orchestration. He has under him in this ment special teachers for string and brass

Other members of the faculty are Mrs. Adelia ter, piano, harmony and recital programmes; M. Brown, piano; Amiel G. Rinckel, guitar, and banjo; George Horton Valentine, physical culture; Miss Ada H. Street, theory clubs; Miss Blanche H. Fowler, musical (Burrows method;) Miss Hazel E. Bamborough history and Virgil practice clavier; Mrs. L. leod, art and design. The president, Mrs. Valentine, has personal charge of the vocal, organ and harmony departments.

The conservatory is open the whole year is the scene of many pleasant entertainments rates of tuition are very reasonable, it being of the worthy president to place a musical within the reach of the children of the poor of the rich.

St. Vincents College, Los Angeles

Where Your Boy Can Obtain a Thorough College Training Among the Surroundings You Want Him to Have

St. Vincent's is the oldest—and one of the foremost and most substantial institutions of higher education in the Southland. It was established in 1865, and from that time to now has kept pace with the marvelous growth of Los Angeles—and the advancement of scientific training.

The college has a unique central location in the very midst of the city's most refined residence section—quickly accessible to the business center—and yet quiet and domestic.

The college is a massive brick structure—with spacious and well-furnished apartments, ample lecture and class rooms, and well-lighted dormitories and private rooms; hot and cold showers, physical and chemical laboratories and commercial rooms. It is surrounded by attractive lawns, ample grounds and a splendid college campus.

The aim of the St. Vincent system of education is to develop the whole man by a variety of studies and well calculated to bring out the latent talents of each student—to surround each student with elevating, refining influences—and to provide sufficient wholesome recreation for the proper development of both body and mind.

Competent Instructors The St. Vincent staff of instructors represents the best learned and most successful teachers in their respective branches—to be found in any western college today. The men at the head of each department have been associated with St. Vincent's for years—their long service together enables them to give an instruction service of unsurpassed efficiency. A boy can come to St. Vincent's right from the seventh or eighth grades and obtain his education right on up through the High School and College courses—until he obtained his highest degree.

Consistent Athletics The St. Vincent's idea is to give the student every means and opportunity for such physical exercise as is deemed essential and beneficial to the proper development of the body—and yet to moderate any abnormal attention to amusements. Baseball, football, basketball, handball, tennis and other manly sports are fostered—and are under the supervision of capable coaches.

The St. Vincent's gymnasium is one of the finest in the Southwest. It is a very large and completely-equipped building and contains a spacious hall for physical culture exercise and indoor basketball—dressing-rooms, lockers, showers, toilets and a splendid swimming pool.

All applicants for admission to the college are required to present testimonials for their good moral character. Those leaving other schools and coming to St. Vincent's are required to present letters of recommendation from the school they are leaving. The enforcement of this policy makes St. Vincent's a perfectly safe—and particularly desirable institution where any mother may feel entirely justified in sending her boy.

The students here live entirely apart from all evil influences and are taught by example the value of manliness, politeness and courtesy. The younger boys have the care and attention that they would receive at home—and are constantly among desirable associations. They have separate dormitory, study and class rooms and campus.

The entire discipline—while it is not severe nor unreasonable—is strict and consistant and calculated to elevate the students to their highest moral development.

Owing to its central and accessible location, St. Vincent's is an ideal college for day students. The college hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., with an hour's recess at noon. Where day students so desire, they may take dinner at the college.

Business Education.

OUR COMMERCIAL SCHOOLS AS GOOD AS THE BEST IN THE COUNTRY.

IN THE great system of modern education there is no class of institutions that excels in importance in its relation to the great work-a-day world the "business college," as special schools for the inculcation of business forms and methods are termed.

Time was, and that scarcely more than one generation ago, when the only business education obtainable was by the hard school of experience, which meant a long apprenticeship in a business house in a clerical capacity, and perhaps a failure or two before the would-be business man learned the "tricks of his trade," if that term may be used to express the technical knowledge required to conduct any business successfully.

This is an age of specializing and no man nor woman is fitted for a successful business career without having gained a technical knowledge of certain business forms and methods. The three "R's"—Readin', 'Ritin' an' 'Rithmetic—used to be considered sufficient education for any man in the little old red schoolhouse days. The curriculum of the public schools has been considerably enlarged—too much so, some people think—in these twentieth-century times, and commercial high schools are now part of the educational system of every progressive municipality.

But for all that, most of the captains of industry and their lieutenants and members of their business staffs and office forces are recruited from the "business colleges" of the land, which make a speciality of training the young to carry on the great business interests of the country.

The principal branches taught in business colleges are book-keeping, accounting, shorthand, typewriting, penmanship, orthography, grammar, arithmetic, letter-writing, etc. The best business colleges have fully-equipped mimic banks, stock exchanges, mercantile establishments, etc. All kinds of practical business forms and methods are used and taught. Some business colleges include telegraphy and railway accounting in their courses. There are also separate telegraph and railroad schools, where railway, commercial and wireless telegraphy and railway business alone are taught. Such schools also properly come under the head of "business colleges."

In point of equipment and general excellence of instruction Los Angeles business colleges, of which there are at least half a dozen, compare favorably with any in the entire country. In fact they are, possibly with a few minor exceptions, as good as the best anywhere. They are so good, in fact, and afford such superior advantages, that many business college students come here from other States, some of them attracted chiefly by the climate, no doubt, but all of them as well instructed here as elsewhere.

The quarters occupied by some of the Los Angeles business colleges are sumptuous, almost palatial, in some instances. Some are located on the upper floors of great office buildings, close to the great arteries of trade, where the students almost breathe in business with the very air. Others are in commodious buildings of their own, specially constructed for the comfort and convenience of the students and thoroughly equipped with all of the latest office furnishings and equipments. Still others are located in the residence districts amid green lawns and waving palms, far from the noise and dust of traffic, where the pupils' minds can be concentrated on their work and studies and where they can breathe the pure, sweet air of the surrounding perfume-exuding gardens.

The rates of tuition in the local business colleges are about the same as in most institutions of the same class in other parts of the country, while the comforts and advantages to be enjoyed are greater than in most commercial schools outside of California. From $50 to $60 is the usual charge for a six months' course, and $75 to $100 for one year. The monthly rate is usually $10.

The length of time required to complete the book-keeping or the shorthand course is usually six months or one year for the combined course. The length of time required to qualify for a position at good pay either as a book-keeper or a stenographer, depends entirely upon the aptness and diligence of the pupil and his proficiency, at time of entrance, in the common branches taught in the public or private schools. A pupil of average ability, well grounded in English, orthography and arithmetic, can complete a book-keeping or shorthand course very handily in six months, and both in one year. Some exceptionally bright students who have a good elementary education at the time of entering a business college, become good book-keepeds and stenographers in much less time than prescribed by the regular course.

Nearly all of the first-class business colleges find salaried positions for their graduates as soon as they secure their diplomas. There is great demand for trained book-keepers, stenographers and general office help. The salaries commanded by business college graduates depend altogether upon the efficiency of the individuals and their usefulness to their employers.

Good stenographers, such as court reporters, are among the best paid workers outside of executive positions. The opportunities for rising in the world when one is a good stenographer and secretary are unlimited. George Bruce Cortelyou of New York, who started in life as a musician, learned shorthand as a more sure method of making a livelihood, became amanuensis and secretary to three Presidents of the United States—Cleveland, McKinley and Roosevelt; held two important secretaryships in the Cabinet of the last named, was seriously considered as an available candidate for President, himself, and is now head of a large New York banking house.

Business college graduates have first call on nearly all good clerical positions these days, and hardly any young man presumes to start on a business career without first taking a course in a business college. No matter what vocation a young man or young woman intends to follow, the knowledge gained by taking a business college course is almost sure to prove advantageous. It would be a fine thing if every grammar or high school graduate could top off with a business college course.

Business colleges are for both sexes, the student body usually being about equally divided by young men and young women. The young woman or young man who has a diploma from a business college almost invariably commands better wages to begin with than the employé who lacks special business training.

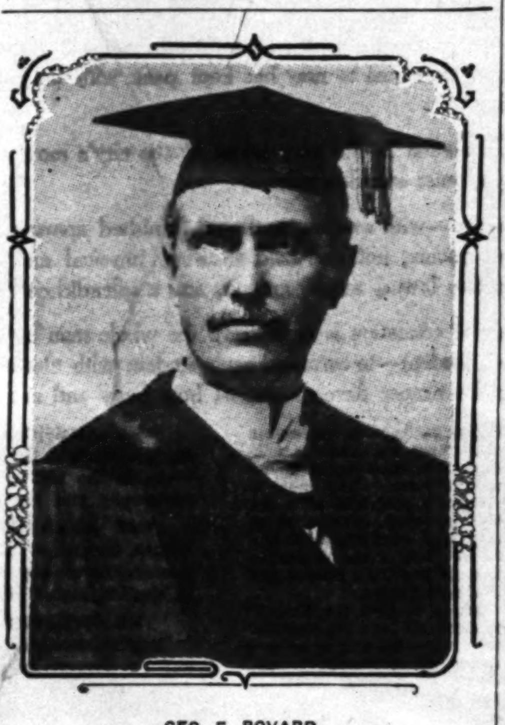
Nearly every city of 5000 population and over has one or more business colleges these days. There are several good ones in Southern California outside of Los Angeles, although most of those in this city have superior advantages.

COLLEGE OF FINE ARTS.

WHERE NATURE ADDS INSPIRATION TO ARTISTIC TEMPERAMENT.

The College of Fine Arts of the University of Southern California is located in an artistic structure, standing on the brink of the charming Arroyo Seco, where the inspiration of nature adds to the development of the artistic temperament.

Dean William M. Judson eight years ago introduced a plan of art teaching that has proved splendidly successful, and the gallery of the school bears testimony to the success of pupils of the institution. Its walls are covered with works of rare art, that give evidence not only of talent in the student, but of master instruction.



GEO. F. BOVARD,
President of University of Southern California.

The course of study includes clay modelling, mechanical drawing, projection, perspective, free-hand drawing, painting in water color and oil, art history, mythology, sacred history, anatomy and the art crafts, embracing three full years' work.

Dean Judson is a well-known artist of recognized ability, and his pictures have won for him a name among the artists of America and Europe.

U. S. C. COLLEGE OF LAW.

EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR STUDENTS OF JURISPRUDENCE.

With a record of over 225 students enrolled last year, the College of Law, University of Southern California, has shown its popularity among the ambitious young men of Southern California. Certificates of graduation from a four years' high school course are accepted without examination.

The purpose of the college is to impart a sound and thorough legal education, and to fully qualify students for admission to the bar for practice in local, State and Federal courts. Courses are given in briefing and the use of books, and in addition to the briefs required in most courts, subjects for briefs are assigned by the members of the faculty. The completion of the three-year course entitles the graduate to receive the degree of LL.B., and an additional year of post-graduate work gives him the degree of LL.M. Each student is entitled to receive four hours' instruction per week in the College of Liberal Arts, without additional cost.

The fact that students can have here in Los Angeles access to the Superior Courts, State Supreme Court, United States Circuit and District Courts, and the Police Courts is of the utmost importance in acquiring a thorough knowledge of actual practice.

The school has a working library of 1500 volumes, and in addition students have use of the County Law Library of 20,000 volumes, upon the same terms as members of the bar. The Debating Club, the Lyceum and the Oratorical Association give ample opportunity for students to learn how to acquit themselves in public debate.

Frank M. Porter is dean, and the faculty includes many of the best-known attorneys and jurists in California.

University of Southern California

THE growth of Los Angeles during the past five years has been marvelous; and the city seems but to have begun a career of magnificent expansion. Along with the city has grown the University. Los Angeles is the natural location for the leading educational institution in the southern half of the State. California is a great State, almost imperial in her proportions. Her area nearly equals that of the empire of Japan as it was before the recent Japanese acquisitions through war; and the long coast line passes through many parallels of latitude. San Francisco is far from the northern and Los Angeles is a long way from the southern frontier; and yet no less a space than five hundred miles divides the two cities from one another.

On San Francisco Bay are situated what have hitherto been the most important seats of learning in the State—the University of California at Berkeley, and the Leland Stanford Junior University at Palo Alto. There is more than room for a third university of equal strength and prestige, supported by Southern Californians as their own seat of learning. Such an institution has been growing up within the limits of the City of the Angels; and the University of Southern California stands today in a proud position which astonishes the alumni who come back to visit her. As an instance of this growth, one circumstance alone may suffice. Four years ago the number of freshmen who entered the College of Liberal Arts numbered 67, and could be handled in a single general rhetoric class; last year their number rose to 170, and three divisions were found necessary for teaching purposes. This year the university has to prepare for an entering class of 200, with four divisions.

While the College of Liberal Arts of the University of Southern California still keeps in close touch with the Methodist Church, others of the eight colleges which come under her charter have no such close relationship. Nor are the religious influences that are brought to bear on the Arts College students in the least degree of a sectarian kind; rather are they in the broadest and most generous sense evangelical, such as Christian parents of any creed or denomination would like to see operative. One of the pressing problems of the day is how best to give youth a standard or moral character, without which learning is of no avail. Moral soundness is the crying need of the day. This is a primary end with the administration and the faculty.

The chapel services are carefully arranged for, and conducted in a devout manner; and men of light and leading are invited from time to time to speak to the students at chapel time. This is a part of the college curriculum which counts for a great deal.

There is a resident secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, who has an office in the main building with reading-room attached. There is also a paid secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, who looks after the moral and religious needs of the girl students. The Y. W. C.A. room is conveniently arranged for her duties.

The colleges of the university, eight in number, are housed in different parts of the city. At Wesley avenue and Thirty-sixth street stand the very attractive new quarters of the College of Liberal Arts. On the same campus the Colleges of Music, of Pharmacy, and of Oratory and Theology have their halls of instruction. The Colleges of Law and Dentistry are in the heart of the city, and the College of Fine Arts has its home in Garvanza, at the extreme eastern end of the city, on the way to Pasadena.

Four years ago the College of Liberal Arts moved into its new building. The excellent and finished equipment of the biology laboratories excites the admiration of all who visit them. An authority in science, who is acquainted with the best laboratories in Europe and America, declared that no better or completer suite of laboratory rooms, arranged for undergraduate purposes, existed anywhere; certainly their equal did not exist on this coast. A new physical laboratory has just been opened in the same wing; and so rapid has been the expansion of the college within this period that the chemistry halls proved too cramped for the accommodation of students, and a new frame building had to be constructed on the campus.

The Assay and Metallurgical Laboratory occupies a large room in this new chemistry building. The equipment consists of rock crushers, ore grinders of several kinds, amalgamating fans, etc., all driven by electricity. The furnaces are of the latest type, using gas for fuel. The equipment includes all the necessary apparatus for all kinds of assay work. The equipment includes apparatus for concentration and amalgamation tests, as well as a complete cyanide and chlorination plant. Special facilities are afforded for the electrolytic-reduction processes. The laboratory is modern in every detail.

The engineering courses established two years ago have drawn an increasing number of students, and this department is becoming one of the strongest in the university. It will begin the next semester with a strong addition to its teaching staff.

The course in civil engineering is designed to give a practical as well as theoretical training. Nearly as much time is spent in the drawing room, laboratory and field as in the lecture room.

By consulting the schedule following it will be seen that considerable time is devoted to mathematics, English, modern languages and sciences. Of the more technical work, the field engineering is given very full treatment in lecture room, office and field.

A very large amount of important engineering work which is greatly diversified by the proximity of harbors, mines, irrigation and water supply projects, several trans-continental railway terminals, and a very extensive electric power, and interurban railway system, is continually going on in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Students in this department, accompanied by instructors, are required to inspect much of this work, and to present written reports on what they have seen.

The professional degrees of Civil Engineer and Electrical Engineer are conferred on graduates of the university in the Civil Engineering and Electrical Engineering courses, respertively, on the satisfactory completion, in residence, of one year of graduate study, or on having been engaged in the active practice of their profession for at least three years, two of which shall have involved responsibility, and the presentation of an approved thesis showing ability to do independent work.

The department of Sociology and Economics, under the care of a Johns Hopkins Ph.D., is growing in strength and importance. The regular work is supplemented by an extensive series of special lectures by leading experts on the Pacific Coast, and by visits to institutions and factories in the vicinity.

The Education department begins next winter with a strong addition to the personnel of its teaching staff.

The library is large and well lighted, carpeted, and furnished with shelving sufficient to hold about ten thousand volumes, with new tables and chairs for the convenience of the students. The number of volumes actually accessioned, public documents, and pamphlets, is nine thousand. The largest recent addition to the library is the "Dean George Cochran, D.D., Memorial Library," placed in the university by his son, George I. Cochran. Volumes chosen with special care to meet the needs of the various departments of the university have been added to the library during the year.

The Preparatory School is maintained in connection with the College of Liberal Arts. All of the instruction in the Preparatory School is under the supervision of the college faculty, thus insuring the best preparation for entrance to college. The students enjoy all the general advantages open to students in the college, including library, lectures, laboratories, religious and social privileges.

While the work of this school is mainly that of preparing students directly for the college, yet without lessening the work in this direction, the authorities realize the importance of giving increased attention to the large number of young people who desire academic instruction, but do not wish to devote the necessary time and means to secure a collegiate education.

There is a completely furnished gymnasium on the campus of the College of Liberal Arts; and systematic physical training under the care of a qualified corps of instructors, forms an integral part of the course for a degree. There are courts for tennis and basket-ball, and the Bovard athletic field is the finest in Southern California. During the past season the university teams easily carried off the honors in football and track work from all competitors in the south, and in a closely contested match with the Stanford University track team two years ago the home team scored 59 to 63, thus losing by only four points—a virtual draw. This year the university held meets with both Berkeley and Stanford.

In debating and oratory contests, the university has more than held her own. Out of eighteen annual oratorical debates held in the southern part of the State, twelve of the successful competitors have been U.S.C. students; this year the honors in the interscholastic oratorical contests among local high schools fell to a student representing the Academy of the university; and two other interscholastic prizes offered by the Prohibition and International Peace societies were gained by her students.

The university has to be known and visited by those who would form a correct idea of the great work she is doing and is destined to do. Under the administration of her excellent president, Dr. George F. Bovard, she is steadily coming to the front among national institutions of learning. Her instructors are well-known and valued citizens of Los Angeles, some of them having a name on both sides of the Atlantic; and with the growing confidence and appreciation of the educational community of Southern California, she is making it possible for Southern Californians to find in their own territory all the requisites of a complete higher education.

JOURNAL

Vol. XV. Fifth Floor, Hamburger Building, Los Angeles.

The Isaacs-Woodbury Enters Upon Its Second Quarter Century.

The School in Successful Operation Since July 19, 1884

TO THE PUBLIC:

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS! Quite a long period. And yet, the first twenty-five year period in the life of an individual does not amount to much as far as achievement is concerned. It is simply a period of growth—of preparation for achievement. This, however, cannot be said of an institution like the ISAACS-WOODBURY BUSINESS COLLEGE. Its first twenty-five years have been years of accomplishment, of results. This college is a center of vital and virile influence. The thousands of young men and young women who have been educated and inspired within its walls have gone forth into the world of affairs to achieve and to accomplish, each in turn becoming an individual center of power and influence. Thus the good work being accomplished by the school becomes an endless chain.

The second twenty-five-year period of an individual's life is his epoch of achievement, especially along the lines of business. An increasing number are now beginning to consider the third twenty-five-year period as the one during which a man's powers should be at their best; for by right living a man should retain indefinitely the vim and activity of youth, and the vigor and virility of manhood—and these should be reinforced continually by the prestige and wisdom of experience.

And it is thus that the ISAACS-WOODBURY enters upon its second quarter-century. A healthy and well-directed activity; a supreme desire to help and encourage young people; a strong and experienced faculty; practical courses of study and thoroughly systematized efforts; exceptionally fine business college quarters; a strong and influential clientele; thousands of successful ex-students, each a vital force and a valued friend; the confidence and indorsement of the best business men; a vigorous and progressive policy—these are among the factors that under normal conditions must produce great results and thus make the second twenty-five-year epoch one of even greater achievement than the first.

Respectfully,

Isaacs

President.

SEPTEMBER ENROLLMENT

The ISAACS-WOODBURY has no term divisions, and students may thus enroll ANY TIME. September, however, is the beginning of the most active enrollment, and all who contemplate entering in September are cordially invited to call at the college as soon as convenient to arrange preliminaries.

NO TIME TO CONDUCT A BUSINESS TRAINING SCHOOL.

An applicant, upon being questioned by the manager of a large wholesale house as to what he knew about office work, admitted that his knowledge was limited to a common school education, but was "willing to learn." The manager said sharply, "Sorry, young man, but we have no time to conduct a business training school in this establishment."

This is the case with every business man. He has not the time nor inclination to teach that which should be known, and which must be learned before making application. It will thus be seen that the modern business college is in existence, not as an ornament or a useless appendage, but as a necessity—as a supply to a demand. The high-grade business school is now receiving the recognition which its importance as an educational factor deserves. It was not always so.

SEEK HIGHER LEVELS.

It is not a question of getting a position. The first concern should be to prepare for one.

There should not be a shadow of a doubt in regard to securing a good position on the part of a healthy, intelligent young person who is thoroughly qualified.

Water seeks its level. So does the uneducated person; and likewise the educated. The purpose of the Isaacs-Woodbury Business College is to prepare young people for higher levels. It is true to its purpose.

A faculty of skilled and experienced teachers are employed, who thoroughly understand the requirements of business offices and how to train young people to render efficient service. Intelligent, capable, honest, enthusiastic workers are what the business world needs. These are a community's most valuable asset.

"BORN AGAIN"

To be born again is simply to enter into a larger and more abundant life. Institutions as well as individuals pass through such experiences—some often, some less often. It is a matter of initiative, of progressiveness, of "renewing of the spirit."

Six years ago the Woodbury, through new management, new quarters, and the infusion of new ideas, entered upon a new era and became the "Greater Woodbury." The school outgrew its new home, secured larger quarters in the great Hamburger Building, and now, as its first twenty-five year period closes, and it stands on the threshold of its second quarter-century, the school has been born again as the new and greater "Isaacs-Woodbury." The following resolutions by the Board of Directors are self-explanatory:

Resolutions

Whereas—Mr. Edward King Isaacs has been the active head of the Woodbury Business College since 1903—Mr. F. C. Woodbury, its founder, having severed his connection with the school in 1891, and died in 1898; and

Whereas—Mr. Isaacs has had over thirty years successful experience in school work, has a national reputation, is now in his prime, and is likely to remain a vital and virile force at the head of the institution during many years to come; and

Whereas—The undersigned members of the Board of Directors believe in the principle of "rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," and in according due courtesy and honor to one whose effective educational work entitles him to such recognition; therefore be it

Resolved—That the name, Isaacs, be incorporated in the name of this institution, and that hereafter the school be known as

Our College Women.

SOME OF THE SUCCESSFUL ONES—A BROAD SPIRIT NOTED.

THE colleges of Southern California offer unsurpassed advantages along all lines of education; and in most of the institutions women receive privileges co-equal with men. How they have used these privileges may be ascertained by looking over the facts as to the number of women graduated and enrolled in the prominent colleges.

Out of fifteen classes graduated from Occidental College, twelve contained women. Out of a total of 146 who have received diplomas from this institution, seventy-four—almost exactly 50 per cent.—were women. Two-thirds of this number have gone out within the last two years. Twenty-two have taken post-graduate courses in various universities either in this country or in Europe. Thirty-three have taught or are teaching, two of the number in colleges, most of the remainder in high schools or academies. There are five foreign missionaries, one librarian, one physician. One hundred and thirty-five women were students at Occidental the past year in the four classes of the college proper. Said the dean of the college: "They hold their own in competition with the young men in every department. Their presence is welcomed by the young men and by the college authorities. It must also be said that their influence over students of the opposite sex is decidedly helpful, their refinement going a long way toward improving the manners and the ideals of everybody else in the institution." Prominent in the faculty circles are Miss Anna Pearl Cooper, A.M., dean of the women and head of the English department, and Miss Mary Carruth Cunningham, A.M., head of the department of history. These are influential in all problems which come before the faculty for settlement; they are highly esteemed by their associates and by the student body, as well as in the life of the community in which they live.

MISS ANNA PEARL COOPER, M.A.,
Dean of Women, Occidental College.

In the University of Southern California women take a prominent part in all branches of study and upon the faculty. Of 432 students 194 are women. This institution has graduated 102 women, many of whom occupy prominent places in the educational world and in the arts and professions. Two of the most prominent physicians in the the city are women who received their medical education at this university. Among the women who are at the head of departments here are Margaret Graham Bostwick, A.B., head of the German department; Beulah Wright, dean of the College of Oratory and professor of oratory and dramatic art; Katherine T. Forrester, head of the Spanish department. Of the forty-five comprising the officers and faculty of the College of Liberal Arts, eighteen are women. In the College of Medicine of the university a number of women are either members of the faculty or the associate faculty, and many graduates occupy prominent positions in the profession. The same is true of the College of Law of this university. "Women are most liberally treated in this university," said the dean. "They are accorded their places in the life of the institution, as a matter of course, and so far as can be observed, there is no distinction or partiality on account of sex, either upon the part of the faculty or among the students."

In Pomona College, at Claremont, women are welcomed both upon the faculty and as students. In fact, women are prominent as benefactors of the institution. Of eleven endowments bestowed upon the college, eight are the gifts of women. Six of the fourteen offices upon the faculty are held by women. Of the faculty, which numbers forty instructors, fifteen are women. Most of these hold degrees in their especial lines. Mrs. Hannah T. Jenkins is at the head of the School of Art and Design, and her assistant is also a woman. Women are upon the standing committees of nearly all departments of the college and maintain a strong influence upon the life of the institution. In the present senior class of forty-three members twenty-two are women. In the junior, forty-two out of sixty-six are women; in the sophomore, forty-one out of seventy-five; in the freshman, sixty-two out of one hundred anl fourteen. In the School of Music, where we would expect women to predominate, the reverse is true, there being but sixty-two out of one hundred and sixty-eight. On the other hand, the School or Art and Design is composed principally of women, there being thirty-seven out of forty-six. As to degrees conferred, the proportion stands: Bachelor of Arts, four women out of eight; Bachelor of Letters, thirteen out of eighteen; Bachelor of Science, four out of twenty-two, while out of ten certificated in the literary course eight were women.

Women figure largely in the life of the two osteopathic colleges of Los Angeles.

Fourteen out of the thirty-eight members of the faculty of the Pacific College of Osteopathy are women.

MISS MARY CARRUTH CUNNINGHAM, A.M.,
Head of Department of History, Occidental College.

Of 300 students in the Los Angeles College of Osteopathy, one-third are women. Of the faculty, numbering nineteen, four are women.

Both colleges have graduated women who have become leaders in their profession, not only locally, but nationally, one or two having written books which are recognized as authoritative along the lines of their especial work.

The broad western spirit which tends to obliterate caste lines in all walks of life seems to be especially clear in the educational life, where ability is recognized, regardless of personality or sex, and is rewarded according to its merits.

THE YALE SCHOOL.

HIGH-CLASS BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR BOYS AND YOUNG MEN.

One of the best equipped and most efficiently conducted private schools for boys on the Pacific Slope is the Yale English and Classical School, located at Nos. 205-209 North Union avenue, Los Angeles.

The head master of this model institution is Prof. T. G. Adams, B.A. (Yale,) who was a popular and successful tutor at Yale University prior to his engaging in educational work in Los Angeles. Being a true "Son of Old Eli," Prof. Adams sticks to Yale methods and infuses the Yale spirit among his pupils.

The school has a finely-equipped gymnasium and a great deal of attention is paid to physical culture and athletic sports. The head master is a seasoned athlete and personally directs the physical training of his young charges and supervises their games and sports. The school usually has an athletic team that wins pennants in interscholastic games.

But while so much prominence is given to the physical development of the pupils, their mental culture is by no means neglected. A sound body makes a sound mind, and the boys are given just enough of athletics to keep them in good physical condition and give them a zest for learning.

The school is graded from the primary to the academic course and each grade is under a competent instructor. Special attention is given to boys who have been backward in their studies in the public schools, or who on account of ill health or other reasons have been deprived of the amount of schooling due lads of their age.

The academic course prepares boys for entrance to colleges or universities.

The morale of the school is of the highest standard. Boarding pupils have all the comforts of home, at an expense of $375 to $450, including tuition, for the nine months' term, according to the location and size of their room. A matron looks after the younger boys as carefully as a mother.

The school is very conveniently and comfortably located in several good buildings commanding a fine view of the Cahuenga Valley and the surrounding mountains. There is everything to conduce to the comfort, health, happiness and intellectual advancement of the students, whether boarding or day pupils.

A summer session and naval school for all-the-year-round pupils and boys who need tutoring during the vacation period are popular features of the Yale School.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC SCHOO

INSTITUTION THAT SPECIALLY FITS PUPIL RAILROAD AND TELEGRAPH SERVIC

It is not often that a great business corpora gages in school teaching, but the Southern Pacific pany has found it profitable and expedient lish a school for the training of young service. Hence the Southern Pacific School of raphy and Shorthand has its being.

The manager of the school is Prof. T. D. an expert telegrapher, who has had many years perience as a train dispatcher and is thoroughly in all branches of railway work and comme wireless telegraphy. Some of the most inter periments in wireless telegraphy ever Southern California have been carried on by Prof. kay and his pupils. At an experimental lished by Prof. Mackay on Mount Wilson able results have been achieved.

The school is established in commodious Nos. 540-542 Central avenue, where day and sions are held. All instruments, blanks, etc., students are furnished free. All the blank are the same as those used by the Southern other railway and telegraph companies.

The shorthand and telegraph courses include orthography, composition, typewriting, railroad keeping, train rules and regulations, train signals, etc.

The best evidence as to the efficacy of is the fact that in the last two years over men and young women have been graduated in good positions. Employment at good wag anteed to all graduates. Not a single gra the waiting list today.

Here is a list of recent graduates, the men are now employed by the Southe Company: H. H. Kester, Mojave; H. V. ton; A. G. Berdick, Lindsay; J. J. Stinson, bara; O. D. He contends that fair play, self-mastery and courtesy, taught in school. When Mr. Boyden the High School had only fourteen interest in its work had died out. five pupils this year, including ple of the proper age in town, have been employed. The Study of Music

As soon as you have decided to educate your sons and daughters in the noblest of Arts—should be guided from the very beginning by the best School of Music in our city. Fortunately, it is easy to decide upon that school, because head and houlders above music schools and music teachers in Southern California looms up the

Why Should You Experiment?

You may just as well get into the music school which is acknowledged as the foremost here. The second best is not good enough for your children because they are beginners, besides our rates for tuition are as reasonable and perhaps lower than at "second-best schools."

The Advanced Stndents

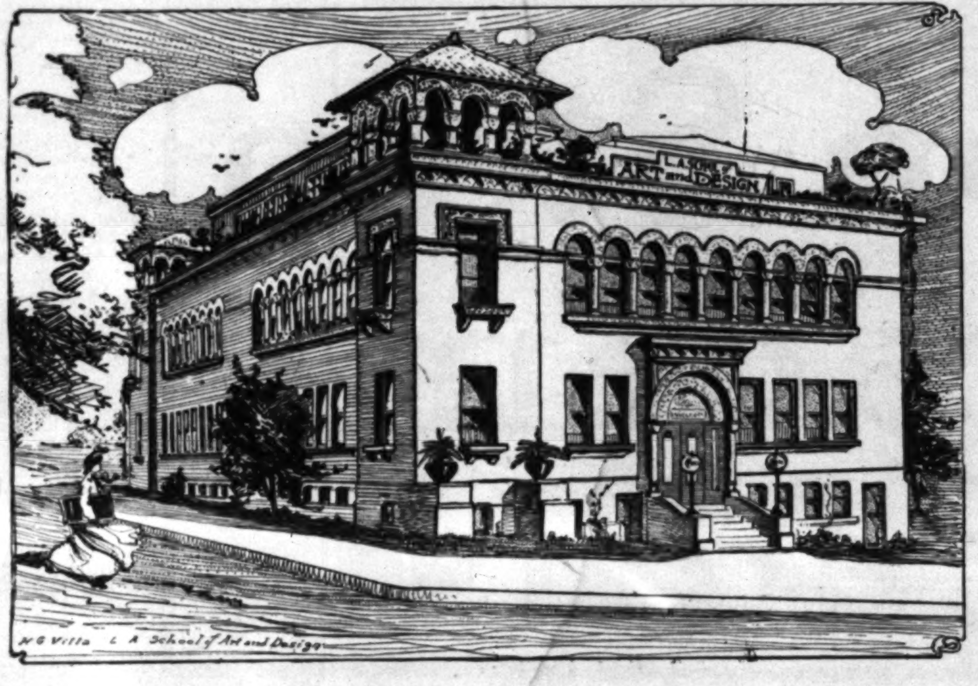
Handsome Home of Art.

LOS ANGELES SCHOOL OF ART AND DESIGN A MODEL OF ITS KIND.

THE Los Angeles School of Art and Design for nearly a quarter century has held its position in Los Angeles as a high-class producer of finished artists. The school has made a record in placing its graduates that has been of the utmost importance to those who have not sought to be mere pastime artists, but who, having natural talent, have sought to develop it into a means of livelihood, along the most pleasant pathway open to young men and young women alike. It is probably with no little pride that the school makes the following statement in its catalogue: "Every competent student has been placed as an illustrator, designer or in some similar position."

The school is honored by having four pictures produced by its graduates placed in the exhibit by the Art Commission of the Seattle Exposition.



ART AND DESIGN
H G Villa L A School of Art and Design

HOME OF LOS ANGELES SCHOOL OF ART AND DESIGN.

A number of its students are now designers in charge of important work, and last month two were so placed. Among the newspaper and magazine illustrators who began in this school is Forsythe of New York, and D. Parker, an Anaheim boy, has four pictures in the Crocker exhibit in Paris.

Mrs. L. E. Gardner-Macleod, art director and instructor, is the founder of the school, and she has always held an enviable position among the people who form the art colony of Los Angeles. Associated with her on the faculty are the following: Artistic anatomy, Dr. W. T. McArthur; wash-drawing and pen and ink, Langdon Smith; drawing, Daisy Hughes; decorative design, Emile Mazy; mechanical engineer, Malcolm Macleod, secretary and manager; designing and composition, I. Tinsler; leather and wood carving, E. Waldrogel.

The head of each department has had the advantage of both European and American training, and has exhibited in the chief galleries of Europe.

With this excellent equipment of talent, the student begins his training in the presence of high ideals, and in a building constructed in every detail as a home for the school. It is not only artistic in design, but with its splendid roof-garden studio, overlooking charming Westlake Park, and with a full view of the ocean and mountains, the prospect is most pleasing and delightful.

Students may enter at any time, and special terms are offered for summer classes during August and September. There are also night classes for students who are occupied during the day.

LYRIC SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

WHERE GOOD METHODS ARE IN VOGUE FOR VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL INSTRUCTION.

The Lyric School of Music is pleasantly located at No. 732 South Olive street and easily accessible from all parts of the city. Most excellent courses are offered in piano, vocal, violin and stringed instruments, harmony, history of music and choral study. Vocal culture courses are based on the best Italian schools for training the voice.

In piano the latest and best German conservatory methods have been adopted. A normal class in sight reading and in training for music in schools is at all times open to pupils at a very moderate cost.

For the convenience of parents who wish to start talented children at an early age, what might be called kindergarten classes, have been arranged. The training is so entertaining from the beginning that the child is filled with enthusiasm.

Violin receives the earnest attention it demands, and the latest and best methods for the advancement of the pupil are employed.

Classes for instruction in the art of accompanying a voice and in dance music are available, and a splendid course designed for persons who lacked opportunities in early life afford a quick, easy method, insuring success in a few weeks.

Guitar, mandolin, banjo, zither, dolceola and Columbia zither are taught.

For persons who are transitory or who enjoy a new feature in the home music, nothing is more enjoyable than a good mandolin, well played, or a guitar or banjo to accompany a song, or a combination of these instruments, with cornet, flute or clarinet affords such a delightful evening's entertainment as no money can buy. In the school some seven distinct orchestras, composed of pupils of the different grades, meet twice a month for study and recreation.

Luella M. McCune, the principal, is a teacher of experience and ability, who has devoted herself to a careful study of her art and has that enthusiasm in all her work which is bound to prove an inspiration to pupils.

Lessons are thirty minutes long. Beginners pay 50 cents each lesson; advanced pupils, 75 cents, $1 and $2 per lesson, according to the advancement.

Pianos are for rent at the school by the hour at $1 per month, or for home use at $3.50. Stringed instruments for rent and for sale.

If you have an ear for music, why not learn the art of piano tuning? It is a money-making business. Personal instruction in tuning, repairing and action regulating by a conservatory graduate. Terms on application.

VOICE, BODY AND MIND.

THEIR POWERS CULTIVATED BY MRS. LAURA WILSON WHITE.

It is a deplorable fact that many think elocution is a something beyond their reach while they educate themselves in all other branches yet neglect that one greatest gift that God has given to man—the power of expression.

The erroneous idea that elocution consists in declaiming a piece has been exploded. At no time in the history of education has the demand for good readers been so great as at the present time, and true artists can only meet this demand—readers who are taught not merely to appreciate masterpieces in art, but to portray them plainly and naturally.

The object of the Laura Wilson White School of Expression is to give instruction in branches that will cultivate the powers of voice, body and mind.

The course consists of the following branches: Vocal culture, articulation, dramatic art, interpretation, dialectic reading, delsarte expression, physical culture, pronunciation, public speaking, impersonation, oratory, memory training.

A special course is assigned for vocal defects, stuttering, hesitancy and imperfect enunciation.

This school is most exclusive; only a limited number of pupils will be admitted for the coming year.

The following is from the pen of Dr. Sara Thacker, noted author of "Logos of the New Dispensation of Time," "Souls," and "Concentration and Inspiration:"

"I have visited Laura Wilson White's classes and have noted that while the student has great advantages in the study of expression and physical development, that there is also another phase in her work. Mrs. White lives the music of life and in coming in contact with her sweet personality and entering the pure atmosphere with which she and her school is surrounded, the student is inspired to strive for that ideal perfection in body, mind and soul. Her course of instruction is very fascinating; it draws out and develops the faculties and latent powers of the mind which nature has given to us."

The Laura Wilson White School of Expression opened in the Blanchard building a year ago, but removed to No. 1828 South Figueroa street July 1 of this year. Mrs. White is very popular with her pupils.

Many of these graduates have stepped up into the positions of employers; thousands are in executive authority.

The reason for the wonderful success of the students at this college is that they are given a thorough, practical business education, an education that opens up the whole workings of the commercial world by actual experience at the very outset. The student is taught to know how to do things, not only in theory, but by practice. The proper foundation is laid in a careful and painstaking manner and the rest is merely a matter of giving the right time and attention to the studies.

Heald's Business College, since its advent in Los Angeles, has had a wonderful success and this is due no doubt to the progressiveness and wide-awake qualities of the management, as well as the standing and reputation of the faculty. Heald's Business College is located at No. 614 South Grand avenue, a central and most excellent part of the city for a first-class business institution.

Signor G. Bolli.

One of the latest, but by no means unknown, teachers in the city is Signor G. Bolli, a gentleman with no less than thirty years' experience as leading baritone in grand opera.

Signor Bolli teaches the true method of voice culture, as given in the leading Italian schools—a method that has produced the world's most famous singers.

Dobinson School of Expression.

The Dobinson School of Expression and Dramatic Art, at No. 1044 South Hope street, is one of the best schools of its kind this side of New York City.

The building is a handsome one, but nowhere does beauty of architecture give way to utility, and the interior arrangements were all carefully studied out before a brick or stone was laid.

Probably no one has a larger acquaintance with the leading actors and actresses and noted orators and lecturers of the United States and Europe than has Mr. Dobinson, who is himself a Shakespearean scholar and a teacher of over thirty years' experience.

The course at the Dobinson school is for those who desire instruction in the art of expression, or to qualify as teachers just as much—perhaps more—than for the stage. Whatever the object, students are assured of seasoned instruction and expert advice.

California School.

N. William Brick, M.A., the principal of the California School for Boys, is a gentleman who instills his pupils with a thorough respect for education and all it means for their future. The institution is a boarding and day school, teaching the primary, grammar and college preparatory courses, military drill, physical culture and sloyd. The school is located at No. 1948 Lovelace avenue.

Cumnock School.

The Cumnock School, a boarding and day school for young women, has the distinction of having modeled its home after Shakespeare's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon. This school offers to students three distinct courses of instruction—academic, expression and physical education. The Cumnock School has completed its fifteenth year of successful work.

The expression course of three years, under the supervision of Mrs. Merrill Moore Grigg, director of the school and a former instructor in Northwestern University, has proven of inestimable value, not only to prospective teachers and readers, but to writers, artists, musicians and all who desire a comprehensive knowledge of the principles of art. This course includes literary interpretation, literature and language, psychology and pedagogy, philosophy of expression, dramatic art, voice training and physical training.

The academic course of four years, under the direction of Mrs. O. Spehard Barnum of the University of California and Radcliffe, comprises not only regular high school studies, but literary and dramatic interpretation as well. Cumnock Academy is accredited at Stanford University and well-known colleges. Preparatory work from the fifth to eighth grades in connection with this course has proven thoroughly successful, and special work may be had in either department.

Owing to the increasing interest in physical development and to the rapid establishment of municipal playgrounds, a thorough Normal course in physical education is offered at Cumnock, and several distinguished teachers and lecturers have been added to the regular faculty.

Isaacs-Woodbury Business College.

This progressive college was founded in 1884 by F. C. Woodbury.

E. K. Isaacs, the president and manager since 1903, has had over thirty years' experience in business college work and enjoys a national reputation as a school man.

Six years ago the school moved into a new building on South Hill street, but outgrew its capacity and was forced into larger quarters on the fifth floor of the great Hamburger building.

Mr. Isaacs has been very successful in the management of the school, due to his always having associated with him a staff of able teachers and assistants. Among the present faculty are Mr. M. E. Austin and Miss Mary C. Askew, who are exceptionally strong in their line of work.

The board of directors has recently added Mr. Isaacs's name to the title of the school, and the old and well-known Woodbury will hereafter be known as the Isaacs-Woodbury.

The Harvard School.

The Harvard Military School—a boarding and day school—is said by military experts and eminent educators to be unsurpassed anywhere for its splendid equipment.

The staff of instructors is an exceptionally strong one, and recently the Secretary of War detailed a United States army officer to this school as professor of military science and tactics.

The school buildings are absolutely modern, every known facility having been installed. There are lecture halls, physical and chemical laboratories, manual training shops, gymnasium, and a large hall for musical instruction.

Graduates of the Harvard School are admitted without examination to the University of California and Leland Stanford, Jr., University, and by certificate to the universities of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Cornell, Michigan, Virginia and to various other institutions of the higher order among the colleges and technical schools of the country.

The school owns a fine campus of ten acres, splendidly situated in Los Angeles near the Country Club. The grounds are properly graded and laid out for all kinds of athletic sports, the tracks being pronounced nearly perfect. There is a broad twenty-foot 220-yard straightaway, a fifteen-foot quarter-mile running and cycle track, four tennis courts, basketball and handball courts, football and baseball fields.

The accommodations for boarders are simple, but entirely comfortable and thoroughly healthful. The kitchen is presided over by a master cook and the food furnished is the best and most varied.

The advantages for day scholars are many, as a visit to the school will tell.

Mr. Grenville C. Emery, A.M., Litt.D., is the principal of the Harvard School, a gentleman of high educational qualities coupled with a strong executive ability, who has made his school a credit to the whole State of California. He is an exemplification of the school motto—"To thine own self be true, and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

Mr. M. R. Parmelee, Pd.M., Ph.D., the general manager, is one of the best-known educators from the State of Michigan, where he held the highest honors in his profession.

Lieut. S. V. McClure, professor of military science, was one of the instructors at West Point and a first lieutenant in the regular army. Other members of the staff hold high educational honors.

The Woman in the Second Row.

[In many towns the woman of this little sketch, written by Rosa Naomi Scott, found a counterpart during the recent commencement exercises in our schools. We reprint the sketch from the Woman's Home Companion.]

THE woman in the second row awkwardly edged her solid bulk past her delicately-gowned neighbors to her waiting opera chair. Her square, iron-gray head and features had the stolidity peculiar to the woman whom life has battered from youth to middle life. It was the first time she had bared in public her grizzled hair and narrow, wrinkled forehead. She did not sit so, because she would not have felt more at ease with a modest head-covering. Yet God and her own soul alone knew the exact relief it had been to omit the cost of a hat for herself from her daughter's graduating expenses. It meant, in the accuracy of her meager dollars and cents, the white waist she wore, buttoned youthfully up the back in acknowledgment of the importance of the occasion, the hose on her daughter's slippered feet, and the fan for her class-day gown; items she had failed to reckon with, in her first rough estimate of the things that "just had to be bought for Cecile."

She sat in the second row of the family circle, because she could not finish the breakfast dishes, iron Cecile's petticoat, press her waist and reach the ticket office in time to exchange her card of invitation for a seat downstairs.

From an elevation, therefore, she faced the rostrum and the one hundred and six graduates from the high school. The girls looked like snowy goddesses, moving together as if stirred by single instincts—the pipes of Pan or the breath of the Olympian hills. The boys lost, too, by the distance, their callow stiffness and represented youth with its immortal challenge. The spectator in the second row had never studied the spirit of the divine youth of Greek life, but the unconscious pathos with which these young things gaily faced life—as she knew it—tightened something hot about her heart.

The orchestra ceased and the programme began.

The Rev. Dr. Goodman led in a scholarly prayer that thanked God for America and the public school system, the teachers, the board, the superintendent, the pupils and the taxpayers, and evoked fervently a continuation of the same, for ever and ever more.

The graduates sat, stood or sang like a pageant of youth, or came forward singly as they were called, to give, in carefully trained conversational accents, their mixtures of platitudes and crude impressions.

The wife of a college professor down front laughed and cried in a breath at their untempered limitations and sincerities, but the woman in the second row family circle had no mental margin for aught above the essay Matilda Carson was reading of James Marshal's declamation. She had a numbed sense of relief that the pinch of preparation was over and that Cecile had two better dresses for the summer than she had ever had in her life.

The orator pleaded for a greater high school; the essayist eulogized the teachers, the superintendent and the board in a single phrase; the valedictorian wept on the neck of the individualized class; the superintendent presented the class as a testimony of praise to the faculty, the school system, themselves, and the city at large, and the president of the board delivered the diplomas.

As Cecile received hers, the woman in the second row leaned back and fanned her square face softly with her programme. Her struggle was over.

It had begun twelve years before, when Cecile entered the primary and she had set the present white-robed goal before the face of each. She was young then. She was work-aged now. Measles, whooping cough, typhoid fever, the death of the baby, a husband who thought the grammar school good enough for girls, hard times and the painful and complicating advent of new children had not prevailed against her. During the twelve years not a single friend had warmed her by a sympathetic word; worse, not a hint of recognition of what she was doing had reached her from another soul. Cecile, her only partner, in the nature of things, was outside the pale of understanding. Yet during these two thousand one hundred and seventy days there was no day that she did not take up the struggle afresh.

Her hardened, stubby hands had cooked eight thousand meals, which stood not for a manual task alone, but for eight thousand distinct struggles to serve to a growing child a palatable meal from plain food, stinted variety, ugly service and with a limited time for preparation. Each of the eight thousand meals—an ugly, nerve-straining detail—had been served on time in spite of the conflicting demands of nursery-maid, washer-woman, dressmaker, housekeeper, and duties of mother to the other children, and wife. The meals represented almost as many small, sweating, catering enterprises and unreckonable weariness and longings to do what was in her to do if she had decent means at hand.

She had stitched, for that diploma, on an old sewing machine, "without attachments," miles of homely, unattractive material into serviceable garments of more or less attractiveness. She had walked scores of hurried, fagged, shopping miles—in the brief time between putting the kitchen to rights after dinner and time to get supper, on those rare days when she could leave the ever-present baby—trying to purchase a blouse or skirt, shoes, underwear or hat that "would do," please the child and "last well," all for one-third the money necessary to buy comfortably an article with only one of the foregoing qualities. She had developed, with painful ingenuity, as Cecile had grown up, a corresponding aiblity to cope with longer skirts, jackets, even raincoats and caps. Her scanty means had been drained by the experimental changes of text-books of succeeding State superintendents, her limited diplomacies taxed to keep pace between an ordinarily restless child and the score or so of teachers of differing ideals and tempers who had encountered Cecile from the primary to the high school. All, she might have said, had come to her mill.

By makeshifts known only to herself she had evolved car fare for rainy days, and money for nearly all of the high school entertainments given by the pupils and teachers for school projects. Her supreme anxieties had ever been that Cecile should keep well and feel no difference between herself and the other girls.

She had originated and executed a struggle which the greatest generals of the world never came within hailing distance of, but it did not occur to her to think of it in this way, because it was the ordinary struggle of the American mother of small means whose child graduates from the high school. All the while she was projecting four other similar flights which she would promote—unless death of invalidism struck her down—till she sat again as she now sat, clapping her hands as the last praises of the teachers and the board, the superintendent and the school system rose in the air.

"You ought to be mighty proud of Cecile," whispered an old lean friend, similarly battered and square and gray, who plucked her from behind by the sleeve.

"Oh, I am," and the eyes of the woman in the second row blurred happily.

USE OF PREPOSITIONS.

EXTRAORDINARY WAY THEY ARE INJECTED INTO THE LANGUAGE OF EVERY-DAY AFFAIRS.

The Fortnightly Review gives examples of what it terms "Irish-English" where the preposition "on" is used in an extraordinary way. The examples are:

A servant will relate her morning difficulties: "First the fire went out on me and then the kettle boiled over on me, and the stirabout got burned on me." One girl surprised her mistress by telling her, "I broke his stick on the master" (meaning that she had accidentally broken her master's stick, to his detriment.) The Review says that these expressions have their equivalent in the Gaelic tongue. "My name is Pat and I'm proud out of that" is another example of curious use.

The Review does not note the similar use of "off." Whether this is also Gaelic or not, the present writer does not know, but it was the common phrase of a young Canadian Jew who averred that Canadians use the form. To the question "Where did you get that?" the answer was "I got it off my father"—meaning that the father had given it. "I borrowed off my brother" did not mean, as it might seem to imply, that the "borrowing" was against the brother's will, the money being taken "off" his person by force. To the question [illegible] did you buy this coat?" the answer was still "I [illegible] it off the tailor at the corner"—leaving one [illegible] image of a sartorial artist in his shirt sleeves [illegible] his dear bought gold.

Crane, self-made millionaire of Chicago: that, instead of being a benefit, colleges are and are doing a vast amount of harm the youth of this country. merchant, New York: On an average, college man is more proficient than the man without that training, among my employés. I have had most conscientious men who took infinite pains with their work, but who attended to every least little detail with the same care. That is rarely the case with a college man. He sees the things that are important. Personally, I think a college education is invaluable; it trains one in logical thinking. It teaches one to concentrate and, as I said, it enables one to pick out the important from the unimportant details.

Charles W. Elliot, ex-president Harvard: It is reasonable to expect that the barbarous stage of public opinion and college opinion concerning college athletics, which in this country has been partly the result of inexperience in competitive sports and partly of the general predisposition to exaggerate in pleasures which characterize the Americans, will pass away before many years.

President Arthur T. Hadley, Yale: In the modern curriculum in the universities athletics furnish the only means for competitive skill among different types of men. The American sollege has not simply failed to make headway as fast as the American professional or technical school; it has lost definiteness of purpose. Neither the students nor the faculties know today what the college stands for in the way that they did fifty years ago.

Dr. J. L. Elliott, associate leader of the Ethical Culture Society: We are getting tired of education as displayed to us by the Yale and Harvard man and the Vassar and Bryn Mawr girl. They grate on our nerves and we are beginning to think it is money not well spent to send our children through college. With the exceptions of the doctors and lawyers that the colleges turn out there seems to be but little benefit to the man or woman in the process. Our conception of the benefits of a college education for our boys is not what it used to be, and we think now they can get along just as well without it.

Bishop James A. McPaul, Trenton, N. J.: Harvard, Princeton and Yale are undermining faith and teaching immorality. Rascality, immorality and disrespect for womankind are being taught in these institutions. They do not teach the Bible.

Dr. James Roscoe Day, chancellor of Syracuse University: We are acquainted with the reports of debaucheries and depraved conditions prevalent in many of our universities. I mention no names. While heads of colleges seem zealous in guiding students along lines of study, few there are who place morals first. If college presidents would unite along a common line of action and thought, this dissipation among students could be wiped out in thirty days. I believe that the college presidents of this country, if united, can control the tendency of intemperance, and I believe that they have a moral as well as an intellectual responsibility. I could call by name college presidents who seem devoid of interest in the morals of their charges. I say emphatically that no man ought to seek to evade the responsibility for the moral welfare of the young men.

President John H. Finley, College of the City of New York: I do not think that the morals of American students are deteriorating or that dissipation is growing. Some ten years ago Andrew Carnegie described a college as a "monastery mitigated by football"—the college of my friend President Butler is unmitigated. Were Mr. Carnegie to define a college today he would have to do it in somewhat different fashion: "A college is an eleemosynary institution of productive but underpaid faculties, devised to train youth for the highest achievements of triumphant democracy and also to prevent rich men from dying in disgrace." But, seriously, though the college cannot teach religion, it can try to inculcate morals. Through the personality of the instructor it can effect a great moral upbuilding in the young man. We shall all agree that that curriculum is best which gives those who walk in it the companionship and guidance of the best men and the best scholars.—[New York World.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF OSTEOPATHY

SECOND OF THE KIND IN THE WORLD JUSTIFIES THE FAITH OF ITS BUILDERS.

Five years ago the Pacific College of Osteopathy erected its handsome three-story building in this city, and the progress of the science has been such as to fully warrant the confidence of the men who put their money and energy into the enterprise.

The Pacific College is the second school of the kind founded in the world. It was begun by the same men who now rejoice in its success, as a small school in the town of Anaheim, thirty miles from this city, in 1896, and has to its credit the conferring of the first degree of "D.O." ever received by anybody. The vision of the management broadened, and a year after it had been established at Anaheim the college was removed to Los Angeles, occupying rented quarters until 1904, when the present structure was built.

During the past year the enrollment of students was the largest in its history, and the faculty has been largely increased and the plant advanced in many directions.

In building the college at the junction of Daly street and Mission Road, the college management went to a point where ground was cheap at that time, and where the transportation facilities were of the best. Four or five members of the faculty spent the present summer in Europe, pursuing special lines of study. The college maintains a free clinic, a maternity hospital, and is located close to the County Hospital, which is of vast benefit to the students of the college.

Its faculty numbers thirty-eight, and the board of directors consists of John O. Hunt, president; Stanley M. Hunter, vice-president; William J. Cook, secretary and treasurer; Clement A. Whiting, chairman of the faculty; G. Lavagnino, Elwood J. Thorne, Clinton P. Drum.

VERDI SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

SIGNOR PIETRO BUZZI TEACHES ACCORDING TO BEST EUROPEAN METHODS.

Signor Pietro Buzzi, director of the Verdi School of Singing, has had the advantage of many years on the stage as a lyric tenor, and has sung with some of the greatest artists of the day. In addition to voice, piano, harmony, composition, sight-reading, he adds instruction in that invaluable equipment, stage deportment, which is so difficult for many singers to acquire. The school is located at No. 668 South Alvarado street, away from the noise and bustle of the city. His repertoire covers all the great operas, and his familiarity with them enables him to impart to his pupils most valuable instruction. He declares that only by long experience can one become proficient in using the voice, and urges the importance of winning the friendship of the audience with the first word or note. "No force of genius," he says, "can atone for the bad tones and crude action that repel an audience. Volume is not loudness nor strength, but size, largeness, quantity and surplusage of power."

PIETRO BUZZI,
Director of Verdi School of Singing.

Signor Buzzi is a pupil of the Royal Conservatory of Turin, the Municipal Conservatory of Milan and the Delle Sedie School of Music, Paris.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE.

OLDEST SCHOOL IN LOS ANGELES—MORE THAN A CENTURY OF PROGRESS.

Century-old St. Vincent's College, beginning its history back in the pueblo days of Los Angeles, has made wonderful strides in recent years. From the beginning it has been the chief Catholic school of Southern California, and its greatest progress has been made under the presidency of the Very Rev. Father J. S. Glass, who has been its guiding hand for a number of years.

The college occupies a sightly corner at Washington street and Grand avenue. The Church of St. Vincent de Paul and the Father Meyer Memorial Hall form the two extreme ends of the plant, the two being connected by the college building, which stands back from the street. The recess is filled with handsome trees and shrubbery, giving an inviting appearance to the entire surroundings. A large athletic field is the pride of the students, who maintain a strong athletic organization and take part in all the intercollegiate games and contests.

The college and high school annually have a large enrollment of students, and beside a full college course, much attention is given to the commercial branches, oratory and dramatic art.

U. S. C. PREPARATORY SCHOOL.

The Preparatory School maintained in connection with the College of Liberal Arts of the University of Southern California is under the supervision of the college faculty, thus insuring the best preparation for entrance to college. The students of the Preparatory School enjoy all the privileges open to students of the college, but while many of the students of the school do not desire to enter college, the authorities have recognized the importance of providing for these young people the best academic instruction. That their efforts are appreciated is shown by the fact that more than 250 boys and girls were enrolled last year.

Applicants may enter after having finished work equivalent to that required for entrance to the high schools, so that it is open to those who graduate from the eighth grade in the public schools. Reports are sent to parents each month, the same as from public schools, in order to maintain the interest and cooperation of parents in securing a high grade of scholarship and deportment. There are four courses, the completion of which entitles the student to entrance to the college, and an elective course.

OPPORTUNITIES AND STIMULATION IN LOS ANGELES.

THE lover of natural beauty who takes a stroll through Los Angeles or its immediate vicinity cannot fail to be struck with the wealth of material that waits on every hand for the artist's brush and pencil. Everywhere the hills fling out the curved perfection of their lines and the opalescent splendors of their coloring. Beyond them stretches the lapis lazuli of the brooding mountains. Over all is the sunshine of Southern California, rich, golden, life-giving, exquisitely tempered by the sea winds.

These lovely vistas are the daily pleasures of the denizen of the town. If he be greedy for more, a trolley ride of less than half an hour will bring him close to the two grandeurs—the mountains and the sea. He may seek the illimitable blue waters of the largest ocean on the globe, the Pacific, or he may climb the empurpled peaks of the Sierras, which rise before him, tier upon tier, stretching beyond the power of his vision and offering him a panorama unparalleled in beauty even among the Swiss Alps.

In scenery Southern California may proudly compete with the one country of Europe famous for its natural beauty, Italy; in climate she has no competitor, for her frostless winters are no less perfect than her cloudless summers. Travelers are always telling us that we have here the finest climate in the world, and though we have always known this to be true, we are pleased to have our convictions corroborated.

We know that Italy's climate and environment have made her people, through countless centuries, a nation of artists and art lovers. Southern California is a new country, and the most of her people find themselves in strange and new (though delightful) conditions. Yet the inevitable is happening before our very eyes. Though materially as successful as any community in America, and though we devote ourselves enthusiastically to "business," we are already beginning to express ourselves in ways that subtly declare we are nurturing, and maturing with remarkable rapidity, a "feeling for art." This feeling, this appreciation of the value of beauty, shows itself more and more in our public buildings, our homes, our streets, our parks.

Like Italy, Southern California is destined to be the mother of artists. She cannot escape her noble destiny if she would. It behooves her, then, to make wise provision for the careful nurture of these "flowers of the family." If neglected, if too roughly handled, they may droop and die, and their great lesson of beauty may be lost to the world.

But Los Angeles is not neglecting her duties and opportunities, now that she has awakened to the necessity of art to her own happiness and well-being, and now that she herself has begun to breathe the art atmosphere. With her usual directness and dispatch, she has at once set about to establish and build the schools of instruction that are needed for the proper training of those of her sons and daughters who have what is known as the "artistic temperament."

Southern California being so rich in natural landscape, it follows, as a matter of course, that our artists should express themselves first of all in the rendering of landscape on canvas. This has come to pass. We have already a flourishing group of landscape painters whose work is as strong as that of any group in the country, and much more individual. In fact, the most of our painters are landscapists.

But, some one may argue, what particular need have landscape painters of instruction in a regular school of art? Their inspiration comes from all out-of-doors—from the mists on the mountain tops, the sunsets over the sea, the verdure in the valley—not from plaster casts and nude human bodies. I admit, he may add, that art schools are necessary for the painter of genres and portraits, but I do not see their utility to the young man or woman who would become a landscape painter.

The technical difficulties of handling paint as an artist handles it are very great. They can best be mastered in a well-equipped school, under the guidance of a competent instructor. The subtleties of the human form, in line and color, offer endless problems in drawing and technique. Almost identical problems come up in the painting of landscape—tone, form, color, atmosphere, values and proportions. It is well to study them, at first, under the most favorable conditions—to be found only in the art schools. Too, the "atmosphere" of an art school is very necessary, in many cases, to the proper bringing out of artistic talent.

To meet this need of proper technical training, Los Angeles has established, and is still establishing, excellent art schools. The young man or woman who feels a call toward artistic expression, and who hesitates because he or she has not the money for study in Paris, or New York, or Chicago, need hesitate no longer. The instruction may be found here, in Los Angeles, at very small expense. Excellent schools have been started by artists who have studied in the European ateliers, and who have brought with them the latest word in the domain of painting. We have portrait painters of distinction in Los Angeles, and almost all of them teach in our art schools or handle private pupils. The school instruction is complete, from the cast to the undraped model. The schools also maintain classes in artistic composition, in the study of anatomy, and in sketching from life and nature.

A few years ago the new art schools that sprang up on every side found some difficulty in supplying their classes with models, but the demand is now equal to the supply, and figure painters, as well as school classes, find it an easy matter to get exactly the models they want for some particular pose or picture.

The would-be landscape painter who lives in Los Angeles is especially fortunate, for he has at his command the schools of art in which to master his technique, wonderful vistas awaiting his brush on every hand, and strong landscape painters with whom to go out and paint. Nowhere else could he find better opportunities for advancement in his chosen work.

Los Angeles has more art exhibitions than any other city of its size in the country. Many of these are given by our own painters in the local galleries, which are numerous. Sometimes exhibitions of loaned pictures are given, masterpieces from the private galleries of our collectors. Very often painters from other cities send their pictures to be hung here in "one-man" exhibitions, for the fame of Los Angeles as a center of activity in art matters is spreading rapidly. In the immediate future the city will have a permanent art gallery of its own, thanks to the noble civic pride and tireless interest of some of our leading citizens.

The value of picture galleries in the education of the art student cannot be overestimated. If in the past Los Angeles has been somewhat remiss in providing these splendid stimuli toward art appreciation, she certainly cannot be accused of delinquency now.

The art of illustration is taught in all our art schools, some of the classes being conducted by men who have themselves won distinction as magazine, newspaper and book illustrators. Indeed, the practical side of work in the art is never lost sight of. The arts crafts are taught systematically and thoroughly, and students are trained to become successful designers of pottery, of useful as well as beautiful objects in brass and copper, and of artistic and original jewelry.

DE CHAUVENET CONSERVATORY.

AIMS AT BROAD INTELLIGENCE ALONG MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC LINES.

The De Chauvenet Conservatory of Music and Dramatic Art, which occupies the top floor of the Fraternal Brotherhood building, No. 845 South Figueroa street, is a large and growing school, and ranks with the best in the city. M. de Chauvenet, dean of the conservatory, aims at a broad intelligence along all musical lines; the encouragement of conscientiousness, honesty and enthusiasm, and the development of the moral self, while acquiring musical knowledge and skill.

JEAN DE CHAUVENET,
Dean of de Chauvenet Conservatory of Music and Dramatic Art.

The course of study is divided into four grades, elementary, preparatory, teachers' certificate class and graduating class. A pleasing way of acquiring knowledge of musical history is through the Composers' Study Club, made up of students in the school and other persons interested in music.

Jean de Chauvenet, the dean, who has charge of the piano and organ departments, has won considerable recognition as a composer during the past year, and he encourages and teaches the art of composition in the school. He says that whether a pupil ever acquires great skill as a composer or not, his studies in that direction will enable him to better interpret the works of the great composers.

Mme. De Chauvenet, director of the conservatory and at the head of the vocal department, is a natural-born teacher, and has the reputation of being a successful organizer and promoter of educational and musical enterprises. She possesses a pure lyric soprano voice of remarkable range. She is a graduate in harmony and voice from the Des Moines Music College, and afterwards took a post-graduate course under F. M. English of London. She also studied under well-known Italian and French artists, and perhaps her talent is best shown by her ability to impart it to others.

Other departments of the conservatory—instruction on stringed instruments and in languages—are in the hands of capable instructors.

e number sympathized with the South, as was by acts of unmistakable meaning. At length, as ame indiscreet if not actually dangerous openly to sympathy for the Confederate cause or to commit of like tenor, the expression of disloyalty ent and subtle forms. Chief among these organization of a number of secret societies, such as the "Knights of the Golden Circle." Many disloyal newspapers were given wide circulation, especially in the southern part of the State. Another interesting expression of disloyalty took the form of public prayers in Christian pulpits.

All such utterances, however, called forth manifestations of disfavor; and several men were actually impeached for utterances that were deemed treasonable, while the plots of small parties to join the rebellion were quickly exposed and the conspirators punished.

San Francisco was the chief center of loyal sentiment. The Alta thus expressed it (May 11, 1861:) "In all these United States there is not a more loyal city than the metropolis of the Pacific. Among our citizens, devotion to the flag is an all-absorbing passion. It is shared equally by all classes, and is all but universal." On the occasion of a great Union demonstration consisting of grand procession and mass meeting, these lines appeared in large letters just back of the speaker's stand:

"The union of lakes and the union of lands,
The union of States none can sever;
The union of hearts and the union of hands,
And the flag of our Union forever."

California sent forth not only her loyal sentiment to the cause of the Union, but also generously contributed both men and money. The "California Hundred" left San Francisco on December 11, 1862, on the steamer Golden Age, in the midst of loud cheering and widespread interest. Five weeks later they were received in fine style at the Boston depot, where Capt. Reed said in response to Maj. Lincoln's address: "We come not as citizens of California, neither citizens of Massachusetts. We come as citizens of the United States, and we are proud to enroll ourselves under the quota of Boston."

One company of native-born Californians, consisting of forty volunteer cavalrymen, was organized in San José. The members of this company equipped themselves with lassoes, in the use of which they were most expert. Capt. Pico thus addressed his men: "Sons of California: Our country calls and we must obey! This unholy rebellion of the Southern States must be crushed; they must come back in the Union, and pay obedience to the Stars and Stripes. United we will by force of circumstances become the freest and mightiest republic on earth."

Much eagerness was shown by candidates for enlistment as volunteers. They expressed deep and constant regret that they were not ordered East. While the services they rendered the Union were real services and of great importance, the California forces, with the exception of those enlisted for Massachusetts, did not take part in any of the great battles of the Civil War.

The State of California furnished to the Union two full regiments of cavalry, eight full regiments of infantry, one battalion of native California cavalry ,and one battalion of infantry, called mountaineers, besides several companies of volunteers to Massachusetts and Washington Territory. (Record of Cal. Men in the War of the Rebellion, page 7.)

For good and sufficient reasons it was deemed inadvisable to send very large numbers of troops to the more active scenes of war. The great distance of California from the States east of the Rocky Mountains, without railroads to transport troops and provisions, would in itself perhaps be sufficient explanation of the policy of the Federal government in keeping our forces on the Pacific Coast and in the Territories. But besides this, it must be remembered that a majority of the State officers during the early stages of the war were known to sympathize with the South, and at all times an uncertain minority of the people leaned toward the Confederate cause; so that there was grave fear that California might be led or betrayed into secession. Moreover, the proposed invasion of California by Southern forces from Texas and the position of England's Asiatic fleet in the Pacific naturally caused a feeling of alarm.

Happily for our Golden State, peace was preserved within her borders. The vigilance and patriotism of her Governors, the loyalty of her troops and the steadfastness of the body of her people saved her from the horrors of actual warfare, thus enabling her to go forward in the development of her own marvelous resources while pouring her treasures into the lap of the nation. The concurrent resolution adopted May 17, 1861, by the State Legislature proved prophetic of California's loyalty throughout the Civil War:

"Resolved by the Senate, the Assembly concurring, that the people of California are devoted to the Constitution and Union of the United States, and will not fail in fidelity and fealty to that Constitution and Union now in the hour of trial and peril. That California is ready to maintain the rights and honor of the national government at home and abroad, and at all times to respond to any requisition that may be made upon her to defend the republic against foreign or domestic foes."

THE AFOGNAK SCHOOL.

ONE OF THE FAR OFF INSTITUTIONS OF ALASKA WHERE PUPILS LOVE DRAWING AND MUSIC.

[Washington Herald:] "Mrs. C. W. Hammond and her daughter are the teachers in what is perhaps the most interesting school under the Stars and Stripes," says Jerry G. Andrews, a mining prospector of Nome, Alaska. "They are the teachers appointed by the government to conduct the native school at Afognak, Alaska.

"Afognak is but little known to the people of the United States, yet it was the third town started by the Russians in the early part of the last century on the Pacific. It would have little reason to demand even the attention of the government today were it not for the fact that one of the best Indian schools conducted in the Territory of Alaska is maintained there. Afognak is on an island of the same name in Southwestern Alaska.

"Mrs. Hammond and her daughter have the task of teaching the eighty-one pupils who are enrolled at the Afognak school, and it is not likely that in all the possessions of the United States is there such a variety of color or intelligence among the natives who are being educated. On one thing the natives, from the Aleuts to the Russian octoroons, are a unit. Every one is the most devout of Greek Catholics on Sunday. On other days they are simply natives.

"It is probably surprising that of all the pupils there is hardly one who does not take naturally to drawing. Why, it is astonishing to find that little tots who are just able to toddle to the schoolhouse are, when furnished with a pencil and paper, drawing. Music, however, is the one thing that wins them, from the old, gray-haired men and women to the little boys and girls. They love music. They can sing far better than an equal number of country children in the United States. They have their favorite instruments, too—mandolins and accordions. There is not a popular air that has been sung in the United States in the last ten years that is not common in Afognak within three months after the record is made.

"Afognak shows that the white blood must predominate. There are two villages. One is the real, native Aleut town, the other the half castes. I have noticed that any native who has a drop of white blood in his or her veins looks down on the full-blooded native."

THE TRUE METHOD OF SINGING AND VOICE CULTURE
BY SIGNOR G. BOLLI

The true, genuine and natural method of singing has been in the past, and will be in the future, recognized to be the Italian—the unique and only method that has produced the greatest and most famous singers from the first epoch of written music.

If you want a reliable teacher of voice culture, using the genuine old Italian method of placing the sounds in proper way for singing, go to SIGNOR G. BOLLI.

Signor Bolli has had 30 years' experience as leading baritone in grand opera, sacred and classic concerts throughout the civilized world, and has as a result of his excellent instruction sent many pupils on the operatic stage in Italy. Terms reasonable. Voices tried free. Documents of his ability and career will be seen at his studio.

Queen Starts School.

TEACHING PROVIDED FOR FARMERS' SONS AND DAUGHTERS.

Special Correspondence.

LONDON, July 10.—Queen Alexandra has taken a deep personal interest in the welfare of the people on her estate at Sandringham. Following her project of operating a farm dairy for the benefit of her agricultural tenants, she has opened a school of needlework for girls and one of carpentery for boys. The Queen's model dairy has long been a great success, and it has paid well. In addition to making a profit from the farm, the Queen, in the course of two years, has trained a number of young women to take complete charge of a dairy farm; and there are applications always on hand for the Queen's own dairy maids.

The Queen's new venture has also met with success, from the paying point of view; and the girls turned out from her needlework school are finding excellent positions among the nobility in many parts of the country. Several have gone into business for themselves, and are holding their own against the fierce competition in this line in London.

The Queen's school for needlework is located in a pretty little cottage, built in the Gothic style, and scarcely a stone's throw from the Queen's own rooms in the royal residence. Her Majesty takes a keen personal interest in this school, and very often spends her mornings among the girls watching them at work.

The curriculum embraced at the Queen's needlework classes is a very thorough one. The students begin with plain needlework, and then take up, in their order, embroidery, dressmaking, fine needlework, drawn-thread-work and crochet trimming. The course covers everything that has to do with a woman's dresses, including underclothing, the making of trousseaux, layettes, cutting out and so forth.

Those who show the greatest proficiency are further instructed in a special course of Norwegian tapestry, in which the Queen herself takes a deep interest. Her house in Denmark is full of specimens of work turned out by her scholars. The girls are also taught the spinning and weaving of cloths and the making of Torchon and Honiton lace.

One of the best features of the Queen's school is that there is no regular hard-and-fast system followed. The head instructress tries to find out what each girl's individual tastes are and to develop her in conformity with her own artistic bent. There are no time tables, no schemes of instruction, and no display of methods.

Everything in the school is of the most up-to-date pattern. The whole series of class-rooms are beautifully lighted, artistically decorated, and the girls work under ideal conditions.

About half a mile away from the girls' school is the boys' technical school of woodwork. The number of pupils in this school is limited—only six being taken, and, as a consequence, there is keen competition among the tenants on the estate for admission. The boys remain in the school from their fifteenth to their twenty-first year, and when they come out are equipped with sufficient knowledge to enter any department of the building or cabinet-making trades.

Naturally enough, the Queen has greatly added to her popularity by this new departure. She has always taken an interest in what might be called the common people, but it has only been in the last few years that she has had educational works opened under her close personal supervision.

PROBLEM OF THE CENTURY.

MUST BE SOLVED IN THE SCHOOLHOUSE RATHER THAN IN LEGISLATURES OR COURTROOM.

"We have about 50,000,000 Americans, who have remained in school into the midst of their teens—something like two-fifths of our probable population in the next thirty years," says William Allen White, writing in the August American Magazine under the title, "The Schools—the Mainspring of Democracy." He continues:

"Assuming that the average life of the college graduate is thirty years out of college, we may assume that the generation now opening will be manned with 1,000,000 men and women who have at least finished their college work, and assuming that the same number of juniors, sophomores and freshmen leave school—about 25,000 in each class—that are graduated, we may add 3,000,000 more to the total, making 4,000,000 college men and women who will participate in our national life during the first thirty years of this century. Add to these 4,000,000 college-bred men and women the 160,000 high-school graduates who are entering life every year, and the generation may reasonably be computed to hold 5,000,000 persons who have taken full advantage of the common schools supported by direct taxes upon all of the people. Add to this total those who drop out from the four lower classes of the high school—a list as large from each class as the annual graduating class—and one has 15,000,000 others who have come into a somewhat wider field of knowledge than that afforded by the common schools. Let us add to them for thirty years the 750,000 of pupils who complete the work in the seventh or eighth grades of the elementary schools. There will be 22,500,000 of them. Now adding all these sums—allowing for the increase in population to increase the number of youth as the years go on—and we have about 50,000,000 who have remained in school into the midst of their teens—something like two-fifths of our probable population in the next thirty years.

"This is not enough. Democracy may live, but it cannot thrive upon that basis. If we are to solve the problem of the century—the restriction of ignorance and greed in our business organization—we must solve it in the schoolhouse rather than in the Legislature or in the courtroom. So long as there is a body of the people ignorant, that ignorance will breed a greed that will be duped by demagogy, and always the greed equipped by cunning will outwit greed equipped by ignorance. The problems that this nation has solved have been for the most part simple problems. They were problems in the production of wealth. It is true that the abolition of slavery concerned the distribution of wealth. It was simple subtraction, but to deal justly with capital in its public uses, to say what is the individual's share in the public partnership and what is the share of common wealth—that is long division—a problem of distribution. And most of our national problems now pending are problems of distribution, wherefore if we are to do these complex problems of distribution, as a nation at least we must get into the eighth grade. Perhaps the average now is nearer the sixth than the eighth."

Huntington Hal

School For Young Ladies

Walks and Grounds.

IN CLOSING its fourth school year, Huntington Hall is emphasizing the fact that a school which stands for scholarship and is thoroughly democratic in spirit, is meeting with the favor which these standards warrant.

Maintaining this high standard of scholarship in College preparatory work, Huntington Hall has deemed it advisable to represent the leading Eastern Colleges and European Universities in its faculty. The course of study is correlated with the requirements of these colleges.

Students who have satisfactorily completed the college preparatory course may pursue two years of graduate study in English, Mathematics, History, French and German. This work is similar to the cultural courses of the first two years of college work and is accepted for advanced credit in these colleges.

Huntington Hall has demonstrated the fact that the girl who is earning her way in school may successfully compete with the girl who is not obliged to work for her education, and that her true worth is recognized in all social relations as well as scholarly attainments.

It is the aim of the school to teach the girl that she gains her greatest blessing in serving. The motto of the school is: "Non ministrari sed ministrare." This idea permeates all school relations, social, ethical and intellectual.

The doors of Huntington Hall are always open to the student who wants an education. A girl with thi

Boys are shut out by statute from questionable places of amusement, such as pool-rooms, of which there are few. A curfew law keeps younger boys off the streets at night. It is known as "the city of churches and schools."

The bond between city and school is unusually strong. Not only is Pasadena unfailingly loyal in the pecuniary support of the Institute, but there is a unique co-operation between school and municipality deserving of especial attention. By means of a Public Works Scholarship fund, donated by a Pasadena citizen, students approved by the Faculty are designated to apprenticeship in the public utilities, such as streets, sanitation, hydraulics and office administration, thereby gaining familiarity with practical business affairs while earning their own tuition. Actual application of knowledge simultaneously with its acquirement enforces invaluable lessons. As a recent observer has noted: "The whole tone and influence of the Institute are such that every student will be impelled to prepare himself practically for taking up the serious burdens of life and bearing a man's part on the battlefields of human achievement." There is a place in Throop Institute for any bright, upright boy that will work. The Pasadena Merchants' Association co-operates with the authorities of the Institute in providing casual employment for young men outside of school hours, and the Olive Cleveland Fund offers loans, under certain conditions, to students in need of assistance.

The Institute finds it necessary to maintain its own Fitting Academy, so that students may be thoroughly prepared for the engineering courses of the College. While the College and Academy are hereafter to be physically separate, each having its own ample campus and adequate corps of instructors, the most thorough co-operation will prevail, so that applicants for the colegiate courses will find it decidedly to their advantage to take the preparation in the Throop Institute Academy.

General courses in the Academy have been arranged: (1) To provide adequate preparation for the best colleges in the country, should the student not desire to continue his studies at the Institute; and (2) to give a broad and practical high school training to young men and young women who, for any reason, do not intend to enter college.

TO EARN MORE LEARN MORE

The Door of Opportunity Always Opens to Him Who Holds the Key of Learning.

To Know How to Do Things—to be Able to Render Service Required—Achieves Success. Competency Secures You the Foothold—Your Making Good Brings Advancement—Promotion is Attended by Commensurate Rewards, Profit, Influence and Power—The Foundation of Dollar-Winning is Knowledge

It Is Important that you lay the right foundation. Rightly started is half accomplished. You cannot succeed in business without practical business education. You attend a business college only once in a lifetime. Be sure then that you attend the right one. All are not alike. Heald's is best. The Heald Standard is Correct. You Should Attend

Heald's Business College

Your earning capacity is based on what you know and what you can do. The greater the service you are able to render the higher the reward that will be paid you. As the merchants sells goods, so you sell ability. Ability is the power or capacity to do things. It is gained by training and by study. Study is made efficient through proper direction—through the guidance of experience, through the perfection of organized tuition.

The day laborer receives his dollar a day because he is unskilled. The untrained mind is worth but little more, and the cause of poor wages lies primarily in the fact that too many applicants have untrained minds and are not worth the little wages that they ask.

Untrained minds start at the bottom of the ladder and rarely get beyond the first rung. The trained mind is limited only by its capacity of performance. Ask any business man and he will tell you that it is always hard to find an expert in any line who is out of a position. On the other hand, he is constantly pestered with applications from people without training and who are perennially out of a job.

Do you realize that every important position is today filled by people who at one time were trying to make up their minds what to do, just as you are now. All the trained minds of today were at one time untrained. Do you wonder why your friends have received promotion? It is because they grasped the golden key of opportunity afforded by a business education. How many have exclaimed: "If I had been prepared I could have secured a good position." There is but one way to accomplish anything—that is to begin right.

What will you be doing at the age of 50? Working for wages or salary? At 50 the wage-earner's power is waning, he must make room for another; while the salary-worker is at his best. Promotion has followed promotion, and his earning power increases with the years. Think very seriously about this. What you will be receiving at 50.

Twenty centuries of business progress have served to prove this infallible Greek problem: "To Earn More, Learn More."

Heald's Business Colleges have trained over 35,000 people—35,000 people who went from Heald's to business—to position. Heald's Business College offers you the same opportunities that 35,000 others have grasped, and through the Heald training have become a power in the commercial life of the Pacific Coast.

A business career offers great possibilities. This is the age of commercialism. Everything gives way to business. Business is King.

Heald's Business College will train you for a commercial career and then secure for you the position. We have more positions open than we can fill. Trained help is in demand, and with the wave of prosperity and commercial expansion before us, the cry for capable people will be tremendous.

The reputation of Heald's Business College for stability and excellence has been established by a successful career covering a period of 46 years. Our graduates, many of them in positions of employers or in executive authority, made it easy for you to procure a position as soon as you are ready to accept it. These graduates know the value of Heald training. They want people trained as they were trained.

Make up your mind now. Come to Heald's. The cost? Why, that isn't more than you fritter away in [illegible]alities. The effort? That is an endeavor combined with pleasure for the young man or young woman who is fired with the ambition to succeed. It requires only a little self-denial and steady application for the present in order to enjoy the accumulated benefits of the future.

Call on us. We will gladly discuss with you what you are most capable of doing. We will point out where your natural ability lies, and show you how to develop it into money-earning power. Don't hesitate to call—it's a pleasure for us to talk to you.

We have here of learning taken by those who fell under the influence of English thought in the days that followed Bacon. German thinkers of a century ago laughed openly at the undercurrent of thought in England based on the idea that Bacon was a philosopher and his works were philosophy. Among us of English modes of thought until very recently "philosophy" has been applied to the study of natural phenomena and to little else. The German thinkers, with deeper penetration and more accuracy of expression, called this study science, retaining the word "philosophy" for application to the higher inquiry into the sphere of pure reason according to the Kantian school, to the realm of the imagination, to art, poetry, psychology and religion. Laid by the side of Kant, the Schlegels, Jean Paul Friedrich Richter, Heine, Goethe and other leaders of thought in Germany, the studies of Bacon, Locke, Mill, Buckle, Tyndall, Huxley and even Darwin were one-sided. The Germans had great students in these lines, too, but they were scientists, not philosophers. To be sure, Huxley and Darwin did try to fathom the depths of the mysteries through the media of the material, and in this were entitled to the epithet philosophers.

The reputation of Francis Bacon rests on two facts, his work on the inductive method of pursuing scientific inquiry and his supposed mastery over all the learning of his day. There is here a broad basis on which to establish a great reputation. The work of Bacon gave a new and true direction to the study of natural phenomena, and it would require a large volume to trace the mere outlines of what the modern world owes to this. We owe most of the scientific development of 300 years to the influence of Bacon. The man who had at his command all the learning of his time, even if it were three centuries since, surely merits to be called great.

But here is where we must not exaggerate. Bacon knew mathematics as the science was in his time, and would be great in the science today. He knew law as it was then, and would be a great lawyer today. Here his greatness as measured by today ends. There are many greater mathematicians than he, and greater lawyers, too. He was a ripe classical scholar, but there are greater than he today. There are men who know more law, more mathematics and more Latin and Greek than he knew. In history he was well read as it was then, and doubtless was well versed in Biblical learning for a man of his time. He did not know Roman history as Mommsen did, nor Greek history as Grote or Smith. His Biblical learning was confused, narrow, inaccurate as compared to that of the late Dean Millman, and would not be worth the slightest consideration today by the side of those who have made an exhaustive study of the book in all its known manuscripts and in all excerpts from it in the writings of others. A modern Biblical professor, if he should examine Bacon, would make him ridiculous in a moment.

When we come to the modern sciences which have sprung up as a result of adopting Bacon's way of investigation as taught in the great work, Novum Organum, here the master would be leagues out at sea and fathoms deep in dense ignorance. He would be lost.

And there were other men of Bacon's times little if any his inferiors. In most branches of knowledge, Ben Jonson, "rare Ben," would have stood up well in comparison. There are many men of our day in all respects the equal of Bacon in all the branches of learning in which he was great with other knowledge he had none of. Gladstone will easily bear comparison with Bacon for wide, various learning. As to any one coming as near comprehending all the learning of our day as Bacon did of his, that is impossible. The sphere of knowledge has widened so almost infinitely that no one life is long enough to master it all, no brain strong enough to hold the mass or any but a fraction of it. Bacon was to the men of his day a walking cyclopedia. In our time no man can become that in a general way. So we must not make Francis Bacon an intellectual giant and our scholars pigmies because he had so nearly acquired all the knowledge of his time, and none of us can claim that distinction for our day. As well inveigh against the lake because it will not hold the waters of the sea.

And the Novum Organum? Not Bacon's at all in the sense of a new method of investigation of natural phenomena. A mere revival of the work of one who lived 2000 years before Francis Bacon was born.

This leads us back to the Crusades and their influence on western thought. The Crusaders brought back the works of Aristotle, and Bacon steeped his mind in the well springs of thought which sprang from the great brain of the Stagirite and pointed men to nature as the book from which to learn the secrets of that old and mysterious wizard. Scholars had been going to books to learn why snow is cold and rain runs down hill. They were accepting the mistakes of their predecessors and making them the wisdom by which they should guide their own steps. Bacon had learned from Aristotle to go to the snow and the rain themselves and interrogate nature anew to learn what the dead had failed to grasp. Mother Nature is as much alive to us as to Adam. She is as kind to us as to her earliest offspring. Her secrets are infinite, and she will reveal them only to the studious. Bacon made this fact a vital power to men. He converted scholars with their ipse dixit into students with their lenses, crucibles, collocation and comparison of facts from which to formulate new laws for the universe and truer views for men.

Bacon's work was great, but at best he was merely a follower in the footsteps of the great student of Greece.

Out of the Field at Even
By Wilbur D. Nesbit

And behold there came an old man from his work out of the field at even.—Judges xx, 16.

When comes the twilight of the years
  We leave the field where we have mowed
And turn with peace, as one who hears
  A song far down the sunset road;
And scythe and sickle we lay down,
  For now we know that we may bide
At rest in countryside or town—
  Forth from the field at eventide.

And some look back with yearning eyes
  For that so much was left undone,
And some look on with dumb surprise
  When now they see the sinking sun,
And some see harvests great and fair
  And fields swept long and far and wide—
Yet neither seed nor grain we bear
  Forth from the field at eventide.

Then comes the rest beneath the shade,
  The gentle, soft release from toil;
No longer now need be obeyed
  The rule of them that drive and spoil,
For now what tasks we found to do
  We have done, or we have denied
It matters not, the work is through;
  Forth from the field at eventide.

And now the marvel of it all
  Strikes suddenly upon the heart,
That they who win or they who fall
  Plays each his own appointed part,
That gain or loss, or joy or tears,
  Are things that twilight shadows hide,
When we, as come the sunset years,
  Go from the field at eventide.

Aye, empty-handed as we came,
  We leave the field of strife and stress—
But in our hearts a deathless flame
  Gives us a light that comes to bless
And cheer our souls as does the glow
  That dyes the dreaming twilight tide.
And so into the night we go
  Forth from the field at eventide.

Marriage.

Marriage is a divine institution so ably managed by man that although it has been doing business for several thousand years, it is not yet on a dividend-paying basis.

It is the biggest trust on earth, for its capital stock is love, consisting of two-thirds faith, which is preferred, and one-third hope, which is common.

No goods are sent on trial, and if not as represented you must make the best of it, if you are poor; otherwise the matter may be arranged, for while avowedly a domestic corporation, and union in its sympathies, marriage is also benevolent in its scope, giving more employment to poor lawyers than all other corporations taken together.

Notwithstanding repeated failures, its bonds are the best security of the kind on the market, and will not seek investors; at least, until something better offers.—[Life.

Saint-Gaudens's Philosophy.

"The prevailing thought in my life is that we are on a planet going, no one knows where—probably to something higher (Darwin evolution,") writes Augustus Saint-Gaudens in his reminiscences in the September Century. "But whatever it is, the passage is terribly sad and tragic, and to bear up against what seems at times the great doom that is over us, love and courage are the great things. I try to express it without entering into any philosophy or definition of art. I care nothing for the thousand philosophies about art, the intricacies of which seem too complex for me to delve into. The thing to do is to try and do good, and any serious and earnest effort seems to me to be, to our limited vision, a drop in the ocean of evolution to something better."

The Huang Houtzes. By Frank G. Carpenter.

BRIGANDS OF MANCHURIA.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND BANDITS TAKE TOLL OF ALL TRAVELERS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CHIN-CHOU (Manchuria) 1909.—I have been riding all day on the railroad with armed guards at both ends of my car. We had a company of soldiers in the third-class compartment next to the engine, and every station was guarded. There has been a recent outbreak of the Huang Houtzes. They have been holding up trains in the various parts of Manchuria, and just the other day they robbed the express under the very shadow of the city of Harbin and captured $40,000. Even here, in the south, the trains are not safe, and they all have soldiers upon them. The first thing one sees on his arrival at every depot is a squad of Chinese soldiers carrying Mauser rifles. They line themselves up in front of the train and stand at attention until it pulls out.

Group of Manchurians, possible brigands.

These guards are a necessity on account of the Huang Houtzes, who form, perhaps, the most remarkable organization of brigands now known. They might be called the Tuaregs of Manchuria, for they surpass in number and daring the veiled, camel-mounted bandits of the Sahara. They have rapidly increased since the Boxer uprising, and especially since the Japanese-Russian war. They now number over 200,000, and their agents are to be found in every city and village. They have a regular toll which they collect on all travelers outside the railroads, and every Chinese passenger who goes over Manchuria on foot, in a cart, or on horseback, must pay tribute to them. They have fixed charges as to goods in transit, and the carts carrying freight are marked with little printed flags with red borders, furnished by them. Upon the flags are printed Chinese characters, certifying that the owner has paid his toll, and that the vehicle and drivers are not to be molested. Otherwise the man is sure to be robbed and his men may be killed.

A few months ago on the same day 100 carts started out from Mukden. Of these all but two had paid their toll and bore Huang Houtze flags. The men and goods in the carts so flagged completed their journey in safety; but the others, who had refused to pay the toll, were attacked by the bandits before they had gone thirteen miles from the city. The goods were stolen and their drivers were killed.

During my stay in Mukden, I talked with the agent of a big mining concession, a man who represents a large organization of British and Japanese capitalists. He is opening up a gold region in the Kirin province, and has to send his supplies to the mining camps across country. He says he dares not start out a cart without such protection, and that in important cases he usually employs one of the brigands to go along in person. He did this with two English mining engineers whom he sent forward last week. Said he:

"They might have gotten through all right with the Huang Houtze flags on their carts, but, outside the great organization of brigands, there are petty bands of robbers who might attack them. Such men will not dare to touch any one guarded by a Huang Houtze; for, if caught, they would surely be killed by the latter.

Mounted Robbers.

The Huang Houtzes are well mounted. They have Chinese ponies, which can go thirty miles a day without tiring, and can be pushed to twice that. The ponies are never groomed, and are exceedingly dirty. The bandits carry nothing with them but their arms, except a long fur coat, which they wear in the winter, and a quilt, folded over their saddles. They have modern guns and are armed with revolvers. The majority carry Mauser rifles or big-bore Winchesters. Some have Russian pistols, and many have Japanese weapons which they have collected from the battlefields or have gotten hold of in some way during the war. Their ammunition is of European make, and some of them have cartridges of smokeless powder. During the China-Japan war they bought or stole a quantity of rifles from the runaway Chinese soldiers, and got additional arms in 1900, when the arsenals of North China were looted and the arms distributed gratis by the officials. They have captured some guns from the Russians during the past few years and they have altogether a splendid equipment.

A Big Organization.

I am told that these bandits have existed as an organization for ages, but that they have never been so associated together as now. Their resorts have been the mountainous regions of Mongolia and Manchuria, from where they have gone down regularly to prey upon the people of the lowlands. The words Huang Houtze mean red beards. It is said that these outlaws sometimes dye their hair and beards red, and that thus decorated their names become synonymous with the devil in the minds of the northern Chinese. I understand that each band has one chief, with several minor chiefs, who form his bodyguard. There are about fifty of these head men in a band, and each has ten or twenty brigands under him, the whole making a gang of 1000 or more. Such a band will take charge of a certain part of the country, similar bands being located in other regions. The brigands have a system of intercommunication by which they combine and by which the guarantee of one is respected by the others.

Every band has its secret agents in the locality it operates. These men know all about the the towns and villages. They notify the cargoes of goods are to be shipped and, as sible, the wealth and standing of the shipper are said to keep books, including the rolls of the dits' names and the pay they receive, as well profit of each robbery and its disposition.

Taxing the Villages.

The Huang Houtzes are taxing the villages of churia. The chief of the band holding the right tain territory keeps track of the wealth of tants, and he makes almost every man pay tion from the Huang Houtze raids. Villages as such, and in these cases the brigands off other robbers. They sometimes station the towns, and in case of attack come to police. In such places the Huang nishes the flags to travelers and this the larger cities.

Take, for instance, Newchwang, seaport of Manchuria. During a visit that I made to the penitentiary in Mukden, I asked the director if he had any Huang Houtzes among his convicts. He replied that he had, and that he would point out one in the next ward we entered. He did so. The man's head had a pigtail as black as that of the ordinary Chinese, and there was nothing to distinguish him from the others in the shop where he worked. I afterward photographed two Huang Houtzes between the guards in the yard of the prison.

Dr. Christie, the medical missionary, in charge of the great hospital at Mukden, tells me that he always has patients under treatment who have been wounded in these Huang Houtzes raids ond that sometimes they are Huang Houtzes themselves.

Wiping Out the Brigands.

The authorities say that the time has come now when these brigands must be exterminated. Their raids have attracted the attention of outside nations, and the reform movement which is going on here demands that trade be freed from their taxes. It is only on account of the duties having been comparatively light that an outcry has not arisen long before this. The administration of Mukden, the capital of Manchuria, is one of the most progressive of the Chinese empire, and the army connected with it is especially well drilled. The country could be policed as far as the main trade routes are concerned, and this will probably be done within a short time. If the government once puts its foot down and insists that the Huang Houtzes be destroyed, an end will soon be made to these raids and the brigands, with the exception of those in the mountainous districts, will disappear.

During my stay in Korea the military officials told me that their chief trouble is not with the insurgents, but with some Korean brigands who are much like the Huang Houtzes. They have their homes in the mountains, and sally out to prey upon the villages. These Korean brigands are supposed to number 15,000; and they have one chief who is practically the head of the whole. The Japanese soldiers are policing the mountainous districts, and they are killing these brigands wherever they find them. A similar policy is bound to be instituted in Manchuria. The Chinese government is now sending emigrants into the country north of Mukden, and it expects to open up much of its rich government land to settlement. Mining concessions have been granted to foreigners, and the Japanese are insisting that the country be made peaceful. Above this and more important than all, is the very general desire on the part of the men who are running the Chinese government to introduce western methods and the new civilization, so that, altogether, it would seem that the Huang Houtze, powerful as he is today, is doomed to soon disappear.

This Dog an Explorer.

A wonderful record as a traveler has been achieved by Dash, the smooth-haired fox terrier which accompanied Dr. M. A. Stein, the archaeological explorer, throughout his great journey of 10,000 miles, undertaken on behalf of the Indian government, through Central Asia into China and back.

Though the aggregate of the marches amounted roughly to 10,000 miles in two years and eight months, the actual distance covered by Dash, taking into account his canine habits of progression, may be estimated at well over 20,000 miles. Dash made that journey on foot practically the whole way, except when he went "pony-back" for short distances at times of great heat. When in the Taklamakan Desert, Dash, like the rest of the party, had his water allowance strictly limited. It came from the supply carried on camels in the form of ice.

Dash went over mountain passes as high as 16,000 feet above sea level. Throughout the journey, the dog kept well, and his menu was made up of scraps from the camp larder. Each night he slept in Dr. Stein's tent, and on occasions proved himself a very useful watchdog. On the high Thibetan uplands his chief recreation was chasing wild donkeys, yaks, and the like. He managed to kill several hares and bring them in to supplement the store of food.

Upon many journeys along the Indian northwest frontier Dash has also been the comrade of his master, and he has probably seen far more of the world than most people. He has true British terrier blood in his veins, although India was his birthplace. The dog is now in quarantine after having come from India.—[London Daily Mail.

A Lobster That Sought Coin.

Senator Scott of West Virginia, who has a keen sense of the ludicrous, tells this one on a constituent residing in one of the backwoods counties:

"An old fellow who had been a member of the House of Delegates came up to shake hands with me one day in Wheeling. In the course of our talk I asked him if he were going to run for the Legislature that fall. He shook his head emphatically. 'No, sirree; I'm not a-gwine to run fur office enny mo'. There hain't a dollar to be made out of gwine to the Legislature. What I'm er gwine to do is to pack my trunk and go down to Charleston and git in that lobster game goin' on down thar when the Legislature meets. Thar's whar the coin is.' "

The Senator was of the opinion that his candid friend meant "lobbyist" when he said "lobster," but that doubtless the latter word suited him much better personally.—[Baltimore American.

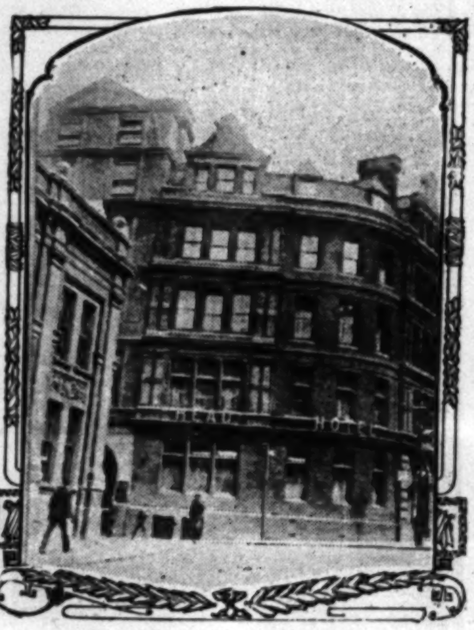
Saracen's Head Hotel.

PASSING OF ANOTHER LONDON LINK WITH DICKENS.

By a Special Contributor.

ANOTHER link with Dickens will soon be lost to London by the closing of the old Saracen's Head Hotel in Snow Hill. The old place has been compelled to close by the pressure of the new budget taxes, for although it had a good trade with the men employed in the neighboring meat market at Smithfield, it could not bear up against the new license duties.

The Saracen's Head was an important place in its day. Dickens immortalized it in "Nicholas Nickleby" when he made Mr. Wackford Squeers of Dotheboys Hall in Yorkshire stop there when he came to London to interview the young gentlemen who were to be "accurately educated" at his academy. Parts of the building are about 400 years old, and there are records showing that it has been used as a hotel for at least that period. Of course it has been rebuilt a number of times, and the structure now looks quite modern.



OLD SARACEN'S HEAD HOTEL.

In the mail-coach days it was one of the recognized stopping-places. Lord Nelson when he left home as a boy to join the navy, passed a night there on his way through London.

The guests at the hotel used to collect on the balconies which surrounded the old yard to watch the coaches arrive and depart. This yard has long since disappeared, its site being covered with business buildings. It is expected that the old hotel building will either be torn down or converted into warehouses. C. B.

The Joy of Life.

The joy of life, of glowing sun,
  Doth surge through me in dancing streams;
The summer's wine is freely poured,
  And fills my soul with joyous dreams.

Thou shining sun, thy warning rays
  Doth fill my form with golden flames,
Till all of me is strong with life,
  And naught but joy my spirit claims.

O sighing winds amid the grain,
  What fragrance sweet is on thy breath
That wakes in me a teasing thought?
  What mystery is on thy breath?

Now glancing down, the blue sky smiles
  Through filmy veils and snowy bars;
It seems to say with flowing tones:
  "Seek nearer, thou, not up in stars."

The swaying grain doth nod to me,
  And laughingly with glancing beams
It seems to say in rippling notes:
  "We know, we know more than thy dreams!"

So with the mystery still unsolved,
  I press the earth and touch the grain;
I smile to the sky and softly sigh:
  "Some day I shall not seek in vain!"

Seamen Scarce in England.

Ten years ago it was estimated that while during the preceding half-century the British merchant tonnage had almost trebled, the number of British seamen engaged in the mercantile marine had decreased by 25 per cent. and the boys and young men by 85 per cent. In 1857 there were 96,914 petty officers and sailors, not including Lascars, employed in the mercantile marine of the United Kingdom; in 1875 it was estimated that there were 82,000; in 1899 the estimated number had fallen to 60,709, while in 1901 there were only 44,290.—[Fortnightly Review.

WOMEN SAVANTS WHO SELL KNOWLEDGE TO GOVERNMENT.

By a Special Contributor.

WOMEN are making their way into the field of science. Quite a number of them are now employed to do scientific work for the government. A few are chemists; others are bacteriologists. One is an expert in the fungi that cause diseases of plants; another is an authority on shrimps; and yet another is a maker of gigantic bugs for the Bureau of Insects.

Wandering through the huge white marble buildings of the Department of Agriculture, one sees many women, in neat white aprons, some of them mere girls, bending over microscopes and test tubes. Their activities seem very mysterious; but, when one inquires, one learns that they are engaged in original research work relating in one way or another to farming or gardening.

Dr Margaret Huddleston pomologist

Miss Evelyn G Mitchell.

Mrs Otto Heideman

Miss Alice Henkel. botanist

Mrs. Flora W. Patter expert in fungi

The case of Miss Alice Henkel, a botanist in the Plant Bureau, is noteworthy, if only for the reason that she entered that establishment originally in an ordinary clerical capacity, as a stenographer and typewriter. That was only a few years ago, when, a mere girl, she came to Washington from Cincinnati. But she was the inheritor of scientific aptitudes from a family in which there had been many searchers after exact truth in botanical and other lines, and she quickly took up plant study as a professional pursuit.

Miss Henkel, though still a young woman, is the author of a number of scientific bulletins already issued by the Plant Bureau. One of these is on the subject of "Weeds." Another is on "Drug Plants," this latter subject being one to which she has devoted special attention. Up to the present time, more matter of hers has been published by the government than from the pen of any other woman.

Miss Margaret Huddleson is another young woman scientist in the Department of Agriculture. She hails from Kansas City, Mo. Not long ago she took a high degree at a local college of medicine, and is now a full-fledged doctor. This she did in the intervals of her work as a pomologist, such being her particular specialty. Her most important business in the Division of Pomology is to give instruction by letter to people all over the country who want to know about how to grow fruits.

Mrs. Flora Wambaugh Patterson, who is a Washington woman and a widow, enjoys a considerable celebrity as a mycologist—which means a students of fungi. She has charge of a division of the Plant Bureau which deals with fungus enemies of plants—especially those that are of economic importance. She also identifies mushrooms, determining whether they are edible or not; but this is a minor feature of her work. Under her charge is a great and wonderful collection of specimens of parasitic fungi, on leaves, stems, and other parts of plants. These compose a sort of rogues' gallery, by the help of which such foes of plant society, when caught, are duly identified. An important part of Mrs. Patterson's task is to inspect plants introduced into this country through our agricultural explorers, in order to make sure that they bring no destructive diseases with them.

Unquestionably the most versatile woman scientist in government employ is Miss Evelyn Mitchell. A very young person, several years under 30, she is already one of the greatest living authorities on mosquitoes. Her recently-published monograph on "Mosquito Life" is a wonderfully comprehensive account of those insects. She is not only a naturalist, but a practical biologist, having contributed a good deal to the sum of human knowledge through her own discoveries.

Miss Mitchell was born at East Orange, N. J. She worked her way through Cornell University, taking the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1902. Afterward she taught field zoölogy at Cornell, and when Dr. Dupree, surgeon-general of Louisiana, sent to Cornell for an assistant in his mosquito work, she was appointed. While studying mosquitoes, she used to allow them to feed upon her pretty arms by attaching thereto little bottles containing them. This was to make sure that their eggs should be fertile for subsequent hatching.

This remarkable young woman came to Washington in 1904, to study other kinds of insects. At present, she is specializing in gnats. Her drawings of "diptera" are considered quite astonishing. She also draws shells for the Smithsonian Institution (a very difficult art,) where, under government auspices, she chiefly pursues her scientific labors.

Likewise attached to the Smithsonian Institution is Miss Mary Rathbun, who is a sister of one of the assistant secretaries of that establishment. She is one of the greatest authorities on crabs now living, and is also highly esteemed as an expert in shrimps, being equal in this line to any living scientist of male sex. For several years past she has been in charge of the section of marine invertebrates in the Smithsonian.

Another scientific worker in the same institution is Miss Harriet Richardson. Though a woman of considerable means, she is devoted to the pursuit of knowledge in regard to "isopods." Lest there be anybody who does not know what isopods are, it may be explained that they are fourteen-foot crustaceans—such, for instance, as sow bugs and pill bugs. They are very attractive, and are more or less likely to be found in damp cellars, under doorsteps, or wherever there is moisture and decay.

Pill bugs are particularly fascinating. When alarmed, they roll themselves up into little balls, and "play 'possum." In England, in the rural districts, people often swallow them for medicine. They are specially recommended for indigestion. The female pill bug has a pouch on her breast, to hold her young ones until they are old enough to take care of themselves—thus imitating in a humble way the method practiced by the kangaroo. When any scientist abroad catches a new kind of pill bug or sow bug, he sends it to Miss Richardson, in order to make sure of its proper classification.

Miss Clara Ludlow is not only a botanist of considerable repute, but also an expert in mosquitoes. The latter study, in fact, is her specialty. She has discovered a whole fauna of hitherto-unknown mosquitoes in the Philippines, and is the foremost authority on certain groups of these insects. Her work in the office of the surgeon-general of the army, where she is employed, relates mainly to problems having to do with mosquitoes as carriers of malaria, yellow other diseases.

Behind the Scenes.

THE HOTEL CLERK ON THE COMING DRAMATIC SEASON.

By a Special Contributor.

"THE papers say there's goin' to be a lot of new stars on the stage this comin' season," said the House Detective of the St. Reckless.

"Few escape it," said the Hotel Clerk. "When a young woman goes into the theatrical game these times she's almost certain to do one of two things—get married to Nat Goodwin or become a star. In exceptional cases they've been known to do both.

"In the olden, golden days of the theatrical profession, but more olden than golden if anybody should happen to ask, it took years and years and years to make a star, and even then it wasn't always certain they'd succeed. To begin with, the material had to come of a theatrical family. That was an essential point. She couldn't get along without it any more than a summer resort can get along without a Lover's Leap, Within Easy Walking Distance Of The Hotel.

"Her father had played with Booth and Barrett before Booth and Barrett got particular, and he wore a fur overcoat with moth eggs nestling under the lapels, and ordered the waiter to fry his steak on both sides in the tone of Mark Anthony putting J. Caesar away with a few kind words. He even snored with the proper dramatic value on at the right places, and he shaved himself of a morning with the appropriate gestures. You still see him occasionally on Broadway walking slowly up and down so as to prolong the treat for the onlookers as much as possible. His air of deep gloom is caused by constant reflection on the distressing fact that he's the only man left in these degenerate days of the profession who knows what real acting is, and can do same.

"So much for father. The future star is also bred right on the other side of the family. Her mother was descended from Mrs. Siddons or the elder Keen or something of the sort. She, personally, made her first appearance on the stage at the age of two years big, being carried on in a basket with a hole cut in the side so she could look through it and count up the house. Boys who used to run away to sea and become great admirals, always did so at the age of 11, as I recall, but the great actress of the recent past got her start at tender 2. Her training from that time on was consistent. At 5, she could guess the amount of paper out front almost as well as her papa could, and at 9, she could spot the party who'd come in on a lithograph pass as far back as the last row in the dress circle. Before she reached her sixteenth birthday, she'd ridden so much on day coaches at night that she couldn't sleep comfortably without a cinder in each eye and a strip of red plush to rest her neck on. Then she joined a traveling stock company where everybody frequently walked, except the ghost, and the manager changed the bill twice a week, but his shirt only once. Finally, when she'd played seven or eight thousand parts and could lean across the footlights and weep with those large, emotional Clara Morris tears into the orchestra leader's lap at will, they gave her a whack at a leading role, and in a few more years after that, if she had good luck and nothing happened maybe, she got to be a regular sure-enough star and her grandchildren by her first marriage came to her first appearance on Broadway. She either made a hit and stayed there some months or else moved right on to the Old Actress's Home without any unnecessary delays.

"But not any more. They catch 'em much younger these times. They don't wait until an actress is the right age to play the late Mrs. Macbeth before they give her a chance at Ophelia. It's exit Lady Lampchimneys, enter laughingly Dottie Forshure, the overnight success, converted into a metropolitan favorite in about the time that it takes to boil a two-minute egg. This young woman is a society recruit, who's won the Richard K. Fox Lightweight Alimony Belt and has a proud old patrician name that is familiar on two continents and in several divorce courts. Or else she graduated from the chorus in a few minutes after having acquired true dramatic merit by smacking a stage manager in his limpid orb. Or she is one who has graduated from a dramatic school with high, not to say expensive, honors, and has a rich but comparatively easy father, and also a dimple, and so some early bird of an astute manager gets Clyde Fitch to write a play around it, with several strong scenes for the dimple.

"Pretty soon, Manager Jubal T. Earlybird has the honor to announce the newest comedienne or character actress as the case may be, and frequently is, in an entirely new production supported by a competent company and a wealthy young member of the Angel family from Pittsburgh. About the same time, the press agent gets active and the Sunday papers begin to interview the new star about her trained pet angle worm named Clarence, and to paint descriptions of her nineteen trunks of wardrobe. Her picture is in all the shop windows, showing her wearing an almost expression of countenance on her face, and you and me, Larry, detect ourselves in the act of giving up two bones per each to see her ramble through three acts of conversation and atmosphere, the climax being the dinner gown worn at the end of the third act, which is a wonderful dinner gown, so tight all the way up and down that nobody on earth could eat a dinner while wearing it without spoiling the contour by looking lumpy in front, and hollowed out at the top like an old-fashioned victoria. And so she turns out to be one of the twenty-four unparalleled and unapproachable hits of the current season, or the current and prune season, if you'd prefer to put it that way.

"That's the way they turn 'em out now, Larry. The old order changeth and the new order gets all the change, as the poet says. But take it from me there are some traditions of the stage that'll always last. They always have. Take a musical comedy now. Take any musical comedy you like; they're like the run of shad—always about the same. If it's an opera with a chorus of stage sailors in it, they all suffer from hip disease, and come on the stage hip-hip-hipping and lifting up their poor suffering legs by pulling first on one side of the waistband and then on the other. But if there're not stage sailors, but stage brigands, they have the lower limbs tightly bandaged from the knees to the ankles with tape tied over the bandages. I suppose the first chorus brigand that ever got into a musical comedy had been to a brigand's picnic somewhere and got all poisoned up with poison ivy and then the fashion of treating the legs with bandages has been followed ever since. No properly-organized comic-opera naval lieutenant could sing his moonlight solo unless he wore white flannel pants and had a Gordon setter calcium trailing him all over the place, retrieving the spot light for him. No true comic opera comedian would dare to take a drink out of a pop bottle without rubbing his stomach with a circular motion and saying 'Ah-h-h,' like that. All the show girls have to be vurry, vurry, tired and haughty and have a contempt for the audience which try as they will, they cannot conceal. And there's always one of them who has a drag like a patent tooth harrow with the manager and combines more languor and more lingerie than all the others put together. And the comic-opera milk maids must wear buckled slippers and short fluffy skirts, and laced bodices and the hair a-flowing free, the same as all milkmaids in real life would certainly do, were it not for certain exigencies of the milkmaiding business, said exigencies including the cows."

"Well, it seems to me the musical shows is gettin' better," said the House Detective.

"Maybe they are," said the Hotel Clerk, "and then again maybe we're getting used to them. I suppose having the cholera would seem much pleasanter if you'd already had it a few times."

"You speak feelin'ly," said the House Detective. "Have you been studyin' the theatrical situation closely?"

"I have," said the Hotel Clerk. "I was behind the scenes of one of our largest metropolitan productions here just the other night. A friend took me back. He put twenty thousand into the show a few months ago to help advance the cause of art. He doesn't draw down any dividends, of course, in case there's a profit, but he'll be allowed to kick in with an occasional check if there should be any losses, and, besides, he's permitted to go freely behind the scenes and talk as much as he likes to the chorus men. Even the stage manager speaks to him sometimes, and fills him with pride.

"'Twas certainly a great experience for me, going around behind with him. I stood as one entranced in that fairyland which most of us only get peeps at, when our seats are away over on the side aisle and we see a husky gentleman in a red flannel undershirt in the wings, directing the performance with one arm and wiping his nose on the other. But there was I, in the magic glamour of it all—a glamour smelling of grease paint, cheese sandwiches, old clo's, varnish, and the dust of ages, and inhabited by flitting visions of beauty with processed eyebrows, fireproofed complexions and hair of the which is switch variety. Also inhabited at intervals by stage hands who walked over me, dragging pieces of scenery and poked me in the back with sharp-cornered things and called me a 'Say You,' and told me to stand away from wherever I was standing.

"Hardly had I got acclimated to the glamour when I heard cries of pain. Over in a corner was the strong young leading man, the one that says in the first act: 'Curses on the luck—the Foul Fiend himself is in the cards tonight,' and subsequently goes gadzooking and go-zounding around with a sword, licking villains. He was the one that was moaning with pain. It seemed he had an excruciating hang nail. I presume if it had been a gum boil he'd have swooned from the agony.

"And presently I could distinguish still other cries. I made inquiry, and discovered that it was merely Merry Madge Mairfair, who is billed as the Always-Laughing Comedienne, licking her dresser. She'd swatted one of the stage hands coming in and stopped to tell the manager what she thought of him, and where he got off, and now she was passing out a few to the maid. You know how it is, Larry, when you go along the street and see a sign over a liquor store reading 'Happy Johnny Casey's Place,' and go inside and find the sourest-looking old Turk in the known world, standing behind the bar wiping the hair off the bung starter, where he's just smashed a stew on the dome with it, and you speak to him and he answers in the cinnamon-bear language, being two grunts and a low, hoarse growl? Well, that's always Happy Johnny. It would appear that it's much the same way on the stage. Merry Madge licked her maid good and proper from what I learned of it.

"There was one well-known matinée idol behind the scenes also. He'd come in to get promises of help from some fellow-performers for his coming testimonial. It seems the poor fellow has fallen behind in the alimony payments to several of his wives and the people at the garage are pressing him very hard with their bills and he owes his chauffeur several months back pay and is altogether in a deplorable way, financially speaking, being confronted with the dread specter of destitution and having only an engagement at $200 a week and a couple of tenement-houses between him and actual want. So he's getting up a benefit, and his brother professionals, knowing that any day the wolf may also be howling at the door of their touring cars, are going to come to his aid generously, as is their wont."

"D'ye think we'll have a good theatrical season this fall?" asked the House Detective.

"We will if the moving-picture places stay open," said the Hotel Clerk.

Cruising in a Sailboat.

TRIP AMONG THE ISLANDS OF THE SANTA BARBARA CHANNEL.

By a Special Contributor.

EIGHTY years before the Pilgrim Fathers landed on Plymouth Rock, brave old Cabrillo steered his little vessel along the unknown shores of Southern California, and was welcomed by the Indians that thronged the islands of Santa Barbara. Unlike Catalina, these islands are almost tenantless today; and cruising along their wild and picturesque coasts, now turning the gaze into silent coves, and then to sailless expanse of the Pacific, one can fancy time turned back 300 years, and himself the discoverer of far-off lonely lands.

To the three occupants of a small sailboat, which, late one summer night, glided through the black water of the bay of Santa Barbara, the town, drawn in lines of light, boulevard, bath house and Potter Hotel ablaze with incandescents, presented a wonder scene far beyond the imagination of a Cabrillo. To leave behind that brilliance and steer seaward into the darkness in such a tiny craft seemed to the two landsmen of the trio an adventurous thing to do; and the captain's extended counsel with another boatman before resolving to take advantage of the favorable breeze indicated that night voyages were unusual even for him. Moreover, as we slowly forged by the immense bulk of an anchored warship, to our amazement he hailed the deck; and, asking for the officer in charge, explained in the friendliest way, as one commander to another, that he was about to go seaward, and would be pleased to know what the ship's glass showed regarding the weather.

"The barometer shows fair weather," came down the courteous reply.

"Thank you," and turning to us: "Now, boys, brace up the peak halliards."

"Have to talk United States, Cap, if you want me to do anything," said Fred; and the rest of his crew was equally unresponsive.

"Hold the wheel, then," and the captain went forward and pulled the sail fully up.

"If you weren't so ignorant," he remarked casually, when later we proposed taking turns at the wheel, "I might be able to turn in part of the night. But never mind; I never bat an eye while I have hold of the wheel. You sleep tonight, and I'll sleep tomorrow."

Since the cabin was too stuffy, and the cock pit too small for a man taller than about three feet, we sought the soft spots of the deck, and dozingly watched the lines of light grow dim in the distance, and the great flare of the lighthouse gradually recede and lessen on the starboard quarter.

Great Light Ahead Causes Alarm.

Suddenly I started, wide awake. The lighthouse was gone; the lights of Santa Barbara were gone. All was blackness where they had been. The wind had changed its direction, and was blowing from dead ahead. I peered forward under the boom, and with a thrill of alarm, saw, apparently not far ahead and bearing down upon us, a great light, as of a large vessel.

"Steamer coming right down on us, Captain!" I yelled.

"Eh! What! Where? Where?" and starting up, he grabbed the lantern and sprang out of the cock pit.

"We can't get out of her way!" exclaimed Fred. "Our sail's flapping."

"She's farther off than she looks," said the captain. "Maybe we better light the boat's lamps, though. Might get arrested for carrying no lights."

"Where's Santa Barbara?" I demanded, looking astern over the cold, dark water, and thinking a dry, warm jail on solid land not without its attractions.

"Farther out, are they stars?" broke in Fred in a puzzled tone. "Say"—a long pause—"that steamer's the lighthouse! We're turned around and the lights farther out are Santa Barbara!"

It was true. The captain had been asleep, and the boat, left to itself, had come around nose into the wind. Mutiny broke out forthwith, and the captain agreed to take a watch below, where he peacefully snored away until daylight.

The wind, which had kept our sail full all night, died away with the coming of the dawn; and a fog settled upon the sea, leaving us the center of a small circle of water, surrounded and surmounted by a ghostly dome of mist. Great glassy swells lazily moved toward us out of one side, gently raised and lurched our craft, and glided on across the circle; the boom swung idly to and fro over the cock pit; and the boat, without steerage way, turned helplessly from one point of the compass to another.

A Good Breakfast.

The calm lasted just long enough to give the captain an opportunity to redeem his lost prestige by cooking a breakfast of ham and eggs, the smell of which might well have made the fishes hungry. The renewed breeze then puffed away the fog and disclosed our position, some two or three miles off the wharf of the town of Ventura. From the sea this little city, seated between the hills and the beach, flanked on one side by the river, the cañon of which opens a vista of lofty, pine-covered ridges, and on the other side by the broad green fields and orchards of the rich Santa Clara Val-
markable even in Southern California.

The breeze freshened wonderfully fast, and we a snoring wind that ruffled the channel into sel far over. The lee rail was awash in a few and with a heavy rain of spray from windward, tiny cock pit was soon the only place on deck ning with water. But how we sailed! With and jib our thirty-footer skimmed the twenty miles to Santa Cruz Island in about three hours.

In the last ten miles where the current ran against the wind, the skimming was at times deep. Although not "mountain high," the heavy viewed from a deck with but twelve inches of

A moment or two of quiet was followed by a sudden and terrific crashing, as if the roof were falling.

"Sit still!" yelled the Spaniard, as the boat lurched. "That's the swell breaking against the end!"

Whoever it was that felt an impulse to leave, settled down; and we lighted a torch, prepared beforehand by saturating with coal oil a gunny sack tied to the end of a long stick. As the light flared up, the frightened barking and plunging of what seemed a multitude of invisible seals was added to the noise of the water. Their clamor, magnified and multiplied as it echoed and reëchoed in the cave, made us uneasy for the safety of the boat; but not a seal did we see until they were splashing through the opening, fifty feet astern.

The cave turned abruptly to the right, and we went cautiously along, with boat hooks feeling for the walls, the torch, except for a small circle around us, making only deeper the darkness. With four occupants the little skiff was well down in the water, making it necessary to keep on the alert to prevent the strong swells from throwing us against the sides. Shipwreck in that blackness would be serious. We reached perhaps 500 feet from the mouth of the cave; the air, saturated with spray and laden with the fumes of the torch, became hard to breath; besides which the seals had left a strong circus smell behind them; and, after landing on a broad ledge and making an unsuccessful search for young seals, we returned to the outer world.

A slight sea was running as we went back to Friars, and the small breakers at the landing-place brought our worthy captain to grief. Landing us on a shelf of rock at one side, he announced that he was about to show us how to beach a boat.

The Captain Shipwrecked.

"You may need to do this yourselves before the end of the trip," said he.

Accordingly, we took position near the center of the beach, while the captain held off for a minute or two. Suddenly, he bent to the paddles as a swell formed behind him. At the critical moment, unfortunately, one paddle slipped out of the rowlock; in an instant the boat was broadside on, and before he could recover, the breaker was upon him. It was just large enough to upset the boat, and the captain waded ashore spitting salt water and profanity, while we, stony hearts, fell into each other's arms and laughed until we cried.

Ten days are all too few among the interesting objects of the channel islands, and to describe them adequately would require pages. Here, only mention can be made of the forest of pines that from summit to seashore clothes a portion of Santa Cruz; of curious trees, so heavy that their branches sink in water like bars of iron; of miles of sea gardens, where the clear water reveals a fairy land of wondrous sea plants, among whose waving branches glide fishes of shapes familiar, and of shapes marvelously strange; of the majestic southwest cliff of Anacapa, doubly impressive from its solitariness, sheering a thousand vertical feet from the water's edge; of the kitchen middens and burial mounds here and there, with their stores of stone utensils, their arrowheads, and the grinning skulls of those who made them.

Even a short trip, however, gives some insight into the fascination of the sea; for it means days and days within constant sight and sound and smell of its waters. Smell of its pure strong ozone, hardly realized until, near the mainland, it contrasts with the strangely-familiar odors of the land breeze; sight of its ever-changing colors, green as forest foliage, blue as the sky from a mountain top, purple as a field of violets; sound of its fresh rushing winds, of the call of its feathered wildlings, of the eternal rolling of its mighty waters. It means daybreaks on lonely strands, where wavelets lave the feet of giant cliffs whose tops are lost in mist; and evenings round the camp fire, where gray beards wake from their dreams of care to feel that boyhood has not yet gone by. It means that the work-a-day world with its petty round, its petty trials, even its sometimes silent heartaches, has for a little while as completely vanished as if time were indeed turned back 300 years and one voyaged with Spanish adventurer in quest of El Dorado.

JAMES E. REYNOLDS.

Low Tide.

A wide, moist stretch of umber-colored sand,
  A slim-legged bird's reflection where the sea
Has slid back slowly, leaving on the strand
  A strip of mirror gleaming silverly.
Dank, scattered kelp, loose sea grass green and long,
  The shell-rough space where lads a-clamming go,
A thin, smooth line of wavelets, soft of song—
  All these betoken that the tide is low.

Far down the beach my gaze goes wandering,
  Untired beneath the cool sky fleeced with gray,
To where a slender ship, gull-light of wing,
  Rounds the pale headland, dips, and flits away.
Beyond that headland shadowy with mist
  My swift, sweet thoughts on wing a-homing go
In strong, true flight, to keep a happy tryst
  With hearts that love me, when the tide is low.

"Gatling Gun" for the Pocket.

A powerful new automatic gun, whose projectiles, it is said, will pierce half-inch bessemer steel at 10,000 yards, has been invented by Alexander E. McKeen of Roxbury. The gun carried a 9-millimeter cartridge, taking five of these, which, the inventor says, can be fired in three seconds by the recoil shoulder action. The receiver is 5 inches long, much smaller than any other automatic gun. It is really a "gatling gun" for the pocket. The interior mechanism he is keeping secret, as the gun is not yet patented.—[Boston Dispatch in New York Tribune.

Don Carlos's Royal Estate.

HE KEPT SOME LITTLE REMNANT IN HIS SWISS HOTEL.

From New York Sun.

THE recent death of Don Carlos, the pretender to the Spanish throne, will recall to many Americans who have toured in Switzerland during the last few summers the picturesque figure which this exiled bit of royalty made in the hotels and along the lake front of Lucerne. To many travelers it used to be far more interesting to watch the comings and goings of Don Carlos than to make the ascent of the Rigi or Pilatus.

The cosmopolitan crowd that drifts along the Schweizerhof and National Quays, composed as it is to a certain degree of the exiled element of European courts who find this smiling resort a convenient place in which to lose themselves, has an attraction that never grows tiresome.

"What do you suppose he has done?" you will hear a bright-faced American girl ask the man sitting with her under the chestnuts that line the walk along the waterfront, as an erect and distinguished personage dressed in the clothes that Europeans consider fashionable, passes in the crowd. And then if he is versed in the intricacies of continental intrigues and diplomatic gossip he will tell her, discreetly of course, of the misdirected enthusiasm and unfortunate destinies that have landed these almost notables in a place to rub elbows with just plain people. And in this assembly there was no figure more conspicuous than that of Don Carlos.

He lived in one of the big cool hotels that face the lake. Not especially in evidence during the day, it was at the dinner hour that he came into the limelight. Those who knew his habits would point out a little group, generally consisting of two women and a man in evening clothes, seated near one of the elevators. They were the little court which Don Carlos kept with him, perhaps because they were his faithful friends, or perhaps because their presence was a sop to the self-esteem which, apparently no reverses of fortune could take from him.

The three courtiers rose as the elevator door opend and Don Carlos and his wife stepped into the large reception-room. Each of the ladies-in-waiting would approach Don Carlos and drop the deepest of courtesies. Then he would advance with magnanimity written in every move and allow them to kiss his hand. After that, the ladies would courtesy to "the Queen," as impertinent Americans were wont to call her, as the gentlemen-in-waiting fell on one knee and bent over the royal hand.

When Don Carlos walked into the restaurant he was followed by every eye in the room. As he crossed the threshold he would walk ahead of the others, and at a table of course the place of honor was his. The waiters would bustle about, brushing off the chairs with their napkins, the maitre d'hotel would do a great deal of finger snapping and the water boys would drop bowls of ice in the general confusion. No one sat down until he had taken his chair, and he was served first as each of the courses was brought to the table. When he spoke, the others retained a respectful silence, and when he chose to interrupt another speaker, there was no disputing the conversational right of way. Yet with all this, his table manners were not all that one would expect of royalty.

With his massive shoulders stooped far over the cloth and his big heavy face lowered to a point a few inches from his plate, Don Carlos would eat enormously, conversing volubly with those around him without regard always for the amount of food which at that moment he was in the act of swallowing.

Later in the evening, he would take his stick and a soft straw hat of generous brim and go with his wife for a promenade along the quays. With him on these occasions were two creatures that added a great deal to the picture. One was a Great Dane dog, a beautiful animal of huge bulk, whose slate-gray coat was always glossy and whose long red tongue always hung from his wide jowls, displaying the most savage set of fangs that dog ever grew.

Dragged along by the leash which looped the dog's collar was a little Moorish boy, possibly 12 years old. His coal-black face and shiny white teeth shone out beneath a scarlet fez. A blue jacket not long enough to hide a broad gold fringed sash and baggy pantaloons made up his costume.

Some said that Don Carlos feared assassins and that the dog was trained to fly at the throat of any one who exhibited symptoms of approaching him with evil intent. At any rate they were never seen far away, this black urchin and the dog of savage mien. Whether he was really as savage as he looked there was no way of telling absolutely, although along the waterfront you could hear stories without number of miraculous escapes had through the faithfulness of his bodyguard.

But whether savage or not, the appearance of the animal served as an unassailable bulwark behind which the Moorish boy could retire whenever he desired. Perhaps the knowledge of that fact was what made this ebony stripling bold enough to stir the wrath of the other children around the hotels. Along the piazzas he could be seen leaning across the broad back of the dog as he chatted with the stiff-frocked European children playing around, and from this fortified position he would send out taunts which caused the objects of his derision no small amount of discomfiture, but which under the circumstances they were not willing to resent.

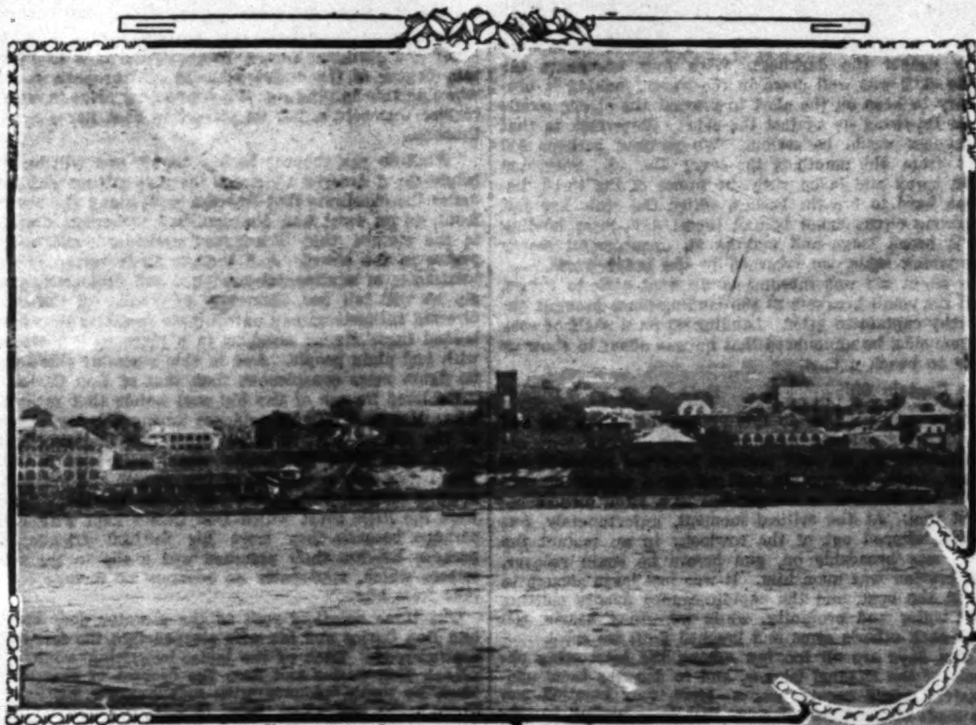
But when his master came in sight what a change came over the rascal. His arms would describe a great semi-circle as he salaamed to the ground, and, all servility, he would trot along beside the dog to mount guard over the pretender.

"Down the Coast."

TOURING SIERRA LEONE AND WEST COAST OF AFRICA.

By a Special Contributor.

IT is so arranged that the traveler to the west coast of Africa must first touch at that half-way house of the Atlantic, the Canary Islands. Whether this is a refinement of torture to increase the sufferings of the lost by first giving them a view of the abode of the blessed, or whether it is a last, beneficent appeal to them to stay their headlong course and be numbered with the children of light, we do not know; but certain it is that to those who go "down to the Coast," the vision of the Canaries is always present, and it is to the landing on their shores, on the homeward voyage, that every one looks forward.



Freetown, Sierra Leone.

There are few more beautiful places in the world than Santa Cruz de Tenerife, where the white houses tumble down the mountainside to the blue waters of the bay, where the salt "trades" blow up the shady streets and the stark, grim peaks stand out, sharp and clear, in the dry air. There is an exhilaration about Santa Cruz, a sort of bubbling note in its sun-warmed, wind-cooled atmosphere, so strangely like one of our own California summer afternoons, that tell of a land of health and beneficent climate.

The red-tiled roofs rise in tiers on the steep slopes, up the cobble-paved streets one catches glimpses of balconies, trailing wreaths of flowering vines, and cool, blue shadows on the whitewashed fronts. The Piño de Oro, the leading hotel of Santa Cruz, gleams whitely on its hillcrest among orange groves, and everywhere is a blaze of oleander bloom, crimson and pink, which in that land, where the scale has never entered, is seen on every hand.

Indolent Natives.

Down on the harbor on any "steamer afternoon" is a leisurely clamor, a many-hued, indolent, Spanish imitation of "hustle." On the Marina the palms wave in the breeze and the grave, black-eyed shipping clerks run in and out of the offices with bundles of manifests in their hands and cigarettes between their lips.

Comachio's Hotel is thronged with the steamer's passengers, seasoned "coasters," salted by long years of tropical climates and many fevers, or fresh-faced young men, just out from England, going down to gamble on the green cloth of West Africa, where the stakes are life and death; and down on the long, curving Mole all Santa Cruz looks on at the small percentage who seem to really do anything.

Gangs of swarthy youths, clad in white cotton shirts and trousers, girt at the waist with faded sashes, lounge in the sunshine and smoke the inevitable cigarettes while they lazily cast their fishing lines; the deep-sea fishers land their catch and chaffer with the market women, who, baskets poised on heads, scream and gesticulate and call the saints to witness the rascally overcharges they are called upon to pay.

From the steamer beyond the Mole come the cargo lighters in tow of fussy little tugs, piled high with miscellaneous merchandise. Officers, soldiers, peasants, merchants and loafers, together with every possible sort of Spanish woman but a lady—for Spanish ladies appear in public only on stated occasions—lounge up and down, while in and out among the throng stroll the winter visitors, their pale, northern skins betraying the length of their stay by the varying degrees of the coats of tan. And over it all is the warm glare of a friendly sun and the tang of a live, life-giving atmosphere, full of the salt and freedom of the thousand-mile stretches of the ocean.

From the Coast-bound steamer comes the toot of the whistle, there is a hurried scramble for the boats, a short trip out beyond the Mole and a panting, perilous climb up the rope ladder swaying over the ship's side, for no self-respecting "Coaster" will leave Santa Cruz until his steamer is already under weigh.

The sun drops behind the mountains, and the long silhouette of Tenerife, with the mighty pyramid of the Peak at its end, stands out black against the evening sky; the lighthouse on Isleta Point, in Grand Canary, flashes a farewell, and the steamer settles down into her foam-waked stride for the 1500-mile stretch to Sierra Leone.

From Santa Cruz to Freetown is a run of from five to seven days, according as to whether it is made by mail boat or "gin tank," as the Rotterdam cargo steamers are unflatteringly, but truthfully called. Hour after hour the steamer slips away southward, rounding the great western bend of the African continent, and day by day the air grows warmer and more impregnated with the damp languor of the tropics. The awnings are unfurled, the flying fish drive by in shoals, each day one discards another garment, or substitutes another of thinner make, and each day new creatures, lured by the increasing warmth from their hiding-places in the cracks of the decks and wainscots, make their disconcerting appearance at one's bed and board.

This is the most delightful period of the voyage, free from the nipping winds that sometimes blow as far south as the Canaries, yet cooled by the steady rush of the northeast trades. Strange to say, this week's run, usually made, at no matter what period of the year, under blue skies and a delightful temperature, is the most dangerous of all to the malaria-racked shadows coming up from the Coast toward the north. Their enfeebled constitutions, undermined by the steam and heat that prevail from Sierra Leone southward, seem unable to stand the invigorating breath of the trades, and hardly a steamer comes up but has a funeral or two between Freetown and Santa Cruz.

New Air and New Odors.

Then one midday a change comes over the salty brilliance of sky and sea, a faint film comes over the sun and the blue of the water changes to a muddy green. One is conscious of new odors, of a damp, earthy taste in the air, and a sudden heaviness upon one's limbs. The atmosphere thickens toward the east, and from out of the haze suddenly looms a mountain [illegible] sharp, gaunt mountains of the arid Canaries, [illegible] rounded, sleek, thickly feathered with forest [illegible] tops, with here and there a streak of [illegible] where the rains have brought down a landslide, [illegible] swimming in the blue, African haze.

The Capital City.

Freetown, the capital and port of the [illegible] of Sierra Leone, presents a brave appearance [illegible] sea, and a newcomer, whose ears have been [illegible] tales of the terrors of the Coast, is apt to [illegible] at the sight of it. The view of the town itself, with the [illegible] dominating the center, its groups of [illegible] ings and the long lines of the barracks [illegible] hind, has a certain stateliness. But it is [illegible] place in reality. The swamps of the [illegible] the air with their miasmatic steam and [illegible] of mountains cuts off the sea breeze. a belt, from 200 to 400 miles wide, drought-resisting kind, baobabs, here comes the precious gums, others, sometimes gathered from in great amber-like masses from the ground, the legacy of forests long since decayed. Gradually this melts into a rolling country, covered with high grasses that cure and dry as they stand a golden country of wide spaces and sweet airs, that extends to the borders of the Sahara and the salt marshes of Lake Tchad.

Timbuctoo and Jenne, Too.

It is through this grass country that the Niger runs for nearly 2000 miles, with Timbuctoo, that curious city of palaces, hovels, and mosques, all built of sun-dried adobe bricks, almost at the center. The veil of mystery has been stripped from "the Queen of West Africa" these late years, and a railway is already creeping out from French Senegal to tap her markets. It is rather curious that Timbuctoo should have so long exercised the fascination of mystery over the minds of travelers and the readers of travelers' tales to the complete exclusion of Jenné, to the southeast of it, which is really a much larger and finer city. But Timbuctoo is still a place of wealth, and to its yearly markets come huge caravans, from 10,000 to 15,000 camels strong, each camel-load worth from $250 to $500, from Murzuk and Fezzan, and from there the goods are distributed, by canoe up and down the river, on the heads of porters to the interior borders of the Gold Coast and Dahomey, where European goods, landed on the coasts of Tripoli and Morocco, laboriously transported across the deserts by camel and distributed from Timbuctoo, actually compete in price with the same class of merchandise landed at Cape Coast and Lagos within a few hundred miles of their destination.

Further north, between the French "sphere of influence" and the borders of the rickety empire of Morocco, is a stretch of country parceled out between the great Mohammedan emirs, or feudatory lords, who dwell in their walled towns with armies of retainers and from time to time make trouble for the Sultan at Fez, or send off gangs of slave raiders to harry the southern limits of the Soudan.

And scattered all through the western bulge of the African continent are the Fulahs, the "red race," the great ethnological puzzle and political problem of that part of the country, with their strange, underground empire within an empire, that no one knows when may not suddenly blaze out, as it did in Sokoto, and assume the dominancy it already exerts in secret.

These things are not exaggerated, nor are they mere fancies and imaginations; they are now, have been and will continue for some time to come, for, in spite of the splashes of political paint on the maps, and the spider-legged railroads that creep over them, Western Africa is still largely unknown and but little exploited.

Africa is too big, too old and too settled in her ways to change easily. She has supped on giants, and to this day 70 per cent. of the white men who brave her between the twin lines of the tropics sooner or latter leave their bodies as a sacrifice.

Those who go, remain long enough to see behind the veil and come away again are never quite the same; the spell of Africa, so long the Sphinx of continents, is upon their minds and even in the midst of crowded streets their ears catch again the sound of the surf roaring upon the glaring beaches, the clatter of the palm fronds in the rush of the wind, the wailing songs of the women, or the growl of a native drum beating out its tattoo across some mist-hung river in the breathless heat of the night.

"The world is full of a number of things"—and several of them, and those not the least strange, can be found in West Africa. A. S. C.

County of a Thousand Keys.

Monroe county is the most unique county in the State, if not in the United States. The larger portion of the county is made up of a group of islands or, as they are called, keys, both on the east and west coasts. The only part of Monroe county on the mainland is the Cape Sable country, the extreme south end of the United States on the mainland.

The larger portion of this land is what is known as the Everglades, and but a limited number of acres are now under cultivation. What effect the proposed drainage of the Everglades will have in Monroe county is not known, but it is doubtful if any large areas will be drained because of the flatness of the country and being so near sea level. In the vicinity of Cape Sable, there are large bodies of rich alluvial land and a considerable quantity has been under cultivation for several years past.

All kinds of tropical and semi-tropical fruit trees grow luxuriantly on the keys and bear full crops of fruit each year. Every key is surrounded with water and the great portion of them have clean white sand beaches with bluffs varying in height above high-water mark. All of these building sites are in full view of either the ocean, gulf or bays.—[Jacksonville Times-Union.

Length of Life Among Animals.

The maximum length of life of some of the best-known animals is as follows: The horse lives to a maximum of thirty-five years and the donkey a like period; the dog does not exceed twenty-five years, the rabbit from eight to ten, the goose thirty, the duck, the hen and the turkey a dozen years.

Among the animals having the best established reputation for longevity are: The crow, which lives a hundred years; the parrot and the elephant, which attain an age of 150 years. Carp, on the other hand, appear to have usurped their reputation, which was based on ill-understood facts from Chantilly and Fontainebleau. They rarely become centenarians. The tortoise appears to be the animal that lives the longest, and the record of longevity is surely held by one weighing 250 kilograms, which was presented in 1904 to the London Zoölogical Gardens by Walter de Rothschild and which is said to have been born in 1750.—[Vulgarisation Scientifique.

THROUGH IRELAND BY WHEEL.

A FOUR MONTHS OUTING AT A COST OF A LITTLE LESS THAN THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

[New York Sun:] "Three hundred dollars and four months in Europe—that is what I had and what I wanted to get out of it. When a woman has passed into her thirties without traveling a hundred miles away from her home town while her friends have been in almost every quarter of the globe, you know how she feels."

The speaker was a woman from the Southwest, who stopped in New York the other day on her way to make her eighth wheeling trip abroad.

"The question with me was whom to go with rather than where to go," she went on. "As I had never been abroad, all countries were about equally attractive. The main point was to get some one who was willing to travel in the cheap way necessary to make my $300 hold out for four months.

"That person when found proved to be the college chum of a friend I had known since my girlhood. She declared that though we had never seen each other before, she was sure we would get on charmingly for the simple reason that both of us wanted to go to Europe and neither was willing to be tied down to a personally-conducted tour.

"It was in March that we met. Within half an hour we had decided to take a bicycle trip through Ireland with a three weeks' stay in Paris as an ending. My new friend was anxious to go to Ireland, because she had been studying Gaelic. She offered to give me the benefit of her instruction and lend me all her books on the subject. As there was still two months before we were to leave, I accepted her offer.

"My friend took her sketch box and I my camera, and both of us took our wheels. The cost of our ocean voyage was reduced as far as possible by taking a round-trip ticket by one of the slower steamship lines. We had practically all the comforts to be had on the faster and more expensive lines. The difference seems to be that whereas the expensive lines make the trip in a week's time and less, the slower lines require ten days or more.

"I first set foot on foreign soil at Queenstown. After a two days' stay here, we began our tour first on our wheels, then jaunting car. We also traveled by train when desirable. Everywhere we were received with the greatest friendliness, and in exchange for our stories and descriptions of America, the peasants, old and young, told us the legends and folk tales of their country and sang for us quaint Gaelic songs. All through our trip in Ireland, America was a word to conjure with. We had only to let our nationality be known to get what we wanted and often more.

"After spending a few days in Galway, we pushed on into Connemara, where we spent two delightful weeks more than twenty miles away from the nearest railroad station. Here my friend's knowledge of Gaelic was convenient, as English is almost an unknown tongue. During these two weeks we enjoyed delightful bathing and boating in the arms of the sea penetrating the western coast.

"Finally, tearing ourselves away from the blue lochs and brown bogs, we turned our faces eastward toward Dublin. My friend had calculated our time in such a way that we arrived in the Irish capital just in time for the great national Gaelic festival. After a three weeks' stay, every minute of which we both enjoyed, we left for London, where we had decided to spend the remaining three weeks of our time instead of going to Paris.

"When we landed back in our home town I had spent all but $5 of my $300, and had been away three days over four months. Our passage over and return had cost $75. We both gave $5 in tips aboard ship and paid $5 more for the transportation of our wheels. Our hotel bills for the first six weeks' touring came to $45 each, and never once did we have other than comfortable quarters among kindly people.

"Throughout our trip we found the village hotels and country inns more than fairly comfortable, well kept and inexpensive. We seldom paid more than $5 a week for room and board. I mean for a room apiece, for only on one occasion were my friend and I forced to occupy the same room.

"The roads in Ireland are so good that I only spent $1.10 on bicycle repairs, while my friend got off with half as much. Wheeling is still very popular in the Emerald Isle, and my friend and I attributed it to the general excellence of the roads. Though I have since taken several wheeling trips, the roads in Ireland remain fresh in my mind as the best, all in all, I have ever cycled over.

"We found the first-class railroad fares in both Ireland and England somewhat higher than in this country. Second-class rates are about equal to fares in the United States, and third-class rates are considerably lower. After one experience first-class, we decided to try third-class on our next trip by rail, and it proved so comfortable and economical that during the remainder of our stay we never thought of going any other way, but in no other country have I ever found third-class travel so comfortable as it is in Ireland.

"Our railroad fares came to $12 each. Our jaunting-car trips cost another $12, and our carriage hire and tram tickets cost $4. Laundry cost us $10. Fees to the servants amounted to $4 each.

"In Dublin, our hotel bill was $7 a week, and in London, where we lived in lodgings and took our meals in the most convenient place, our living expenses amounted to $10 a week, and really, now that I have had more experience, I consider that we were extravagant. I have since spent several weeks in London for $8 a week, and have been fully as comfortable."

On the Suanee River.

Interesting Ceremonies Witnessed in the South.

By a Special Contributor.

WHERE is the man or woman that has not heard of this stream away down in Florida made famous by Stephen Foster in his beautiful ballad—which will live in the hearts of the people forever—the "Old Folks at Home."

"Way down upon the Suanee River,
Far, far away,
Dat's where my heart am turning ever,
Dat's where de old folks stay."

The negroes in the Southern States, at least a great many of them, still retain many legends and superstitious beliefs regarding this picturesque stream. It is viewed with awe and admiration akin to veneration, not alone by the negroes of the sunny South, but also by a great many of their white brothers. All along the beautiful river surprises await the curious, and soon we are scenery struck once more.

Here is a spot covered with a dense growth of cottonwood, sweet magnolias, and the luxuriant rhododendron with its rich, wax-like clusters of pink and white, while under giant ferns and Spanish moss, wild roses—white and yellow—scatter their fragrant incense on the balmy air, while summer-blooming trees help to convert the banks of the river into bowers of great beauty.

The view that greets the eye is most picturesque and delightful. The boat is now in the narrow part of the stream. The shore is so close that we impulsively reach for overhanging branches along the banks. The brilliant southern moon and her rival, the electric lights from the steamer, cast beams of pink and green that make a panorama of fairy-like beauty. Ghosts and goblins seem to dance in and around the shrubs, vines, and wild flowers that peep through the tropical foliage. The splashing waves leap joyfully up to the banks, and the grand old oaks and palms take them in a fond embrace. The sweet strains of melody, with that peculiar harmony known only to their race, floats up from the quartette of negro deck hands; the jumping of the fish in the water, birds of various kinds, startled from their rest—all make impressions never to be forgotten.

Have you ever seen an old-fashioned negro baptism? Well, to the "tenderfoot," as we say out West, it is very interesting. Having arrived safe and sound at Roseville, I was informed that a negro minister would "souse" several converts in the afternoon, the day of my arrival being Sunday.

Roseville, like all other towns in the South, had its colored church, usually the "Wash-foot Baptist"—in this instance an old tobacco warehouse, very low inside, with few windows and a narrow doorway in the back. The church is always attended by many of the aristocratic whites, who go either for the singing, through curiosity, or for the amusement to be had from the preacher's original interpretation of the scriptures; certain it is that none go for edification or enlightenment.

The preacher, the Rev. "Sin Killer" Griffin, was noted for his religious gymnastic exercises, bobbing up and down in the pulpit, pounding with his hands and feet, shouting all the while until his bald, bullet-like head was shining with perspiration. His general appearance reminded one of nothing else so much as "Topsy" set in motion.

"Bretherin an' sisterin, let us pray. You, Matilda Jane Johnson, yo' play soft-like on the old molojun, an' yo', Silus Jackson Pentstock, yo' see dat chile o' yourn done stop hit cryin', an' yo', Deacon Abhrum, an' yo', Deacon Lee, yo' pass de basket fo' de colleckshun; an' I 'spects de black lazy niggers dat roost on de best seats here in de front row to decorate de basket in best shape, I does. Fo' I 'spects to get nuff frum de white folks dis ebenin' to pay my way home and have somethin' left fo' de ole woman."

And with many heaving, gulping breaths, Preacher "Sin Killer" proceeded to pray.

When the basket was passed to persons a seat ahead of me, a paper dollar was laid on it by a gentleman. The light-fingered deacon deftly closed his hand over it, and confiscated the money, fearing, no doubt, that Preacher "Sin Killer" might dissipate too much with such an amount of wealth.

After the prayer, the Rev. "Sin Killer" announced that an immersion would take place in the afternoon, at the old rustic bridge which crossed the Suanee River at one of its most picturesque points near Roseville.

The day was balmy and spring-like, and the novelty of these converts receiving a "bath" in the river had called out hundreds of people from the town, and from all parts of the surrounding country for miles around, and, seemingly, all the native population.

Side by side with the rude cart of the mountaineer, with his diminutive "mule horse" and ox for a team, stood handsome private equipages and fine livery rigs, the occupants of which found themselves among all classes and conditions of men, from the wealthy planters to the negroes and "po' white trash."

The laboring whites were respectful and orderly, neatly dressed in clean though coarse apparel; not so the mean whites. The women were slovenly dressed in meager, ugly gowns of cheap cottonade, the garment falling to just below the knee. Most of them were barefoot or wore high-top boots, while on their frowsy heads, or, as they say in the South, "mops," they wore the old-fashioned "pasteboard" slat sunbonnets.

Their "men" wore linsey or jeans pants and patched shirts, and judging from the colored patches on many of them, Joseph's coat of many colors was not in it for a minute. Their shirts were so dirty that in most cases the original color could only be guessed at. Their skins were dry, harsh, and the color of clay—probably due to clay eating, a customary habit in this part of the country; for this, together with the imbibing of "mountain dew," is one of their vices.

The negroes were out en masse. They were conspicuous by reason of their costumes of most gorgeous colors. The description of one of the dresses, worn by a coal-black lady, will typify the many. It consisted of a bright red waist, short and very tight for the buxom woman, a purple skirt en train and full of dust, the skirt and waist "parting company." No stockings, a wretched pair of old shoes that any tramp or hobo in the Golden State would pass by on the run, and a crazy-looking farmer's hat, completed this fearful and wonderful misfit.

The colored swains were dressed "fit to kill" if they sported a flaming necktie above a begrimed shirt of any color, or displayed some gorgeous, in all its oriental splendor, vest front. Their oily, black, shiny faces were generally good-natured ones, and their deep, rich voices were very musical.

This afternoon the negroes—niggers—there, were somewhat subdued by the thoughts of the approaching event. Enough life was manifest, however, by all the others, and the scores of boys of every size, sort, and color, who scaled the sides and top of the rustic bridge, shouting and waving to chums below, less fortunate. The trees were alive with human beings, and the most envied urchin there was the lad who climbed out over the river on the projecting branch of a friendly tree, where he would suddenly and unexpectedly dangle by his hands or his feet, to the hilarious joy of some and the apprehension of others. Every available spot was preëmpted. Some enterprising parties had secured boats and were ready to row out into the river when the chief actors should appear. Everybody laughed and chattered and flirted immoderately from the least unto the greatest, until at last a decided stir at the edge of the crowd conveyed the intelligence that the converts were approaching. Then the boy on the tree yelled: "Hats off, here comes the sinners!" Every one had a hearty laugh at this exclamation, and as the converts came in sight, the noisy hum subsided.

From our elevated position, we saw them emerge from the cabins near by, where they had arrayed themselves in the regulation garments of spotless white, and they came with arms linked as though for mutual support, both physical and spiritual, for it required some heroism on the part of these superstitious people to be "buried with Christ" in the deep waters.

With swinging, swaying motion, they slowly followed their pastor to the bank.

A deep silence, save for the murmuring waves, fell upon all as the converts began in uncertain, wavering tones a sacred negro melody.

A short prayer was then offered, and the Rev. "Sin Killer" waded out into the stream, sounding the depths with a stout stick. The right spot reached, he stood for a moment, and then signaled the men to follow. There were but two, and the sacred rite of baptism was administered without incident. Returning with them to the shore, Rev. "Sin Killer" supported the women. Now, it so happened that one of these, Ambolina Snow, had a cork leg, and she walked with a hitch and wobbling movement that was very funny as she entered the water. It required considerable "nerve" on her part to keep her equilibrium, and at last she cried:

"Foah de Lord's sake, I'se gwine down, sure!" But her companions set her right-side up again, and they moved forward as before. When the Rev. "Sin Killer" had swung the two other women under with many sputterings and ejaculations, mopping off their faces with his thick, broad hand and wringing their noses, he said: "How, Sistah Ambolena Snow, hit were time to bapsouse yo', but doan' want no mo' ob your ifuctuations and hiferlutions wid dat ere cork leg; yo' heah me talkin', sistah?" And with that, he caught her about the waist, and laboriously tried to put her underneath. But oh, that cork leg! It gave an upward spasmodic jerk and floated calmly on top of the water.

"Yo', sistah, yo' put dat 'ere leg down!" giving it a vigorous slap. "Whar am yo' 'spect gone?" And he gave it another shove, which sent the limb down for a moment. The Rev. "Sin Killer" cried: "What fo' yo' doan keep dat leg down, yo' contrary sinnah? Ain't yo' shamed ob yo'self? Dis am po'ful hard work, but I'se gwine to bapsouse yo' head and feet, eben ef I has to set on dat leg." But one of the sisters caught and held the offending member while the Rev. "Sin Killer" gave Sister Snow a generous ducking.

The ceremonies were at last over. Every one seemed bent on getting out of the crowd first, and all was hustle and bustle as they departed, when there came a sudden cry of alarm from the bridge, followed by others. Sister Snow had again become obstreperous, and this time fallen, dragging down her companion, and the two women were now struggling in the water.

The most indescribable confusion reigned. The air was rent with wild, meaningless commands, while the frantic pushing and crowding endangered the lives of many in the crowd of 5000 people. A boat hastily pushed out and the unfortunate women were conveyed ashore.

A dandified "gentleman of colah" doctor, who, by the way, had a white driver to his carriage, succeeded in restoring the converts. Thoroughly exhausted from her cold and very unusual "ducking," Sister Snow survived enough to say: "Has I got on me rings or me stripes, sistah?"

"Doan yo' worry, honey; youse had on your rings." The women were removed to the cabins and given over to the care of friends, leaving unsatisfied the further curiosity of a somewhat disappointed crowd.

In the west, the blue peaks blended with the azure of the sky and the golden orb of day was sinking into the very heart of the mountains, sending a rich, peaceful glow across the interesting valleys to the eastern peaks in a tender good-night.

As the multitude silently departed, the sweet liquid notes of the night birds' cooing was heard, and tired nature sank in sweet repose.

BILLY SANDS MAKES COUP WHICH NETS HIM HANDSOMELY.

By a Special Contributor.

COLLEGE dollars are always more or less than ordinary dollars of the business world, their value being in inverse proportion to the number possessed. To Billy Sands, therefore, the American dollar had an immense valuation. Furthermore, because of these varying values in college currency, the ways and means of procuring and disposing of the metal cover a wider field than that attempted by financiers in other walks of life. So, to make a second personal application, the idea that was forming in Billy Sands's head as he sat in the sun on the edge of the inner quad and exercised his senior privilege of tossing pebbles at the hydrant was not such a startling conception after all. To undertake the scheme merely took a little moral courage, and Billy mised the hydrant a good many times before he could convince himself that he had the requisite amount of gall; but need is the mother of nerve—and Billy needed the money.

"It will do those duffers good, too," he mused. "They have paired off so long with those particular girls that the game is losing interest for them, and I'll bet the poor girls are in despair. I can count on the co-eds all right, and the fellows ought to thank me—afterward. Scott! It's easy enough to crawl out of at any time with no harm done."

A pebble flew from his hand with extra impetus, struck the top of the hydrant, and ricocheted. But Billy had noted the direction of its bound, and had sprung up and started innocently along the corridor, apparently in scholarly reverie, long before the stone had rattled across to the other side of the inner quad and struck the Greek prof. a smart rap on a gouty foot.

Billy cut laboratory after dinner to write fourteen dainty notes, each similar to the others, each addressed to a co-ed, the list comprising the fourteen most popular girls in the university. One of the missives will do as an example:

"My Dear Miss White: The senior farce is not coming off for a month or more, but you can surmise the reason for my speaking this early. May I have the pleasure of being your escort on that occasion? Of course I am asking for my own sake, and am not trying to promote jealousies or to play Cupid—although perhaps this hint may be a subtle argument for an acceptance. Very sincerely, BILLY SANDS."

He had some misgivings about a couple of the girls, but to most of them he was a big brother, and could safely rely upon their understanding and acceptance. He furthermore knew that fourteen young men, sure of their standing, would each in the course of time send out an invitation, carelessly confident of a prompt and favorable reply. And, if all worked well, there would be fourteen young men chagrined to receive fourteen notes of previous engagement, and fourteen young ladies delighted with the opportunity of showing said young men that there was no monopoly to be secured in their time and affections—of making it evident to them, in a word, that "there were others." Billy smiled as he worked it all out, but it was not quite without trepidation that he mailed the fourteen letters.

The answers were all in Billy's hands in a few days. He waited until the returns were all in before opening any of the envelopes; then, one at a time, he read fourteen variously-worded acceptances. His conscience troubled him momentarily as he noted their appreciation, their confidence. They all evidently saw the point; Billy felt sure that they would all keep silent in anticipation of their triumph. Any fleeting qualms were overcome by the thought of the good he was doing to these fourteen young couples—and to Billy Sands. A week before the play, the tickets went on sale. Eight days before, Billy made a temporary raise on some personal effects, and early in the evening, with $28 in his pocket, he took up his stand outside the campus store where the tickets were to go on sale the next morning. For be it known that a dollar buys the best seat in the house when an amateur production is staged, so a young man's ardor is to be judged by the number of hours he is willing to stand in line rather than by the number of dollars he can spend for a box seat. And be it further known that these same productions fill the house, while world-famed musicians and Shakespearian interpreters perform to many an epmty row; a sad commentary on undergraduate taste, that the classy should so supersede the classic.

The hours passed slowly, although after midnight other fellows came sleepily up, disappointed to find others ahead of them, but glad to have company. Billy had first choice when the store finally opened, and after making his selections, went off to bed—the proud possessor of twenty-eight desirable seats, in pairs.

It was that same evening that Billy called on Hen Wallace and found him moodily looking at a law book.

"Hello, Hen; cheer up!" he shouted in greeting. "What's the matter, got a toothache?"

"Aw, shut up; you are the last one to appreciate my feelings."

"Ah, then it must be trouble with the lady. Ah, man, you should be fancy-free, like I am. Couldn't you get good seats for the play?"

"Haven't tried to get any seats," answered Hen sullenly.

"Scott! she hasn't turned you down, has she?" exclaimed Billy in a simulation of surprise that would have deceived a stage manager. "Is the campus gone wrong that Henry Wallace and Mabel White should not be seen——"

"Shut up, will you! I have too much boning to do; haven't the time to go to any fool plays."

Billy sat down, and, helping himself to the tobacco on the table, he smoked a while, knowing that the warming influence of his very presence would soon make Henry more confidential. But Henry remained stubbornly silent, until Billy was forced to open the conversation again himself.

"I say, Hen, I'm glad you're not engaged for the play, for I want you to help me out of a hole."

Henry scowled and refused to be affable.

"You see," Billy went on, "I've invited a girl, have a couple of good seats—and can't go. I want you to buy me out."

"I don't care to substitute, thanks," said Henry loftily; then after a long pause: "Er—who's the girl?"

"Mabel White," answered Billy calmly.

"Mabel White! You—why, bless your heart, old boy; yes, I'll help you out—if you think she'll be willing."

"Sure she will. She accepted me only because I asked first. But I've got to go up to the city—and I need the money, too."

"Money? How much? Let me lend you some," said Henry jovially, pulling out his pocket-book.

"You know I never borrow, Hen; but, these tickets are for sale."

"Ten?" questioned Hen.

"Done," replied Billy, "and I'm much obliged to you, old man."

"I'm the one to give thanks. Whoopee!" shouted Henry as Billy left the room on his way to make casual calls upon thirteen other young men.

The night of the play was moonlit, starlit—in all ways conducive to confession. Fourteen young men, awakened to action by a momentary rival, separately blessed Billy Sands and came to definite conclusions as they strolled homeward with visions in white. Fourteen young women, separately, likewise blessed Billy Sands, while he, telepathically feeling this shower of blessings, smiled over a cold stein in the distant city and in a fatherly way blessed 'em all.

INDIANA'S QUEER LAKE SYSTEM.

ALL UP IN ONE COUNTY—THE ORIGINAL HOME OF THE SMALL MOUTH BASS.

[New York Sun:] "The group of lakes in the northeastern corner of Indiana has merely a local fame, but it is one of the oddest physical dispensations of nature anywhere in the Union," said a native of Steuben county in the Hoosier State. "There are more than 1000 of those lakes huddled together in the counties of Steuben, De Kalb, Lagrange, Noble and Kosciusko, yet a person might look on the map until he was blind without discovering the fact, the lakes being too insignificant from a geographical point of view to be taken into account in the collection of general topographical data. In fact such is the isolation of this extraordinary group of lakes that even the average Indiana citizen living outside the small area in which the system is situated is barely aware of its existence.

"The lakes are entirely separate from the river system of the State and correspond in character I should judge with that better-known group of lakes in the New York and adjacent Pennsylvania counties of the Delaware Valley water shed, particularly in Sullivan and Orange and Pike and Wayne counties. The charm of wild and mountain environment that is characteristic of their eastern counterparts is lacking in the Indiana lakes, however, although they occupy the highest situation in the State.

"There are 312 of these lakes in Noble county alone. None of them except Sylvan Lake is more than 150 acres in area, and there are among them some of not more than ten acres, but nowhere else in the State is there a lake of any size whatever. The largest of these waters is Sylvan Lake, but its natural area was enlarged by damming to make it a supply reservoir in the days of canal navigation. It is five miles long and one mile wide. These lakes are the natural and, ex-Fish Commissioner Dennis declares, the original home of the small-mouth black bass, he holding that the black bass in every other water on the continent are the lineal descendants of those in the Indiana lakes. However that may be, nowhere else in the country have these fish been caught equal in size to those taken from the Indiana lakes. The largest true small-mouth black bass of which there is so far as I know any record was the one landed from Sylvan Lake some years ago by Sidney Smith of Rome City. It weighed 9½ pounds. From the same water Dr. Moyer of Kendallville took one that weighed 9 pounds."

Snow on the St. Bernard.

At present, the monastery of St. Bernard costs about $9000 a year to keep up. This money is partly collected in Switzerland and partly derived from the revenue of the monastic order.

In the Middle Ages the monastery was stripped of all its wealth, though it still continued and continues to this day to carry out the work of St. Bernard.

Over 30,000 travelers pass this way every year, and hundreds of these at least would lose their lives were it not for the guardians of the mountain. When the first heavy snows come in September, the paths are marked with posts twenty feet high. But these soon disappear and other posts are fixed on top of them and so on. Soon the winter paths lead indifferently over enormous rocks and buried alpine huts. The greatest danger comes from the furious gales shifting the snow and making return impossible.—[St. Nicholas.

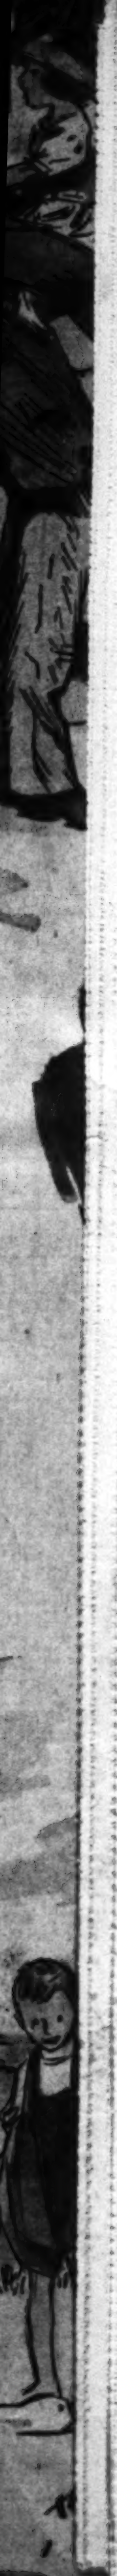
BRIEF REPORT.



Don Francisco's Model.

JOSE CHANGES HIS VOCATION AND HIS DISPOSITION.

By a Special Contributor.

ON the border of a fair valley through which runs the silver gleaming ribbon of the San Gabriel River lies Los Robles Ranch, with its soft rolling hills and green pasture land. The entire holding is dotted with aged oaks, giving to the place its name, which in the soft Spanish tongue means the oaks. They look like hoary old apple trees, and more than ever does it have the appearance of an orchard when, in the spring, the sheep are feeding on the lush grass, the little lambs leaping and playing. It is one of the old ranches, where are not only pastures as far as the eye can reach, and farther, but vast orange and lemon orchards as well, and walnut, peach and apricot trees in abundance.

The great road, stretching for miles along the side of the ranch, runs down from the mountains, across the valley and on to the sea, a silver gleam in the distance, a great highway, well traveled. Quite back from it, hidden behind a hedge of roses, and almost covered roof and sides with more roses, stands the adobe ranch house, low, broad of porch, and comfortable-looking, standing with its back to the road, after the Spanish fashion; here lives Francisco, strong-hearted, strong-limbed Francisco. He is a sheep raiser, and the son of a sheep raiser, and though he was only 18 when his father died, he was so strong and active that he went right on with the work, and people said that he raised sheep as well as his father, the old Don Francisco, while he was certainly pleasanter in his manner when it came to selling the fleece.

He loved the wide fields and pastures where the wild mustard ran riot over the hills in springtime, and the quail swept up from the hollows; he saw the wonderful sepia browns and soft dull blues of late summer with the eye of a true artist, and the vivid green after the early winter rains delighted his eyes and his heart. He was not quicker to see when the fields were ready for the ewes and the young lambs than he was to see the beauty of the first soft shimmer of green like a robe of rich velvet, that made of them a picture, and many a time he slipped away from his men and all the people about the ranch, to feast his eyes on valley and sky, and far-off shine of sea.

Donna Isabel was an artist, but she knew of no expression save her needle. Wonderful indeed were the laces, and filmy pieces of drawn work, the altar cloths, and table cloths that grew under her fingers, and through them she worked out the ideals that in another might have gone to the painting of pictures. Just now, however, she was out at the sheep corral, cosseting and feeding some weak lambs, while her maid, sturdy 16-year-old Anita, helped to carry the milk for her, and pick out the lambs, and much better she liked that than sitting on a long morning to pull threads of linen, and count them for the fine drawnwork.

"O, Señora," she said, as she nestled a little faintly-bleating creature and felt its heart beat against hers, "I am afraid this one will die; I am sure José never gives them a bite to eat, and they would starve without us. See!" And she stooped down for Donna Isabel to touch it. A spoonful of warm milk was put to its mouth, then a few drops only, coaxingly, but it was truly too late; in a few minutes the tiny form was stretched lifeless on the ground where Anita had laid it, and she came back from the flock with another weak lamb, only to find the little dead body. Another girl might have cried, but Anita's black eyes flashed fire, and her hot Spanish blood flushed her cheeks.

"José shall hear from this," she said. "I will go with Guadaloupe to the fiesta next week. I will never go with one who will kill little lambs."

"I don't think he means to let them die, Anita; he is only careless, and will not stay long enough to see that they get their share. He is eager to be away." But as the one that she was even then feeding proved too weak to take the milk, and closed its eyes feebly, Donna Isabel's wrath was aroused.

"Go, Anita," she said, "and find Francisco, that he may see the poor things," and the girl was off on a run across the pasture, along the singing brook, and down to the far corral, where the young ranch owner was at work with José mending the fence to the inclosure.

"The Señora would see you, Don Francisco, at the hill corral; the little lambs are many of them dying."

Not a look would she deign to the young helper, José, standing there, handsome, eager, waiting for a glance.

"The lambs dying? What is the matter?"

"They are starving; they have not been fed, Señor, the poor things!" Then she threw an angry glance at José. "I go with Guadaloupe to the fiesta," and she was gone back across the pasture, fleet as a bird.

"She's but a foolish girl," the color mounted in José's dark cheeks, and his eyes were like daggers. "There are always a few lambs that will not live, and she thinks that when one dies, that is half a flock. Girls should not be allowed in the fields; their place is at the house preparing the food."

"Doubtless she is mistaken, but if the Donna Isabel desires my presence, I shall go. You may continue to mend the fence;" and Francisco, handing the hammer to José, went off through the pasture, noting, as the angry Anita had not, the yellow glory of the swaying mustard against the deep unclouded blue of the sky, the far-off indigo tint of the mountains, the tinkle and glitter of the chattering brook, the scurrying squirrels, and the call of the quail in the tall grasses. He had quite forgotten his errand until he came upon his mother and Anita in the corral, and four dead lambs lying near.

"Alas! Pepito," said his mother, giving him the pet name of Francisco, "I fear José has sadly neglected these poor lambs; they seem starved. Even the ewes seem not to have had enough to eat." (It was only the ewes and young lambs that were in this corral.)

"Why are they not taken out to feed now?"

"Indeed, I know not; José said it was by your orders that they were kept up." Donna Isabel looked up, surprised.

"Never! He told me you desired it. But why does he not turn them into this good pasture?"

Then Anita spoke, angry in every thought of her being, angry for the death of the helpless, innocent creatures.

"O, Don Francisco, I know well why it is. It was three weeks ago that I heard that man from the Nietos Valley and José talking in the chaparral where I had gone for manzanita apples. 'Come now, José,' he was saying, 'but let the little ones die; the old ones will weather it all right.' And José said: 'How much will it mean?' And the man said: 'Thirty pesetos each,' but José was bartering for more when I went on, and I heard no farther. I thought only that they were talking of the rabbit hunt that is to be next month, but I know now, for does not the Señor remember that the man from the Nietos Valley was angry and said he would be revenged when you would not hire him? And José has had money lately for the gambling."

"I fear she is right, mother; but come, you will be overwearied. See, I will turn them all out to the grass now, and the trouble will soon be over after they have fed." Lifting the lamb from his mother's arms as he spoke, he raised her to her feet and opened the corral gates, noting, as the flock passed out, the many weak lambs and poor ewes.

"This could not have happened if I had not been for a week in the city." His eyes were full of pity, for he was fond of his flock. "José shall go; I will not have a man about who is unkind to the sheep."

No one saw the man skulking in the shadows back of the wall; no one heard the muttered threats of revenge, or saw the angry fist that was clenched as he crouched in the tall weeds while the young Don and his mother went back to the adobe house, Anita following sorrowfully.

The week of the fiesta opened with cloudy skies. Late fogs stalked over the sea, their gray skirts blown inward, and tangled in tree and mountain cañon. True to her word, Anita went to the fiesta with Guadaloupe, and a fine-looking escort he was, as he galloped down the valley road, his silver spurs jingling, his scarlet embroidered sash making a brave splash of color in the misty grayness, his serape and silver-trimmed sombrero as fine as any. No other could throw the riata like Guadaloupe; no other could dance the tarantelle or thrum the guitar as well as he, and he sat his fine horse like one born to the saddle. Your true Spaniard seldom rides a poor horse or drives a good one.

Anita, too, was in holiday dress, and they made a gay picture, so thought Don Francisco as they rode by the long porch where he sat with Donna Isabel, busy with her lacemaking.

"She sits well, mother, and I am glad I let her ride Canelo," he said, as the big, beautiful, spirited black horse pranced proudly by, his slender ears pricked forward, his neck curved, restless, yet attentive to the least touch of the rein when Anita sat him, for the girl held him in perfect subjection—the best subjection, that of love. He well remembered, did Canelo, how often she stole out to the stable with lumps of sugar, standing with one arm over his glossy neck, and whispering soft words of endearment into his ear.

José, gone a week ago in disgrace, was forgotten by all, escort and girl as well, as they rode away to the fiesta in the gaily-decked little town. Their way lay across the valley, and through a steep pass, known as the Pass of the Sea; they could shorten the distance by taking a cut through the pastures, which they did, startling the squirrels and quail as they rode. They laughed at the solemn little brown owls that seemed so astonished; they whistled to the mockers and meadow larks, and now and then their sharp glances picked out the motionless dull yellow form of a coyote in the thicket. At last they could hear the dashing of the waves on the shore; presently they left the ranch behind them, and ahead loomed the dim bulk of the sea cliffs through the gray mist. Now and then, as the fog lifted, they could see through its torn edges the white thread of a trail that wound up the great wall.

José, though forgotten, was not far away. Wrapped in his blanket, he had paced the cliffs since dawn. The driving fog blew in his face in vain; it could not chill the hot fury in his brain at the thought that Anita had found out his treachery. His watching eyes saw the riders while they were still on the level land just before they began the ascent, for he was high above the sea, and looking down on the valley road. As they mounted the dizzying trail, he skulked behind a turn here and a rock there on his way down to meet them. The steeps were wet and slippery, and the two riders went up slowly and cautiously; he could hear Anita singing as the chill wind swept in from the ocean, rolling the fog in billows of gray, and he clenched his fists as he heard. Then suddenly, at a perilous point in the trail, he started up before them, and the song died on her lips as he clutched at the jingling rein of Guadaloupe who rode ahead.

"Aha!" he shouted, "who rides now to the fiesta with Anita? I have you safe. Get off the horse, it is mine; you may walk back to the ranch and tell your Señor that I have gone with Anita where he will never find us."

Guadaloupe rose up in his saddle and tried to grasp José, but he could not succeed, Canelo began to rear and plunge on the narrow trail, and the frightened girl had all she could do to hold him. Then the other horse, startled and shrinking, swerved and began to back toward the brink, throwing his rider over his head and directly into José's arms. As the two men grappled with each other, the horse began to slide, recovered himself, turned sharply, crowding Anita to the wall, and was back over the trail and down into the valley road, riderless, silver stirrups and rein flying free in his [illegible] gallop. Canelo as well was getting beyond control, [illegible] every moment Anita feared that she would be thrown over the slippery edge of the cliff. Then the wind [illegible] ing in from the ocean lifted Guadaloupe's hat [illegible] flapped it against Canelo's quivering nostrils. He [illegible] once, twice, the girl clinging in terror, both arms [illegible] his great neck, then with one wild leap, he cleared [illegible] struggling men, and on and up the trail he dashed [illegible] the summit of the cliffs was reached, and the sea [illegible] directly below. Still on the jump, he started down [illegible] other side, taking the sudden turns with the [illegible] of a deer. Anita noted that he kept the trail, [illegible] footed even in his speed, and she clung closely; [illegible] her fright lessened a little, she spoke to the horse, [illegible] ting his neck, and his mad flight slackened [illegible] She talked to him as she was accustomed to in the [illegible] ble at home, and half-way down, she pulled him in; he stood quivering and trembling, but responsive to [illegible] rein. She was a brave girl, so she made up her [illegible] to go back, and succeeded in turning on the [illegible] trail, the intelligent horse backing and moving [illegible] a few inches at a time at her command, until [illegible] sea was behind her. She would go to Guadaloupe's [illegible] cue, and, probably, if she had thought it all out, [illegible] as much to José's discomfiture. In the meantime [illegible] two men were in bitter combat. They swayed on [illegible] perilous precipice. They flung themselves against [illegible] wall, reeling to and fro in their fury. José was [illegible] gry to fight well, and at last stout Guadaloupe [illegible] him with terrible strength, and he went to the [illegible] one arm bent double beneath him, and lay as if [illegible]

Seeing him vanquished, the thought of the [illegible] out to the girl, and he sprang up the trail [illegible] "Anita! Anita!" He had not gone far until [illegible] swering cry came back to him, and they [illegible] find the other unhurt, except that Guadaloupe [illegible] bleeding profusely from several cuts on the [illegible] after the fashion of such wounds, hurt his [illegible] made a great show of blood. So Anita must [illegible] her long scarf into bandages and bind them [illegible] some little time passed in her ministrations [illegible] meantime, he told her of José's defeat, and they [illegible] to go down the trail, place him on Canelo, and [illegible] away to the Alcalde. Finally, the bandaging [illegible] they went back, but as Canelo liked neither the [illegible] daged head nor the sombrero, the owner of the [illegible] compelled to walk behind, since he would not [illegible] ated in front.

"Go slowly, now," he cried at last, "it is [illegible] here that José lies," and she went slowly.

"But it must be farther on; he is not [illegible]

"No, I tell you I remember that rock where [illegible] turns; we did not move far away from here. I [illegible] in the chaparral, but how could he get away? [illegible] him dead, or near it."

They sought the wounded man in the [illegible] over the blank wall where they looked [illegible] and on step by step down the trail. They [illegible] mistaken in the place, for there was the [illegible] ground, the broken branches, and the earth [illegible] away from the brink where they had nearly [illegible] into the chasm. Finally, they were compelled [illegible] up the search, and started back to the ranch. [illegible] Don Francisco and two of his men. Alarmed [illegible] turn of Guadaloupe's riderless horse flecked [illegible] and trembling, they had hastened to the rescue, [illegible] one or both had met with accident on the [illegible] Hearing the story, they went on a still further [illegible] José, leaving a fresh horse which they were [illegible] the now wearied Guadaloupe.

It was mid-afternoon when the three men [illegible] the ranch, with no trace of the wounded [illegible] seemed to have dropped out of existence, so [illegible] had he disappeared.

Guadaloupe was quite a hero until his wounds [illegible] and so well did he turn his heroism to [illegible] there was a wedding from the adobe ranch [illegible] late summer, and Anita became a happy [illegible] Donna Isabel gave her a beautiful table [illegible] finest drawnwork, and Don Francisco built the [illegible] little house on the ranch, an adobe house of [illegible] and a porch, under a widespreading oak, and [illegible] care of Guadaloupe the sheep thrived as [illegible] But often when the winter rains beat on the [illegible] the wind swept in from the ocean, they asked [illegible] in hushed voices: "What could have become [illegible] that day in the Pass of the Sea?" So the rains came again, and the new grass [illegible] vivid living green over hills and valley; [illegible] grew high, and waved its yellow embroidery [illegible] blue sky; quail and meadow larks, mockers [illegible] whistled and sang, and the roses hung their [illegible] the thousands over roof and wall. As the chant of the unseen choir swelled and fell within the building, the blasts from the trumpets of the heralds announced the royal approach.

When the King had taken his place in the hereditary box of his ancestors, two acolytes with blazing torches came slowly from the high altar. Behind them followed the priest, wearing the insignia of his office. Slowly he proceeded to the lower platform, and, raising his arm, made the mystic sign while he began the melodious Latin of the "Pater Noster." This done, he signalled his two attendants, and they unwrapped the cloths from the first picture.

"The Madonna of Ricardo of Silicia," came the heavy tones of the royal herald.

It was a simple picture of the scene in Bethlehem's manger. In reverent awe the crowd knelt, as one.

The priest gave a sign and the second picture was released from its covering.

"The Madonna of Micael of San Juan," called the herald, and, as the wrappings fell away, the people looked upon the sorrow-filled face of Mary before the cross, rich in coloring, bold in execution, yet inspiring such pity and awe that a rising murmur of: "Micael's is the prize," swept through the hall.

But two still remained. As the third was burst from its wrappings again came the voice of the herald: "The Madonna of Senlae of the North," and, mildly curious, the crowd craned forward to gaze upon the product of this far-famed genius of the northern kingdom.

Gorgeous in coloring, intense and compelling, the work of the third artist appealed to the heart rather than the mind, and a murmur of admiration, louder than before, rose within the hall.

The visage of the high priest darkened with gloom. The last was the Madonna of Orahe, the heathen! The attendants in their haste dislodged one of the supports of the easel and the canvas slipped, face downward, to the floor. A thrill of horror swept the waiting people. An omen! Some terrible happening was nigh! The terrified attendants recovered themselves and slowly lifted the picture to the gaze of the multitude.

A silence, as of death, fell over all. The hysterical shriek of a woman startled the air. Hoarse gasps choked from the throats of the attendants through whose nerveless fingers the picture again fell as they started back in dismay, for there revealed to their startled gaze was the tri-formed hag of the cross-roads, Hecate, the Queen Witch of Hell.

Fear set its awful hand upon the assembled people. The dread of some impending evil filled the hearts of all. The young Orahe leaped to his feet, and, laughing mirthlessly, cried:

"There is thy cursed creed. Odona is the queen. You worship but fitful mockeries and lies!"

With another scream of laughter, he ran from the temple.

A silence more dread than before ensued, but the King arose in anger and cried:

"Will you let this cursed defiler escape? Let him be placed in the lowest dungeon of this sacred temple, until by his death on the morrow shall he atone for his sin. Go, ye, all who have witnessed this dreadful thing, and pray to Her whom ye have seen defied, lest some great evil fall upon our state."

Quickly the temple was emptied of its worshipers as terror lent wings to their feet, the priest remaining to destroy the sacrilegious image and replace the wrappings upon the other pictures.

Orahe, cursing the King, the priests and the new gods of the land, was shut within the temple's dungeon, and with him the evil implements that had performed the sacrilege, his palette, colors and brush.

The cell of the condemned of St. Cloud is now one of the landmarks of the history of Mexico. It was built at the same time as the temple by the ancient Aztecs, in honor of Odona, and in it were confined the most desperate of criminals who had committed some great crime against church or state. It was some time since it had been occupied, and the damp moss thickly covered the walls, save a large space about the entrance where were the heavy doors and the single barred window that served to light the cell.

A fresh pallet of green withes had been arranged for the new occupant in the center of the room, and upon this he flung himself, still mumbling curses at his fate, and fashioning new and strange oaths to hurl in defiance at the small expanse of blue he could discern through the gratings of the window.

His whole being rebelled at the loathsome dankness of the cell. His breath came jerkily through his teeth as his lungs, too, revolted at the impure air.

How long he lay there, he knew not. He saw star after star pass the barred window, and fade away behind the walls. He watched each one, calculating their distance, their size, as all the rules of Newton and Euclid flitted before him, and he dreamed and dreamed.

But suddenly he sat up. The star he had been watching did not pass as swiftly as the others. It was stationary! He rubbed his eyes, not believing his vision. It was growing larger!

Its light flooded the dungeon with brilliant incandescence. Each beam seemed separate, a slender effulgent ray, fading into the spectrum before it mingled with another.

Larger and larger the star became, until it seemed to fill the barred opening. But before its radiance the iron disappeared, and its golden glow, unmarred, gleamed through. As it grew in size, the shadows, dancing, reflected from wall to wall, flickered and vanished, and they became walls of pearl, of opal, and of emerald, blended into rainbow hues, shaded from Orient brilliance to azure, intense, fathomless.

The cell seemed a room of heaven. He could hear the faint music of the harp softly rising and falling under the tender touch of an angel, the sweetness of the harmony he had dreamed but never felt, the harmony of peace, of repose. And with the sound of the harp came a perfume, so delicate, the air seemed too heavy to bear its fragrance, and an ecstacy, delightful, wonderful, sublime, enfolded him.

Ah! the star takes form, the form of a woman's face, radiantly beautiful, whose eyes are tender with sorrow and pity. An unspeakable terror possessed Orahe. Rebelling, he turned away, but turned again as he felt the beauty of the wonderful vision. The love in the eyes above him transfixed his soul, and down before the window he knelt, penitent, and prayed with heart and soul.

"Maria, Mother, pardon, forgive! I believe! I believe!"

Influenced by some compelling force, he raised himself, and gathering the implements of his craft beside the door, blended the colors in feverish haste, fearful lest the image above him should vanish.

Through the long night he labored, filled with that ecstatic joy, bathed in the perfume of the vision. He heard the cock crow the approach of morning, and saw the face slowly fading before the brilliance of the day—but the task was finished.

The priests coming in the early morning to lead him to the scaffold found Orahe, clutching palette and brush, on his knees before the window, through which the newly-risen sun shone golden-hued, praying, and upon the smooth surface of the heavy door the marvelous image of the Mary of St. Cloud, the Virgin Blessed.

EARLE V. WELLER.

A SHIPYARD FOR CANOES.

WHERE THE CANADIAN INDIANS BUILT THEIR BIRCH BARK VESSELS.

[New York Sun:] A party of New Yorkers hunting in the far Canadian wilds came upon an Indian shipyard where had been built and launched such craft as the voyagers use in traveling the rivers and lakes of that region even as far as Hudson's Bay. Noise of hammer and hiss of white-hot bolt had never been heard in that shipyard, and it had neither dry dock nor high slanted and greasy ways. Hidden in the deep grass were long and wide rolls of birch bark treasured against future need, and all about were shavings of the cedar, while the charred remnants of the fires used to melt and purify some of the shipbuilding material still shone black in a little pile.

Here the season before and perhaps for many seasons in succession the Indians had built their birch-bark canoes. Bits of the long and pliant but tough root which the Indians pull from its shallow burial to make binding thongs were found here and there. This root when split has about the thickness of the cane used in weaving chair bottoms and the deft needlemen of the Indians make it serve to a nicety for sewing the seams of the birch bark with which their canoes are covered. From strips of cedar two inches wide and hardly more than a quarter of an inch thick are made the ribs. Over this frame is laid with nice fit the birch bark in pieces of suitable size and the joints are secured with long strips of the pliant root.

All this, however, is not sufficient to make a canoe seaworthy; the seams must be made water-tight. This is accomplished with a mixture of spruce gum and bear's grease, though lard will serve nearly as well as the latter. The spruce gum is melted in a pot over an open fire and cleansed of its impurities by skimming. Then a sufficient quantity of bear's grease is added to make the mixture at a moderate temperature of about the consistency of shoemaker's wax.

The whole craft remains measureably pliant yet sufficiently rigid to be handled and carried without danger of collapse. One thing, however, the Indian looks to, that his canoe shall not grate upon sand or shingle when he lands. In fact, he stops short of the shore and in shallow water leaps out into lake or stream and unloads his canoe before carrying it ashore and laying it in a shady place safe from the damaging effects of the midsummer sun.

Small canoes are built in this fashion for the use of one or two oarsmen, and with proper strengthening of materials, big canoes 35 feet long or more are built to be paddled by ten or fifteen oarsmen and to carry great loads all about the region upon the errands of business that keep these hunters and trappers afloat much of the time so long as there is open water in that far north.

Those who came upon the Indian shipyard had the pleasure also of encountering a company of the voyagers under pleasant conditions. As the white men were at breakfast one morning, they suddenly heard from far up the stream a noise as if some one were throwing every other second a gallon or so of water into the river. Then around a bend came one of the great birch-bark canoes, riding high because it was lightly loaded. Its ten or twelve oarsmen at the height at which they sat could not dip their paddles deep, but they dug away with energy and rhythmic regularity, throwing obliquely behind them at each stroke a shower of foamy water that fell with the noise of a dozen little cataracts into the bosom of the stream. They passed with friendly hails and grunts, looking like a sudden vision from the sixteenth century.

Placing It Right.

After waiting for several weeks without hearing from her story, the amateur author wrote the magazine editor, requesting an early decision, saying that she had "other irons in the fire."

Promptly came the editor's response:

"Dear Madam: I have read your story, and after giving it careful consideration, I should advise you to put it with the other irons."—[Success.

"Do poets ever write poems in their letters to their sweethearts?" asked the sweet young thing.

"No," replied the near-famous bard, "we've got more sense than to queer the game in that manner."—[Milwaukee Journal.

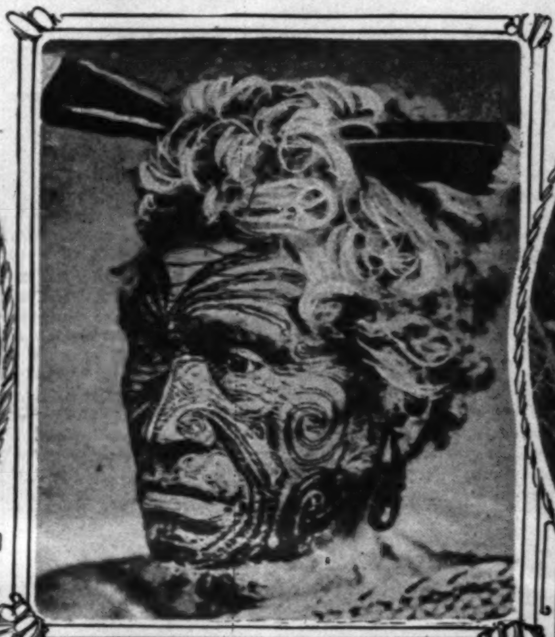
Indians of the Amazon.

THEIR DAILY LIFE AS SEEN BY A TRAVELER FROM PASADENA:

By a Special Contributor.

THE aboriginal of equatorial South America is a near relative of the red or copper-skinned Indian of our own continent, but the pure-blooded Indian is now seldom met with at Para or at any other point on the Amazonian delta. His place is taken by a confusedly intermingled race of Portuguese, negroes and Indians, few of whom know themselves what strain of blood predominates in their veins. The mixture of white and negro, as with us, is called mulatto; that of Indian and negro, Cafuzo, a vicious combination; that of white with Indian, Mameluco. The cross between Cafuzo and Indian is called Curibuco, and that between Cafuzo and negro, Xibaro. Beyond this point the demarcation is difficult to trace by physical characteristics, the first three terms defined, in fact, being the only ones in common use.

Upper Amazon warrior.



Tattooed Indian of Rio Negro.

Indian women of Rio Negro and reed house.

Indian women of Japura River tribe.

Passe Indians at home.

The banks of the estuaries of the Amazon and Para were originally inhabited by a number of distinct tribes, all of them more advanced in civilization and milder in manner than the savages who inhabited the interior valleys. They were settled in villages, and made their living in agricultural pursuits. They were gentle in disposition and received the early Portuguese settlers with great friendliness. The inland savages, on the other hand, led just such a wandering life as they do at the present time, only coming down occasionally to plunder the plantations of the coast tribes, who always entertained the greatest enmity toward them.

These tribes are now civilized or amalgamated with the whites and negroes. Their distinguishing tribal names have long since been forgotten, and the race bears now the general appellation of Tapuyo, signifying a civilized Indian. The Indians of the interior still remain, for the most part, in a savage state, but though not overly friendly to the whites, they rarely resort to open hostilities. All the semi-civilized Tapuyos of the villages speak the "Lingio Geral," a volapuk along the lines of the Chinook of the Hudson Bay Company adapted by the early Jesuit missionaries from the original idiom of the aboriginals; printed grammars of it are always on sale in the shops of the Para book sellers. The languages spoken by neighboring tribes on the banks of the interior rivers are totally distinct; on the Jurua and upper Rio Negro, even scattered hordes belonging to the same tribe are unable to understand one another.

The Civilized Tapuyo.

The civilized Tapuyo of the delta region differs in no essential point, in physical or moral qualities, from the Indian of the interior. He is more stoutly built, being better fed than some of the latter; but in this respect there are great differences in the same tribes. He presents all the chief characteristics of the North American red man. The skin is of a coppery-brown color, the features broad, and the hair black, thick and straight. He is generally above middle height, thick-set, broad-chested, and has well-shaped but somewhat fleshy legs and arms. His hands and feet are comparatively small. The cheek bones are generally not so prominent as are those of our Indians. The eyes are black, with less of obliqueness than those of the Tartar races of Eastern Asia, which are supposed to have sprung from the same general stock as the American Indian. The features have little mobility of expression, his apathetic and undemonstrative character equaling that of his northern cousin. He never betrays, and is said not to feel keenly, the emotions of joy, grief, wonder, fear and curiosity. He can never be excited to enthusiasm, but has strong affections, and, like our own Indians, is excessively devoted to his children. All his actions show that his ruling desire is to be let alone; he is attached to his home, the quiet, monotonous river life; he likes to go to town occasionally to see the wonders introduced by the white man, but he has a great repugnance to living in the midst of a crowd. He prefers handicraft to field labor, and, like our North American Indian again, especially dislikes binding himself to regular labor for hire. He is shy and uneasy before strangers, but if they visit his abode he treats them well, for he has a deep-rooted appreciation of the duties of hospitality; there is a deal of native pride about him, and being naturally formal and polite, he acts the host with great dignity.

The only places in which the Amazonian Indians congregate in any number is in the larger towns of the river, such as Santarem, Obydos and Manaos, where a certain quarter is usually reserved for them. Away from the towns they live in tiny villages of often not more than a dozen families each. Here, reverting to the ways of their ancestors, they catch just enough fish and turtle, and raise just enough farina and mandioca, to keep from starving. Some of them have small cacao plantations, but most of them, if they work at all, prefer going into the forests after rubber. Their houses are, for the most part, thatched roofs set upon poles, the sides being left open. They sleep in rough hammocks of woven grass, and in the matter of clothes [illegible] out strictly the rule that the garments worn by [illegible] Brazilian aboriginal are in direct proportion to [illegible] tude. The latitude of the Amazon is from [illegible] clothes taking their character mostly from the equatorial parallel. They are cleanly in their personal [illegible] as Indians go, and are especially fond of bathing in [illegible] river. This is a somewhat risky proceeding, particularly in times of flood, when the water is so muddy [illegible] it is difficult to observe the approach of alligators. [illegible] this season, it is the custom to fence off little pools [illegible] rocks or logs to insure the safety of the children [illegible] bathing; the elders seem to regard the menace [illegible] casually, and, if overheated or fatigued, appear [illegible] jump in and take a chance whenever the notion [illegible] them.

Alligators are rather too plentiful about the [illegible] whether in the main stream, back channel, lagoon [illegible] or sink, to make bathing, or even canoeing, [illegible] comfortable for a stranger. The danger, like that [illegible] sharks in the South Pacific, is probably [illegible]ated, but one sees just enough [illegible] keep his apprehensions on that score from [illegible] to sleep. In the days when steamer service [illegible] inaugurated on the river, it is said that the [illegible] used to scatter in all directions as the steamer came spouting by their basking-places; today [illegible]verge on a steamer and follow it like a [illegible] on the off chance of picking up a bit of [illegible] cidentally furnishing those of the passengers [illegible] amusement in that kind of thing some [illegible] practice. The Indians are inordinately fond of [illegible] steak, a treat, however, which they do not [illegible] owing to the fewness and the poor quality of [illegible] arms. These Indians, probably owing to the [illegible] hunting in the tangled forest in which they [illegible] difficult, have taken less to the use of firearms [illegible] other savage people who have come into [illegible] such close contact with the whites. As a [illegible] such shooting as they do attempt is very bad [illegible] they are unable to secure all the alligators they [illegible] by shooting, they have evolved several other [illegible] plans of taking them captive, one of them, [illegible]cessfully carried out, furnishing a performance [illegible] is worth while journeying from New York to the [illegible]zon to witness.

and Blowguns.

Indians of the Amazon display considerable skill use of the bow and arrow, but employ them more shooting turtles and fish than land animals. For monkeys and other animals up to the size of the and tapir they use the zarabatana or blowgun, which so much of a fictitious nature has been I never chanced to see a blowgun myself, but described by Bates, it consists of a tube, nine or ten in length, made of two separate lengths of wood, scooped out so as to form one-half of the hollow, cylinder. To do this with the necessary accu- is said to require an enormous amount of patient as well as considerable mechanical ability, the ordinarily available being crude gouges tipped the incisor teeth of the Paca. When completed, half-tubes are secured together by a very close and tight spirally-wound wrapping consisting of long, flat strips of the bark of the Jacarita, the climbing palm. The whole is afterward smeared with pitch or black beeswax. The pipe tapers toward the muzzle, and a cup-shaped mouthpiece, made of wood, is fitted to the opposite end. A full-sized zarabatana is heavy and can only be used by an adult Indian who has had great practice. The boys learn to shoot with smaller and lighter tubes. Novices find the greatest difficulty in holding the tubes steady. The explosive exhalation by which the arrow is propelled is also a matter of much practice to master.

The arrows for the blowguns are made from the hard rinds of the leaf stalks of certain palms, thin strips being cut and rendered as sharp as needles by scraping the ends with a knife or the tooth of an animal. They are winged, instead of with feathers, with a little oval mass of samauma silk (from the seed vessels of the silk-cotton tree,) ordinary cotton being too heavy. The ball of samauma must fit to a nicety the bore of the blow gun, and when it does so, the arrow can be propelled with such force by the breath that it makes a noise like that of a child's pop gun on flying from the muzzle. The quiver is usually an ornamental affair, with a rim of some brightly-colored wood, the body of neatly-plaited Maranta stalks, and the belt by which it is carried over the shoulder of gaily-tasseled strands of cotton.

Useful in the Forest.

The blowgun in the hands of an expert adult Indian can be made to propel arrows that will kill at a distance of fifty and sixty yards. The aim is most certain when the gun is held nearly vertical. It is a far more useful weapon in the forests than a rifle, for the report of a firearm alarms the whole flocks of birds or monkeys feeding on a tree, while the poisoned dart brings the animals down one by one, often without disturbing the survivors in the least. For this reason, many ornithologists visiting Brazil have endeavored to acquire proficiency with the useful weapon, but few have persisted long enough to attain skill sufficient to be of any use. The poison, which must be freshly applied to kill speedily, is obtained only of the Indians who live beyond the cataracts of the rivers flowing from the north, especially the Rio Negro and Japura. Its principal ingredient is the wood of the Strychnos toxifera, a tree which does not grow in the humid forests of the river plains.

Diversified Population.

In the Indian quarter of one of the up-river towns, such as Manaos or Ega, members of a dozen or more distinct tribes will be met with, though native to that vicinity there are only two tribes, the Juris and Passés. The others are mostly individuals who were indentured in their youth to Portuguese traders and brought from their homes on the upper waters of the Japura, which heads in Ecuador, the Negro, which heads in Venezuela and Colombia, the Solimoens, which heads in Peru, and the Purus, which heads in Bolivia. That they are a diversified lot is not surprising. This system, on account of the difficulty of providing suitable regulation, is subject to many abuses, and some of the young Indians fare pretty badly at the hands of masters to whom they are reindentured. They all become their own masters when they grow up, however, the men usually taking to river-boat service or rubber gathering, and the women to house service. The servant problem is a very vexing one on the upper river, and it is a common saying, so restricted is the supply, that one person cannot secure a servant without coaxing or bribing him to leave some one else.

There is, and always has been, great mortality among the Indians from the far interior thus brought down to civilized sections, even 1000 and 1500 miles from the coast. As long ago as 1850 Bates noted as a singular circumstance the fact that the Indians residing on the Japura and other tributaries always fell ill on descending to the Amazon, while the reverse took place with the inhabitants of the banks of the main river, who never failed to take intermittent fever when they first ascended the branch streams, always recovering, however, on their return to their natural habitat.

The Passés, an agricultural tribe centering about the mouths of the Japura and Negro, are universally spoken of as the most attractive, both physically and mentally, of the Amazonian Indians. Formerly the most numerous of the interior tribes—they occupied all of the territory from the mouth of the Rio Negro to Peru—they have, through intermarriage with the whites and negroes, and disease, principally, unfortunately, the latter, dwindled to a few insignificant hundreds scattered about in settlements of a dozen or so each. The chief cause of their decay in numbers seems to be a disease which always appears among them when a village is visited by people from a civilized settlement—a slow fever, accompanied by the symptoms of a common cold, ending probably in consumption. The disorder has been known to break out when visitors were entirely free from it; the simple contact with civilized men, in some mysterious way, being sufficient to create it. It is generally fatal to the Juris and Passés. Strikingly similar, this, to the way things are going with the Indians of Arctic and sub-Arctic Alaska.

Ugly Tattooing.

The practice of tattooing is quite prevalent among the Indians of the upper Amazon, with some of them the art having attained to a considerable degree of advancement. The Mundurucus produce a frightful aspect of ferocity with a semi-circular black patch in the middle of the face, covering the nose and mouth, giving the visage an appearance not unlike that of a masked burglar. The Marquesans of the South Pacific produce a similar effect by covering the same parts of the face with a scrollwork instead of a solid patch. The body tattooing of the Mundurucus consists of crossed lines on the back and breast, and serpentine markings on the arms and legs. The Parauates have a scroll on each cheek, with a part of the lines running out of the corners of the mouth, and bars radiating to the ears and across the forehead, this being the nearest approach to Maori and Samoan tattooing to be found in Brazil.

The wild Tushaua eschew the geometric design entirely and decorate their bodies most fearfully and wonderfully in imitation of the skins of animals, the jaguar, on account of the vividness of his markings, no doubt, being the favorite subject. The covering of the body with a blotchy lot of blue-black spots is as far as the imitation usually goes, but chiefs are occasionally seen with jaguar ears pricked out upon their foreheads and a set of back-curving feline whiskers etched about their mouths. Snakes, twining about the body from head to heel, are popular designs, and a rather striking wild-boar look is often given to a face by a couple of vicious upshooting tusks done in white pigment. The latter is laid on more or less superficially, however, and cannot be made to last permanently. The tattooing pigment usually employed is a soot collected by holding a flat stone in the blaze of burning rara wood, mixed with copaiba balsam. The latter, besides bringing the soot to the required consistency, is believed to have an antiseptic action, preventing inflammation in the scored parts.

The Tucuna of the lower Japura are the most advanced in handicraft of the Amazonian Indians. In physical appearance and customs they closely resemble the Passés and Juris, and like those tribes lead a settled agricultural life, each horde obeying a chief of more or less influence, and possessing its pajé or medicine man, who fosters its superstitions. They are not so warlike as the Mundurucus, nor have they the slender figures, dignified mien and gentle disposition of the Passés. They practice tattooing but slightly, their favorite plan of bodily decoration consisting rather of an endless array of bracelets, anklets and garters of tapir hide or rough bark; in their homes, they wear no other dress except on festival days, when they ornament themselves with feathers and cloaks made of the inner bark of a tree.

A large number of Tucuna families will often live in a single hut, this being a large oblong habitation arranged inside with such a disregard of symmetry that is appears as though constructed by a number of hands, each working independently, stretching a rafter or fitting a piece of thatch without regard to what his fellow-laborers were doing. The roof is covered with a thatch of palm leaves, each piece consisting of leaflets plaited and attached in a row to a lath many feet in length. Strong upright posts support the roof, hammocks being slung between them, leaving a free space for passage and for fires in the middle. To one side is a girao or overhead stage which, in receiving all the odds and ends for which there is no room in the other parts of the house, performs the functions of our attic.

Tucuna Pottery.

The Tucunas excel all the other tribes in the manufacture of pottery. They make broad-mouthed jars for Tucupi sauce and mandioca beer, capable of holding twenty gallons or more, ornamenting them outside with crossed diagonal streaks of various colors. These jars, with cooking pots, smaller jars for holding water, blowguns, quivers, matari bags full of small articles, baskets and skins of animals, form the principal part of the furniture of their huts, both large and small. The dead bodies of their chiefs are interred, the knees doubled up, in large jars under the floors of the huts.

The matiri bags or "catch alls" of the Tucunas are ingenious constructions of the twine of the Bromelia fiber, elaborately knitted, all in one piece, with the aid of a couple of notched sticks. A belt of the same material, but more closely woven, is attached to the top to suspend them by. These clever Indians also possess the art of skinning and stuffing birds, much of this work being done so excellently that specimens are gladly bought by visiting ornithologists at good prices.

The semi-religious dances and drinking bouts usual among the settled tribes of the Amazonian Indians are indulged in to greater excess by the Tucunas than by most other tribes. The Jurupari or devil is the only superior being they have any conception of. His name is mixed up with all their ceremonies, but it is difficult to ascertain what they consider to be his attributes. He seems to be believed in merely as a mischievous imp who is at the bottom of all those mishaps of their daily life, the causes of which are not very obvious to their simple minds. It is vain to try to get information out of a Tucuna on this subject; he affects great mystery when the name is mentioned and gives very confused answers to your questions. It is clear, however, that the idea of a spirit as a beneficent God or Creator has not entered his mind.

There is great similarity in all their ceremonies and mummeries, whether the object is a wedding, the celebration of the feast of the fruits, the plucking of the hair from the heads of their children, or a holiday got up simply out of the love of dissipation. Some of the tribe on these occasions deck themselves in the bright colored feathers of parrots and macaws. The chief wears a head dress or cap made by fixing the breast feathers of the toucan on a web of Bromelia twine, with erect tail plumes of macaws rising from the crown. The tapir hide cinctures of the arms and legs are then also ornamented with bunches of feathers. Others wear masque costumes: these are long cloaks reaching below the knee, and made of the thick, whitish-colored inner bark of a tree, the fibers of which are interlaced in so regular a manner that they look like real cloth. The cloak covers the head; two holes are cut out for the eyes, a large round piece of the bark cloth stretched on a rim of flexible wood is stitched on each side to represent ears, and the features are painted in exaggerated style with red, yellow and black streaks. The biggest and ugliest masks represent the Jurupari.

Harvest Festivals.

ENGLAND'S ANNUAL THANKSGIVING CELEBRATIONS.

By a Special Contributor.

ON visiting Ashton Keynes, one of the prettiest villages of England, I found in the quaint eleventh-century church preparations for the annual harvest festival. Festivals of this kind are held in nearly all the churches throughout England, but instead of their being either a national or a uniform ecclesiastical celebration upon a special day set apart, as in America, they occur during the latter part of September and through a good part of October, differing in the time and manner of celebration according to the wishes of the parish and taste of the vicar.

Many traditions are followed, and then again decided departures from the old customs occur.

After the harvests are gathered and the year is ripe as well as the grain, a time for thanksgiving is set apart, as with us, when fruit and flowers are brought to the church. God is given thanks for his bounty and goodness to His people, and out of the abundance brought to the altar, gifts are made to those of the parish who need.

The Saturday of which I speak we had driven through pretty lanes walled high with hedges and overhung with graceful trees. We had glimpses of meadows, green as in June because of the heavy rainfall of the summer, and of flocks of sheep grazing contentedly in the rich grass. Fields shorn of their crops were yellow with the stubble, the only variety in color from the green, save an occasional Virginia creeper gone red, or the October roses blossoming so sweetly upon the walls of the picturesquely thatched cottages.

We had followed the Thames, a winding baby stream not far from its source, as it wound by cottage and manor. At one place like a moat it washed the walls, and from a casement window overhanging its clear depths, the occupants of the house could lean out and picture the stone bridge across the stream a mimic drawbridge, and that it with the portcullis could defend them from all invaders. Although the gates stood hospitably open and the glimpse within was charming, I am afraid social custom as effectually barred the way as the bridge of old.

We passed three preaching crosses, the antiquity of which no one in the village knew. One was elevated upon three platforms of stone, one above another, and was of Gothic style, three-faced and having carved figures in the three stone niches. Two crosses we saw later had not survived the vicissitudes of time or the desecration of Cromwell's "reform," and the figures were gone.

On reaching the church in Ashton Keynes, we found an exceedingly generous contribution of the fruits of the earth and flowers had been brought in. The pulpit had been made a mass of flowers, as had the font. The latter was an unusually fine one of stone, massive and carved in keeping with the simple Norman architecture of the church.

Flowers were twined about the lamps suspended from the arches, for this is a little village without gas; vines and flowers were upon the window sills and in the chancel, wherever the building afforded a ledge where they could be laid. Virginia creeper just beginning to turn into its beautiful shades was on the altar and the rail. Banked beneath the rail were the vegetables usually considered homely because of our familiarity with them. Piled together, their many colors, shades, and variety of textures were beautiful and were softened with touches of neutral-colored grains.

Possibly for 800 years this pretty scene has been enacted in this little rural church, under the hands of the different generations, as they have come and gone.

All ages were represented in the preparations. An elderly woman was proud to have the pulpit decoration in her charge. Her thoughts, however, went far from the work and from the limits of Ashton Keynes, you could see, when we as Americans represented to her a faraway land. With tears in her eyes she spoke of relatives having gone to Australia, America and New Zealand. I fancy there are few families in Old England which have not members trying new fortunes across the seas; many times leaving aching hearts behind.

Young girls were handing flowers and little boys were running errands. One small lad I saw hurrying through the straggling path of the graveyard carrying a long green marrow nearly half as large as himself.

On passing into the graveyard from the road, we had to go through a very curious gate, built around closely by a fence, so only one person could pass through at a time. In this fashion, the "Narrow Way" had been provided, if not the "straight" one—not a very hospitable entrance, and a trial to the patience of the congregation in going to and leaving church, but a very sure bar to any animal with a roving disposition that might be tempted by the long grass within the inclosure.

Many most interesting tombs were found there under the shadow and protection of the church; low and ample with carved supports and plain heavy slabs laid upon them. When inscriptions could be deciphered, they contained commendations for the dead and warnings for the living.

One had the odd old capitalization as follows and the long S:

"Cease now Dear frinds and Grieve no more
I am not Lost but gone Before."

"In Love she lived, in Love she Died
Her Life was Desired, but Christ deny'd."

An old man with a scythe cutting the ankle-deep grass seemed wonderfully in harmony with his surroundings.

The church was restored in 1864, and I fear much of its character was impaired. There are niches for images above the arch to the Lady chapel which are pointed out as relics of the older time. The ceiling has the original arched beams; then below these are horizontal beams of dark oak at close intervals through the nave of the church on which there are most curious patterns in red and white. The space under the tower at the west end of the church serves as a robing-room for the choir, and from it the narrowest possible door leads to the belfry. The entrance proper to the church is on the side, as is frequently the case with the rural churches.

I had heard that in the tower there was a coat-of-arms of a very ancient family and that it formerly hung in the chancel. I wished to see it. Upon opening the door, the skeletons of several poor birds, which had flown into the belfry for protection from storm possibly, and had become confused and perished there, met my sight. A stairway only wide enough to permit one to ascend with difficulty wound steeply into the darkness, and I concluded to leave the armorial bearings, which had seen several centuries pass by, to the quietude of the centuries to come.

A fleshy woman who weighed several stone, as they say there, warned me against taking any stout person with me, for she said: "I once went up, and something caught me and I was wedged in." I wondered she didn't say it was "ghosts what 'indered her," for she had told of "a 'ouse down the road which was 'aunted."

We continued our ride to Cricklade, a very ancient but now unimportant town, and there found the harvest festival had been celebrated both in the very beautiful fifteenth-century church and in a small but quaint chapel at the other end of the town. Strictly speaking, the word chapel should not be used, for I was told that the word chapel when applied to an independent building meant a denominational church. As there were eleven, but for fear of exaggeration I will say seven, chapels and churches in that small town of scarcely more than one long street, it did not speak strongly for church unity.

In the little church of which I speak at the evening service, the vicar announced the contribution had been so liberal he was able to send gifts to the hospital after distributing generously to his people who were in need.

Our journey next lead us to Stratford-on-Avon, where we were in time for a most beautiful festival thanksgiving, lasting for four days and held in Holy Trinity Church.

On Thursday, matins were read at 9 o'clock, and at 11 a plain service with sermon and communion was held. The Rev. Canon Rivington of Warwick preached the sermon on "The Privileges of the Communion," a cause of profound thanksgiving.

The church was not elaborately, but most tastefully, decorated. Grains were upon the altar, sheaves of wheat upon the top of the rood screen, and flowers and red vines on the pillars of the screen. On Sunday when the center of the screen was opened, flowers hung heavy upon the doors, making a beautiful approach to the altar. The font in the west end was trimmed gracefully with flowers and vines, while bunches of exquisite grapes, both white and blue, hung in the panels as if carved upon the stone.

On passing beyond the rood screen and through the two arches of the tower-room, the choir is reached with its quaintly-carved black oak stalls. Their tilting seats and candle rests on either side recall the days when these precautions were taken, that the monks should not doze during service. The candle would come too unpleasantly near the nodding head.

Within the chancel is noticed the fine east window; another on the side wall, a gift from Americans; the richly-carved, full-length effigy beside the alter, and a colored bust of Shakespeare upon the left wall. Every one knows the stone in the pavement marking the tomb and the inscription:

"Good frend, for Jesus sake forebeare,
To dig the dust encloased heare;
Blest be ye man yt spares these stones,
And curst be he yt moves my bones."

On Sunday before matins a dedication of a processional cross in memory of Frank Rodney took place.

Frank Rodney had spent much time in Stratford and had repeatedly played in the Memorial Theater in the Shakespearean plays given each April, the birthtime of the poet. His appearance the April before was most pathetic. Having an incurable disease, cancer of the throat, he spoke the farewell of Buckingham with most touching significance, his friends realizing it was indeed his own farewell to them and the forgiveness of his enemies had he any.

The service was a choral one. The banner bearer, the choir boys and men, a deacon and Canon Pelly of Great Malvern entered the choir and clergy stalls. The cross bearer with attendants, the vicar, the Rev. Arbuthnot, and the venerable Archdeacon of Worcester approached the altar. The archdeacon received from the vicar the memorial cross, a very handsome one of silver, given by the actor's friends, and placed it upon the altar, saying the following collect:

"O Lord, who hast taught us by Thy Blessed Son, that the way of the Cross is the path of safety, we beseech Thee to accept this offering in memory of Frank Rodney, whose spirt we commend to Thy gracious keeping. Grant also to those who shall follow this cross and worship before Thy altar, that they may so faithfully serve Thee in this life, that they fail not finally to attain to Thy heavenly kingdom, for the sake of Him who died upon the cross, and now liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, for ever and ever, amen."

The archdeacon then returned the cross to the vicar, who placed it in the hands of the cross bearer [illegible] proceeded to the choir of the church, singing the hymn:

"Hail! the sign, the sign of Jesus,
Bright and Royal Tree,
Standard of the Monarch planted
First on Calvary.
Hail the sign all signs excelling,
Hail the sign all ills dispelling,
Hail the sign hell's power quelling,
Cross of Christ, all hail!"

The archdeacon's sermon was on the growth [illegible] acter and its development through the crosses [illegible] have to be borne. Then the beautiful Harvest [illegible] by McPherson was rendered.

"Look on the fields, for they are white [illegible] harvest"—

"The reapers stand in the corn field,
Amid the bending corn,
And in the gathering twilight,
The sheaves are homeward borne.

Some day the angel reapers,
At God's own harvest tide,
Shall fill the heavenly garner,
Where blessed souls abide.

As on the earth we gather
The grain which God has blessed,
So angel hosts are gathering,
His loved ones to their rest."

"Sing O heavens and be joyful O earth, [illegible] forth into singing O mountain, for the Lord [illegible] forted His people. Amen."

With the benediction closed a twofold [illegible] tiful service in Holy Trinity Church, beside the [illegible] flowing Avon.

As must be appreciated by the thousands [illegible] been within it, this is the church of all others [illegible] to celebrate a thanksgiving service. Memories [illegible] ciations throng the place, the edifice seems filled [illegible] spirits of the past years, marked with their [illegible] making deeds. One can close one's eyes and [illegible] procession of the ages. But unlike the [illegible] March of Time," where the conquerors of the [illegible] over the prostrate forms of men, here is a [illegible] ord of the progress of the centuries.

In this burial-place of the world's bard is the [illegible] with one consent of the power of the [illegible] brute force. This recognition takes the form [illegible] grimage of thousands from all lands to the [illegible] of a genius granted by God in such degree [illegible] alone.

The record is also daily made of the [illegible] English people and the Americans, as the latter [illegible] with the feeling of an equal inheritance with the [illegible] in that pride in Shakespeare and in all England's [illegible] ness. The church is the reminder of the [illegible] these events and accomplishments with the [illegible] granted the power to do and also our entire [illegible] upon Him for that power.

So our sense of Thanksgiving is taxed to the [illegible] with such memories and in the hopelessness [illegible] it all, we seek refuge in the prayer of Thanksgiving [illegible] our "creation, preservation, and all the blessings [illegible] life."

The Aquarium has [illegible] in the same locality on July 19, a leather-back [illegible] weighing 350 pounds.

The leather backs captured hereabout [illegible] fishermen's nets, which they have invaded [illegible] food. Sometimes when they find themselves [illegible] in nets, the big turtles break their way out, [illegible] through the gap by thousands of fishes.

THE STORY OF LITTLE HAGAR AND THE HOLD-UP MAN.

Hagar, ching her, gathered with one hand a nest of nee- and gently laid First-Lady-Eve there, while she her croon until there was no doubt that was unawakened by the change from lap to bed. "Oh, man, man!" she called, "is it a vewy big one?"

The man did not answer. Of course, his voice would scare the trout away. She stopped abruptly, laid First-Lady-Eve on the ground, and then advanced on her toes, making never a sound. The man was not at the creek at all. He lay on the open flat, many feet away from the purling water, with a big stone for a pillow and his hands stretched horizontally. He was quite evidently asleep. He had not been looking at a fish at all—perhaps there was none. Hagar crept to the brook and peered into the shallow bubbling waters. She plumped down on a wet hillock of bunch grass, and her arms fell forlornly. There wasn't any fish; she might just as well have remained up on the hill, and then she wouldn't have hurt so, and felt funny all over.

"I tan't move my legs again never," she mourned. "I is—I am—so tired!" And she wept. "Tome here, man," she commanded. The baby lisp was more pronounced, and she no longer attempted to say things the way mamma wished them said. "I want to be tooked home to Mar!"

Despite her wails the sleeper never moved, and again Hagar recovered from her grief, but now she felt really angry at such an unreasonable sleepy-head of a man, so she trotted to his side and shook his shoulder.

"Well!" said Mother Hagar, "you have hurted yourself, man." She sat beside him. "I'se tho sorry. Papa Bob fell down Jumbo last year," she continued, feeling that the man would be cheered to know others had also met with accidents, "and it was 'leven miles he said stwait down, and he wolled all the way and fell in the cweek and got wetted. Awen't you glad you didn't do vat?"

The mountaineer opened his eyes, stared at the sky, and rolled a dim gaze upon the baby beside him. Life flashed and he sat up with a jerk. "Land o' snakes!" he exclaimed.

"Is you better?" she asked as she stood. "Tome now. I'se so vewy tired, and I'll go home wif you."

The man felt of his head, stood staggeringly, and then stumbled off to the creek, where he washed the red cut and bound a bandana handkerchief about it, while he mumbled inarticulately. Hagar hesitated, with drooping mouth; her lips quivered. This wasn't a nice man at all, and he didn't want to do what she wished him to.

"Land of snakes!" he repeated, turning toward her; "where'd you drop from, baby?"

"I didn't dwop, I comed." She pointed to the hill. "I want to be cawwied. I'se tired."

"Well, you look it." He cleared his throat. "I got a nasty bump a while ago, Kid. Did you see what became of my horse?"

"It walked off wifout you. I fought you was looking at a fish, so I comed—camed," she corrected herself. "And I want to be cawwied."

"You stay here by the road. I've got an engagement somewhere else. There'll be men along soon—more than plenty. They'll take care of you." Yet he hesitated, with a half-humorous light of pity in his eyes. This was one of those men who would not do things unless you made them. But Hagar knew what she wished, and she knew how to get it. She clutched at his trouser leg.

"I want you!" she asserted. Then, seeing his head shake, she resorted to feminine wiles. "I won't feel wested wif any one else," she said. "You is so big and —and—wemarkable, I would wavver have you. I'll tiss you—once." She pursed her lips provokingly.

The man took the bribe. "Just you wait here till I catch my bronco," he said. "You came from Elkhorn Lake, of course. What's your name? Golly! and it's all torn and tired and bruised and lost!" he softly exclaimed, as he knelt beside her. "Poor little kidlet! Do you know the lake's on the other side of that knoll, a mile away?—two miles by the road. Did you run off, baby?"

"I'se Hagar Musgwove," she said with dignity. "My papa and mamma and Willie and me is all named Musgwove, and we live in Pine Iwy. And I want to be cawwied home!"

"Snakes!" he gasped, staring at her oddly. "That's funny! Blame me, I dunno, Kid——"

Hagar saw that he had changed his mind about helping her, so she shook her curls at him. "Vat's just like you men," she said in her mother's voice, "and now I must give you anuvver. I don't care," she coaxed, "'cause you is so—so—" she was going to say "pretty," but her conscience would not permit—"intelligent," she supplemented, and laughed cooingly. "I fink I'll be your fw'end," she further coaxed, "if you will, please. Pwetty please," she added.

The man hesitated. "Hum," he said at last; "well, I guess I've got to do it. Stay here till I get the horse."

"Who is you?"

"Who? me? Oh, I—well, I'm—I don't know myself, Kiddie, these days. Guess I'm Rook Busteed—to you."

"Why was you widing so fast? It ain't—I don't mean ain't, cause I shouldn't say vat; black people and Jane say that. It's dang'wous," she finished, ambiguously.

"So it is, Miss." He stood in reflection. "I guess I can ride back over the Blue Park short trail," he said to himself. "There won't be anybody there, likely. Then we can cut across Cree's meadow and come through Silver Grove right up to the Lake and the big gateway to your pa's. I can leave you there, and you'll trot on to the house, safe enough. It's likely that by now they think you're drowned in the lake. Sit still awhile, and I'll be back."

He limped off, hand on leg, and in a moment disappeared. When he returned with the horse, Hagar was sitting with her back against a tree, sound asleep. The doll lay abandoned in the dust.

Busteed lifted the baby as gently as a father might, brushed the curls back from her forehead, and stood quite a long time looking at the hushed, peaceful face. "Ain't she a pretty kid, though!" he mumbled. "I kind of wish——" He bit his lip. He mounted, the child held carefully in his arms, but before he rode off, he caught sight of the doll. He hesitated, looking from the baby to First-Lady-Eve and back again. Then, carefully swinging his foot across the saddle, he dismounted, while he held Hagar tight in his arms. When the doll was stuffed head first into his coat pocket, its legs dangling absurdly, he remounted without waking his burden.

The bronco's canter was long and easy, while Busteed sat as on a rocking horse. Half an hour later he wound down the narrow, pine-fenced Blue Park trail, but before reaching Cree's Medow he met a lone horseman. The baby still slept profoundly, one chubby arm, from which the loose sleeve had fallen back, clasped about Busteed's bent neck.

"Here she is," he said, softly, to the gentleman he had met. "I found her over yonder on the Jumbo road. She's plumb worn out. Easy, now. Loosen her arm first."

The gentleman was a moment speechless, but his eyes glowed, and the muscles of his face quivered. "Molly thinks she's in the lake," he whispered, "and the town's searching. Yet I thought, somehow—well, I came on the chance of finding her. We've just missed her, because of—you know."

Busteed nodded. "I guess I've got a kid somewhere, if it ain't dead before now," he murmured. "That's it —easy does it—don't wake her. She ain't hurt; they're only brush scratches. And here's her doll. What's next, Mr. Musgrove? I don't feel particular scrappy, with the kind to look on, but I'm surrendering nothing."

The father looked at his child, where she nestled in his arms, her curls streaking his coat. "Go ahead," he returned curtly, "and thanks."

Busteed fumbled in his pockets. His face was very red. "I'd 'a' made my get-away long ago," he explained, "only my horse found a dog hole and pitched me. I'd just come to when the kid happened along. This is your purse. I ain't going to carry off her money."

Musgrove had no hand unoccupied. "Look here," he said, "you held me up half an hour ago, yet this repays. I notified the Sheriff, but before he got started after you we missed Hagar, and I guess he and the boys are all in boats, and will be until I get back. Call that purse a reward. Now, ride away or you'll wake her."

"Say," Busteed said, "let me look at her, won't you? I'm a married man."

"Now, go on, that's a good fellow," Musgrove whispered. "See, she's waking. I must hurry home to Molly."

Hagar woke. "There wasn't any twout," she said sleepily, 'and oh! I'se so tired. Tell Jane to come undwess me."

The horses galloped east and west. "Pardner," Busteed called over his shoulder, "you take it from me, that kid's going to get everything she wants in this life. She's a lulu."

Hagar conceitedly nodded her approbation. "Doodby," she called. "Tome again."

Ants Protect Ants.

A standing army of ants for defensive purposes is kept and provided with food by a sensitive plant of Nicaragua. In this acacia there are two large thorns at the base of each leaf inhabited by colonies of ants which bore into the thorns and make a home for themselves by eating out the soft inner tissue. On the leaf stalks there are honey glands, and at the tip of each leaflet there is a sausage-shaped body, about as large as a pin's head, consisting of albuminous food. The ants sip the nectar and eat the food bodies, and being contented with their lot, remain on the plant without doing it any injury.

When the plant is threatened by an invasion of leaf-cutting ants which would damage it, the ants composing the plant's army or police force rush out and repel the intruders. Many similar arrangements exist in tropical plants.

In one of the most remarkable of these ant plants the female ant bites a hole in the stem and brings up her brood inside it. The stalk of each leaf is swollen at its base and bears food bodies which are eaten by the ants when they emerge to find for themselves. As the old food bodies are eaten, new ones are formed, thus keeping the ants, which are of a fierce disposition, in the plant's employment. Plants of the same species which do not happen to be inhabited by ants fall an easy prey to leaf-cutting kinds of ants, which are only too plentiful in the tropics. In other cases the defensive ants are provided only with shelter in cavities of the stem, and various naturalists have observed that these ants pour out in troops whenever leaf-cutting enemies attempt to attack the foliage.

The ants which thus defend these plants are small, but sting with extreme virulence, their small size making them the more formidable. The leaf-cutting ants cut off the leaves and pile them up in heaps, forming a sort of kitchen garden of leaf mould, upon which they cultivate a fungus belonging to the mushroom family. They sow the spores of the mushroom and make a pure culture of the fungus, nibbling at it to prevent the development of mushroom heads and thus promote the growth of spawn.—[Chicago Tribune.

Shadows.

Thinking of thee as the long night shadows
  Cradle the tired world anew,
Dreaming of thee as the solemn stillness
  Speaks of a love that is deep and true;
Longing for thee, alone and silent,
  Far from the world apart,
Yearning and craving with naught for remembrance
  But the throb of an aching heart.

RTLANDT FIELD BISHOP, the automobilist and loonist, sends from Paris a funny automobile told a member of the Aëro Club in New York. merican tourist, the story goes, went to Germany in his car to see the last army maneuvers. He was impressed with what he saw, and especially with the brigade of motor abulances, motor baggage wagons and so forth.

"As the tourist watched the maneuvers from a seat under a tree, the axle of a motor ambulance broke. Instantly the men leaped out, ran into the village, returned in a jiffy with a new axle, fixed it in place with wonderful mechanical skill, and teuf-teuffed off again almost as good as new.

"'There's efficiency,' said the American tourist. 'There's German efficiency for you. No matter what breaks, there's a stock at hand to supply the needed part from. These Germans!'

"And praising the remarkable example of German efficiency he had just witnessed, the tourist returned to the village and ordered up his car, to find he couldn't use it, as an axle was missing."

For the Final Fire.

AUGUST BELMONT in the smoke room of the Lucania told, apropos of luxurious motor cars, a story about the young Marquis of Anglesey, who died in Monte Carlo some five years ago.

"Lord Anglesey's cars were the most luxurious then known," said Mr. Belmont. "This young man went to extremes in everything. He was very intelligent, though.

"Once, at his historic castle in Wales, there was a slight fire. So, lest the priceless pile burn down, he ordered an enormous quantity of hand grenades, or extinguishers, from London.

"When the grenades arrived, they were hung all over the castle, but, though it was an enormous place, there were still several dozen grenades left over at the end of the hanging.

"'And what shall I do with them, My Lord?' the butler asked.

"Lord Anglesey coughed—he was already in a pretty bad way—and said drily to the butler:

WILLIAM SHILLABER, the secretary of the Newsboys' Summer Camp on Staten Island, was praising newsboy character.

"The newsboy is a good fellow," he said. "His bitterest enemy can attribute no worse fault to him than mischievousness. And mischievousness isn't a fault—it is only an excess—an excess of high spirits."

Mr. Shillaber laughed.

"A newsboy friend of mine," he said, "took to the sea. He became cabin boy on a tramp collier. He was a good boy, but—

"Once, when our White Squadron was at Newport, this collier steamed in her slow way shoreward with her ensign upside down, the signal of distress—distress of the direst.

"Instantly a pretty sight was to be seen. Every warship in the fleet lowered a lifeboat, and all those beautiful, snowy boats, manned by jackies in spotless white duck, raced for the grimy old collier at break-neck speed. A pretty sight, indeed.

"The captain of the collier stood on the bridge. He waved his hat. And the crews pulled all the faster.

"As they drew close, they heard the man's cries:

"'Come on! Pull! Get down to it!' he roared, dancing about wildly.

"'What's the matter, Captain?' the first officer to reach the collier asked breathlessly.

"'Why, nothing's the matter,' the captain answered, in a surprised voice.

"'Then why's your ensign upside down?'

"'It's that boy Hank again,' said he. 'And here I thought it was a regatta.'"

The Cause.

THE late Orrin S. Wood, the pioneer telegraphist—Mr. Wood opened the first telegraph office in New York—was, though a most temperate man, unfriendly to the more intolerant and bigoted type of prohibitionist.

Mr. Wood, at a banquet in Turner, made a witty speech on the drink question that many Turnerites still remember. He declared that prohibitionists blamed drink for evils that were often due to other things—to weakness of will, poverty, lack of education and so forth.

"I once was present," he concluded, "at a teetotal meeting where a dear old lady rose and gave her experience.

"'Dear friends,' she said, 'my husband is a good and worthy man; but for a long time he was in the habit of taking, before he went to bed, a raw egg beaten up in brandy. That, dear friends, was a great cross to me for many years. But last month my husband discovered that the brandy made him bilious, and so he abandoned this vile and filthy nightly indulgence, and now his biliousness has entirely disappeared.'

"There was loud applause; but a crusty old fellow in a back seat rose and shouted angrily:

"It was the egg, Madam, that made your husband bilious. You go home and tell him to take the brandy straight.'"

Bad Angels.

THE mother was expecting guests for the evening and at 8 o'clock the youngest son was told that it was bedtime. The little fellow persisted in sitting up for the occasion, pleading fear of the darkness. His mother assured him there was nothing to fear, saying he would not be alone, as the angels would be in the room to guard him. Finally, the youngster reluctantly went to bed. An hour later, a little figure appeared in the dining-room doorway, much to the amusement of the entire company, saying:

"Mamma!"

"Well, dear?" his mother said.

"May I speak, Mamma?"

"Certainly, dear. What do you want?"

"Mamma, are the angels in my room now?"

A Liberal Morality.

JOSEPH WIDENER, the young Philadelphia millionaire, was entertaining a party of Anglo-Americans at luncheon at the Ritz in London.

The day was mild and sunny and the French windows of the beautiful restaurant stood open on the green park and Picadilly. A limousine glided swiftly past Devonshire House; a well-known American millionaire sat in the sumptuous car, and, Mr. Widener, nodding toward the man, said to his neighbor:

"That is Bonns. He made $19,000,000 last year."

"Is he honest?" the neighbor, an Englishman, inquired.

"Well, John, he replied. "Bonns' moral code resembles that imputed to the Brazilians. It—er—is liberal. It countenances many shady things. In Brazil, you know, in introducing a friend to your banker, in recommending him to a business associate and so forth, you show the highest confidence in him—a confidence that can go no further when you say: 'This is my friend. For all he steals I will be responsible."—[Washington Star.

Contempt of Court?

MARK TWAIN was waiting for a street car in Boston when a young girl approached him, smiling. She was a lovely girl, fresh, blooming, ingenious, bubbling with enthusiasm, and evidently on her way home from school.

"Pardon me," she said. "I know it's very unconventional, but I may never have another chance. Would you mind giving me your autograph?"

"Glad to do it, my dear child," said Mr. Clemens, drawing out his fountain pen.

"Oh, it's so good of you," gurgled the girl. "You know, I've never seen you but once, Chief Justice Fuller, and that was at a distance; but I've seen your portrait so often that I recognized you the moment I saw you here."

"Um—m—m—mm!" said Mr. Clemens, non-committally. Then he took from her eager hands her nice little autograph album, and wrote in bold script these words:

"It is delicious to be full,

I am cordially yours,

INFLUENCE OF LIGHT.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS MADE BY SCIENTISTS.

By Ernest Braunton.

BOTH the scientific and the practical horticulturist are ever alert in getting the best possible conditions for plant growth. During late years much has been done to determine the effect of different lights upon flowers, seeds and fruits as well as upon specific plants and vegetation in general. Some of the experiments cover culture in diffused daylight; others the influence of radium rays, and still more with electric lights and electroculture.

A German experimenter tested the value of diffused daylight with about twenty species of ornamental plants in beds so situated as to receive direct sunlight for a few hours in the morning and evening and diffused light during midday. These experiments were long continued by reason of interruption by unfavorable weather; in Southern California where we have continuous sunshine and stronger lights the results from such tests should be much more conclusive. It was determined that growth of stalks, leaves, flowers, and seed pods was greatest in what is termed mixed or diffused light; the plants flowered more abundantly and remained green for a longer period.

GARDENING REFLECTIONS.

A Parisian scientist has been studying the influence of light on the development of fruits and seeds and has proven that while a certain amount of illumination is absolutely essential during the early stages of development of fruit after it has passed the first stages of formation it it is possible to complete its development in a greatly reduced light. If self-pollinated plants are inclosed before the pollination of their flowers in black or white bags fastened to the plants, in general, but very few normal fruits will be formed, due to the insufficient illumination. In one instance, thirty heads of wheat were inclosed in black sacks before the pollination of the flowers and only three to five grains were produced to the head, while heads in the same stage of growth inclosed in white bags gave from sixteen to twenty-five grains per head. Similar results were obtained with peas. The maximum dry weight of seeds and pericarp of a number of fruits, such as currants, cherries, apples, pears, etc., corresponds to illumination slightly less than the maximum of light. It is shown also that the acidity of the fruit diminishes with the illumination. In the majority of cases fruit inclosed in sacks was less acid than that maturing in the open.

Not much is yet known by the general public about radium rays except it is known they are, in their full strength, a very powerful influence. So far as known, nothing has been done in the way of experimentation with this material on the Pacific Coast, but in the Eastern States and in Europe much of value has been accomplished. Mr. C. S. Gager, in the Popular Science Monthly, gives a non-technical account of some of the more striking results, stating that radium acts as a stimulus to the various physiological processes of plants in general. If the strength of the radium, the duration of exposure, and all other conditions are suitable, the response is an excitation of function, but under unfavorable conditions (radium too strong, etc.,) the result is retardation or even death of the plants. Not all plants act the same under the influence of radium rays and much more work must be done before definite results of practical value are obtained.

Much has already been given in this department regarding the effect of electric light on plants, more especially in controlling the time of flowering, but little has been written concerning electroculture. Exhaustive experiments have proven that there is a evident stimulating action of atmospheric, dynamic, and static electricity on the growth of plants, practically all of them being made more vigorous, blooming earlier, and giving a larger yield of all parts. In the experiments noted electricity was applied before germination and during the various stages of development.

Naturalizing Eastern Plums.

A reader writes that she has been unable to get good plums for eating in a fresh state, and wishes to know if the wild eastern plums have been tried in Southern California. To digress somewhat, the writer wishes to say he has eaten all kinds of wild plums throughout the Mississippi Valley and cannot recall any that surpasses in flavor our latest and best of sorts originated here in California and in size the wild ones cannot even be compared with our cultivated ones. As a matter of fact eastern plums have been tried at various points and at various times in our part of the State and as far as known they have been nearly complete failures. While not fond of plums as compared with other fruits in market at the same time, in the writer's estimation no better plum is grown than Luther Burbank's "Formosa." It is of extra large size, small stone, excellent flavor and a firm, crisp flesh, keeps well and is of a handsome color. If our correspondent will give this one a trial she will not pine for the wild plums of "childhood's happy days," though almost anything in the fruit line satisfies the abnormal appetite of a child.

The Pines of Mexico.

Last week, it was noted in this department that little was known of the plants of horticultural value in our sister republic of Mexico. The Arnold Arboretum, connected with Harvard College, has just issued a pamphlet, consisting of twenty-nine pages with a map and twenty-two plates, on the pines of Mexico, and more is to follow.

Wood-rotting Fungi.

While studying various wood-rotting fungi, Mr. P. Spaulding has noted an apparent relation between the wound parasites and the heartwood of diseased trees. A striking instance of this was that of Fomes ribis occurring on sassafras trees. In every case examined, this fungus was found attacking the trees only in wounds where the heartwood was exposed by some injury. F. igniarius, studied upon the beech, was found to occur in a similar manner. Hundreds of blazed beech trees have been examined, but in not a single instance was the fungus found growing where the wound only extended into the sapwood. On the other hand, it was constantly found in wounds extending into the heartwood. The fungus Polystictus versicolor on catalpa and F. fraxinophilus on the white ash can be traced to the heartwood through dead stubs or wounds. In a similar way Von Schrenk has called attention to the fact that F. rimosus, which attacks the heartwood of black locust, enters either through the dead stubs or through insect burrows. These investigations seem to indicate that the heartwood must be exposed before these fungi are capable of attacking the hosts, and great care should be exercised in pruning that no "stubs" of branches remain, but a clean cut be made close to the trunk so that the surrounding bark will grow over the wound for the injury from injudicious pruning is just as great upon our evergreen trees as upon these deciduous ones of the States east of the Rockies.

Survival of the Fittest.

We wish to make our homes attractive, and realize our many mistakes; many plants, according to the great law of nature, "the survival of the fittest," have died out. This law means to us that plans succeed with least care and attention when they come from countries with light rainfall and dry summers and existed under climatic conditions similar to those of California. It is always of special interest to visit a badly-cared-for or deserted place. If we see some bright spot of color, something doing well, we ought to make a special note of it for future use, for only in this way may we come to know those plants which, in our State, will virtually care for themselves.

Value of Enclosed Gardens.

Gardens surrounded by wall or hedge or vine-covered fence have a charm no other can supply. Therein one may build to suit himself and have a little world all his own. Aside from the privacy—the snugness and seclusion—such gardens are protected from winds, animal and insect pests, and many other ills. With a few trees and shrubs it will prove a shelter and a home for wild birds, and pets of various kinds are also possible. If you have a tall tree, you may win the charming nightly song of the mocking-bird. In a tall pine tree in the writer's yard one carols the whole night through, and is very welcome. The department editor who inveighed against the mocking-bird two weeks ago should follow the advice he so freely gives that he might sleep o' nights.

CITY PLANNING.

OF THE NEEDS THAT MUST BE CONSIDERED.

address at Washington, Frederick Law Olmsted, one of America's greatest landscape architect, that our city planning ordinarily aims at making streets connect with older ones so as to form lines of travel and to make them wide enough congestion of traffic. He said this led to a standardized arrangement of streets and with uniform straight streets covering the whole of the town. This leads to "the concentration traffic upon a limited number of streets causing of serious congestion and inconvenience," unless traffic is provided for.

all of our cities and towns in South- have effectively tackled the planting of street trees, those most to the fore will be looking to the next step toward the ideal. As to what this step will be is briefly outlined in a letter lately received from J. H. Reed of Riverside. He writes: "Now that the problem of well-planted streets is nearing solution, we must look to further improvement of our city. If your city-beautiful experts did not cost so much, we could get you to plan or suggest a "block beautiful" system of landscape improvement or, better still, provide for carrying out a scheme of embellishment and improvement for a whole street.

"Even if we have to pay "fat fees," the cost would fall so lightly on each individual owner that every one could find out how best to improve his yard so that it would be attractive in itself and harmonize with the whole scheme." The city or town first to adopt this method of making the city beautiful both as a whole and in every detail will not be able to hide her "light under a bushel," but would soon become famous for her unusual beauty, both at home and abroad. Riverside has so forged to the front in all that pertains to the city-beautiful movement that the writer delights in constantly calling attention to her many and growing charms and wishes to predict that she will always remain well to the fore in this work; an example worthy of emulation by every city in the land.

Conifers for Street Planting.

The writer has a prejudice against trimming up conifers from the bottom that is so deeply rooted that one of these trees never looks beautiful to him when so pruned. Nevertheless, this is purely a matter of personal taste and it will not do to say that the one is right and the many are entirely wrong. It must be recognized that street trees in our ordinary and wholly insufficient parkways have to be trimmed up to allow the unrestricted use of both street and sidewalk. Granting that we cannot escape this most necessary pruning, why may we not with propriety use conifers along our streets.

While in Santa Ana last week, Prof. N. B. Pierce called the attention of the writer to some Araucaria Bidwillii that had been trimmed up for eight above the soil, and asked: "Why would not this tree make a good subject for street planting." It must be admitted that a street planted with this tree would present an appearance far to be desired above the average well-planted street, and such trees would give variety to the limited list of good street trees now in general use. While still retaining a strong dislike for mutilated conifers and while not advocating their use on ordinary streets, the writer will admit that rows of them would probably prove welcome to the average citizen and find commendation from nearly all who are really plant lovers. The Araucaria Bidwillii is at present too costly to suit intending street-tree planters, but time may bring a change.

Benefit of School Gardens.

An eastern writer thus tersely sums up his estimate of the value of school-gardening experience for the young:

"I believe that it ought to be a part of every boy's education and of every girl's, too, to learn how to take care of vegetables, fruits and flowers. I believe, too, that the main trouble with most of the troublesome boys and girls is that they don't have enough work to do, or enough of anything worth while to interest them. They are restless and uneasy, and hunting trouble all the time. I believe that nine-tenths of the incorrigible and troublesome children can be permanently cured by having a garden of their own. I believe a few things still more radical than this along this same line, but this is enough for a start. And I believe further, that the boy who has an interest in a melon patch and a small garden all his own will be very likely to respect the property rights of others."

Plans of German Cities.

The five most important points obtained by the German system of city planning are thus summed up by Mr. Olmsted, who last year visited Europe for the purpose of studying city planning:

First, a reasonably good provision of main thoroughfares, well planned and well equipped.

Second, an increasingly liberal and equitable distribution of small parks and playgrounds, as well as numerous small interesting squares.

Third, a good distribution of excellent public building sites, and on many of them some very interesting public buildings.

Fourth, very notable facilities for commercial and manufacturing districts in connection with waterfronts and railways. When the city plan lays out a district with a special view to manufacture, it does not just cut it up into the standard streets and blocks and then leave the railways, the manufacturers and teamsters to struggle with the transportation problem, but begins by laying out the necessary rights-of-way for the railroad facilities, and provides long rows of factory sites, with railroad sidings on one side and streets on the other.

Fifth, development of the newer districts in a less crowded and much more homogeneous manner than in the past.

Here in America, he says, we go on complacently perpetuating our old mistakes long after we have recognized them, preparing over again in our suburbs without material variation the same conditions that have given rise to results we deplore in the older parts of our cities.

Cedar for Pencils.

"Down in my State there is a patch of territory about twenty-five miles square, near the town where the battle of Franklin was fought during the Civil War, which is practically the only section in the United States where cedar is grown for no other purpose than to furnish stock for the lead-pencil industry," said Thomas Green of Nashville.

"In that section cedar trees seem to spring spontaneously from the soil, and the peculiar thing about it is that they do not grow in any other section of the State to amount to anything. These forests give employment to many wood choppers and planing-mill workers, who prepare the cedar for shipment to lead-pencil factories in the eastern States and to Europe.

"An immense amount of the wood is cut, planed, sawed and shipped out of the town of Murfreesboro, Tenn., every year. There have been many fortunes made in that section out of cedar. Cedar trees there are cultivated as is any other crop. The groves, conserved as they are now by the wise owners, will last forever and will be furnishing the close-grained, fine-fibered wood for pencils a century from now."—[Washington Post.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

SOMEWHAT HACKNEYED.

THE SUBJECT OF AN INQUIRY FROM SAN BERNARDINO.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

A CORRESPONDENT from San Bernardino (evidently a beginner in the art of poultry breeding) asks information on the subject of comparison versus score-card judging. In the case of the former, and by the law of elimination, the poorer specimens are discarded until only the ones entitled to awards are left in the hands of the judge. If there are five awards (first, second, third, very highly commended and highly commended,) the poorest specimen wins the smallest consideration, the second poorest, the next in consideration, and so on up until the best bird only remains, winning, of course, first place. Discarded birds receive no further consideration, neither does the owner of winning birds know specifically why his birds are among the blue ribboners, other than that they possess elements of strength somewhere along the line. Comparison judging is to be commended in the case of large shows, as it expedites the making of awards and usually satisfies the experienced breeder who can select the fine points from the bad quite as readily as the judges.

In the score card, the case is almost reversed. Every bird must be examined section by section, and critically examined. For instance, the head and beak, eyes, comb, wattles and ear lobes, neck, wings, beak, tail, breast, body and fluff, legs and toes, are all on a score card, as is symmetry, weight or size, and condition. They are printed in rotation, column form. The judge decides first on symmetry, then weight and size, condition, then scores the bird, commencing at its head and on down to its toes. Any defects in any of these sections are marked on the card. When the owner of a bird or birds gets his cards, he can tell exactly where his birds were defective. The score is 100. A specimen might be cut two points for faults in comb, one or more points for defect in wings, and so on. If the bird scored 90, there would be a cut of ten points.

The writer is not an advocate of the score card, for the reason that in its application but few judges carry out its intentions to the last analysis. The tendency is to skim over the various sections; then again no two judges have the same fine sense of color values in plumage; no two agree exactly on symmetry or type of breed; and hardly any two will score the same specimen alike; often there are ties in scores, which are usually determined by comparing the birds. At its best, the score card furnishes the judge's individual opinion of the bird, which, if he be competent, gives it a value to the novice. It also gives a value to many birds not in the winning class, as a defeated specimen beaten only by say half a point clearly possesses a public record which gives it an added value in the breeding pen and also as an article of sale.

Breeders with a love of fine birds and an ambition of exhibit should study the Standard of Perfection. It is to the poultry breeder what the Jersey Cattle Register is to the breeders of that celebrated variety: it tells what constitutes the perfect bird in each variety and breed by giving disqualifications and imperfections subject to discounts or "cuts" on the part of the judge.

Vagaries of Fashion in Feathers.

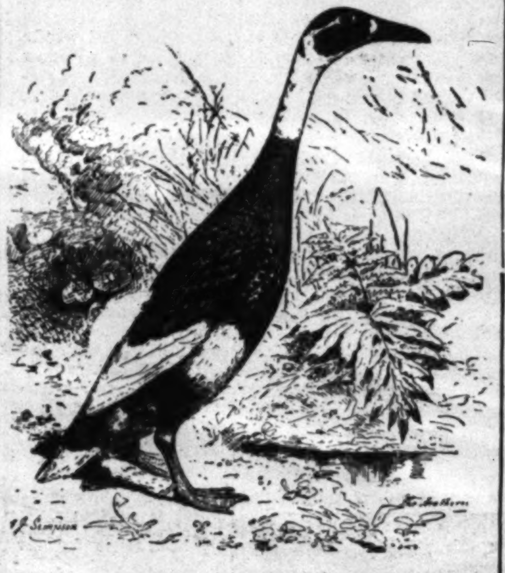
The veteran Charles R. Harker, of the Fancier's Monthly, gives some interesting reminiscences bearing on the vagaries of fashion within the realm of web and feather. For the most part these memories of bygone years show the evolution of what has since become known as the American class of poultry—probably the most valuable group of all-purpose varieties known to the industry. It seems but a year or two ago that a few fanciers gathered in the office of the old Poultry Bulletin, at 62 Cortlandt street, New York, one dull November afternoon and discussed the project of holding a poultry show in the great metropolis. The result of that meeting was the organization of the New York Fanciers' Club, which held its first show in Madison Square Garden, February 13 to 16, 1883. It was a great success, but, there were no Buff Wyandottes, nor Buff Leghorns, nor Rhode Island Reds, on exhibition. They belong to a much later day. Silver Wyandottes there were, galore; they were just coming into favor as Wyandottes after having enjoyed phenomenal popularity as "American Seabrights." The second show of the club was held at the same place January 23 to 30, 1884. It, too, was a success, and though there were no Buff Wyandottes shown, Dr. Deyo then brought out the first White Wyandottes. Plymouth Rocks were Barred only, no Buffs nor Whites; Leghorns included Whites, Browns and Blacks, no Buffs. The third show was held February 4 to 11, 1885. It surpassed all its predecessors, but the buff birds had not yet arrived. The fourth and last show given by the Fanciers' Club as originally organized, was held February 3 to 10, 1886. White Plymouth Rocks then came out under the name of "White Snowflakes." Buffs of all sorts, except Cochins, were conspicuous by their absence, but that it was something of a show may be inferred from the following figures compiled from our old dusty records: There were on exhibition forty-three breeding pens of Silver Wyandottes, seventy pairs and forty-one exhibitors, in all 330 birds of this variety now, alas! sunk to the vanishing point. Of Barred Plymouth Rocks there were 312, and that number in the slang of today, would be "going some" at almost any show of 1909. The total number of birds shown, exclusive of pigeons, etc., was 2445, and up to that time it was the greatest poultry exhibition ever seen on the American continent. The Rhode Island Reds, and the Buff Leghorns, Buff Wyandottes and Buff Rocks, made their début comparatively a short while ago.

And yet the new breeds and varieties are still being exploited, like new fashions in clothes and most other things with which man has to do. It seems to us, however, that to improve present varieties would lead to larger results, both on account of utility and beauty.

The Indian Runner Duck.

Thought by many supposed to be of modern introduction, the Indian Runner Duck was known some sixty years ago, the first importation reaching England at about that time from India. Its progress was at first slow; not until about 1893 did it command attention in this country, receiving its greatest impetus, however, in Australia. Indeed, it is in the latter country that it has received widest attention, and in some localities (on this account) it is also known as the Australian Indian Runner Duck.

Brown, in his "Races of Domestic Poultry" classes it as an egg breed, which reputation it well sustains in Southern California, where it is next to the White Peking the most popular. Color of flesh, orange or deep cream; color of legs and feet, deep yellow; color of egg shell, white.



INDIAN RUNNER DUCK.

As indicated in the illustration, the body is exceptionally long with a well-rounded breast; head fine, rather flat, carried very erect, with a strong, nearly straight bill; legs well set back. Color of head, grayish fawn in ducks and bronze green in drakes; neck, wing flights and fluff white; remainder of body fawn to gray. Weight, males, 4 to 5 pounds; females, 3 to 4.

There are those who claim that the Indian Runner duck will lay as high as 200 eggs per year; this may be true—in exceptional cases—a good average would be 150 eggs.

A Good Time to Buy.

People who contemplate buying a family flock of hens will find the present an opportune time. Many breeders are now culling down their flocks, and selecting the poorer specimens for the market. Others are thinning out their birds for want of room; in this class may be found opportunities to secure a handsome pen of pullets mated to a young cock, which their owners will dispose of at a reasonable price. The mode of procedure for the novice is to explain his wants, the probable amount of his investment, and then go to some known and responsible breeder of the breed and variety he has in mind, and the chances are that at the time he will secure splendid value for his money. If one is experienced in poultry, bargains are often picked up in the open market; but often it is hazardous. A friend of the writer only last week secured a lot of Rhode Island Reds in this manner, which "looked good to him." After a few days he discovered roup in the flock, with the result that a number have already gone to the block. In buying be sure to get vigorous and robust healthy stock, typical of the breed your fancy demands—such birds are best secured from experienced and reliable breeders.

Age and Gray Hairs.

We have often prided ourselves that in the Los Angeles County Poultry Association we possessed one of the oldest organizations of its kind in the country. Indeed, if our history is not in error, it and the New York City organization, which is responsible for the Madison Square show, are the two bodies with long histories in this country. In England, however, they have us "skinned a mile" on antiquity in the matter of poultry organizations. The Poulterers' Company of Lon- was founded in 1345, which was originally by its charter to inspect the poultry brought to the don markets. The company gives medals on poultry at all poultry shows in the United where there are fifty or more entries in these provided notice of these shows is given to the the company. In comparison it must be confess our history is a trifle fresh. Before we chirp along this line, we shall wait the advent of a Los Angeles, which will make of it the London of Southwest and at the same time give it historical cance.

A Florentine morning in spring; nowhere was there another so beautiful, except under the same blue skies of Don Francisco's home. The purple and white iris stood in ranks to let him pass; roses swung down detaining branches from pergola and wall; Banksia roses, too, white and yellow. What? Was he homesick? The acacias, how homelike they looked, and the violets, their fragrance was almost too sweet!

There was quite a little company in the "American studio," as he walked about with a brush full of one color and another, sometimes touching up a light or shadow, oftener laying the brush down again unused. At last he pushed aside palette and paints. "I shall not add another stroke," he said. "It is complete, whether good or bad."

"On with your coat, then, and we all go out to breakfast." This was one of their customs rigidly lived up to—whenever an artist had a picture accepted at the Salon, the others giving him a complimentary breakfast on the day of its hanging.

"When we return," continued the speaker, "some one will perhaps pick up this majolica jar, its color is so dark that one scarcely sees it, and I have already stumbled over the thing twice." He gave it a vigorous push with his foot, and it toppled and rolled over to the other side of the room. They all trooped out, but half-way down the corridor, Don Francisco turned back. "I have forgotten my watch," he said; "go on, and I will presently overtake you."

Just before him, José, from a dark corner where since dawn he had skulked and watched, came upon the landing, fitted a skeleton key into the lock of the rear door and was quickly within. The two faced each other, one in front, the other behind the canvas. José drew his knife, and the blade gleamed in the sunshine.

"Your precious picture! You shall see how I will improve upon your work," and he started toward it.

With no thought but for his painting, and not in the least understanding the fellow's meaning, whom for the moment he had not recognized, the startled artist made a move forward. But alas! for José's plans; his foot struck the fallen jar, he fell on the cruel blade, and lay bleeding and motionless. As he fell, recognition came to Don Francisco, and he hurriedly lifted him, calling for help so lustily that the others were soon back, a huddled, wondering group. One ran for a physician, others for stimulants and a basin of water, and presently they were all turned out of the room while the doctor and his attendants worked over the unconscious man.

"Will he die?" was the first question, when the surgeon's duty was done.

"No, with good care he will live; I suppose he must be sent to the hospital."

"I will care for him here." Don Francisco's quiet tones startled them all.

"But care for a strange man, likely crazy? He may kill you. Why did he have his knife?"

"I am not afraid; certainly he will not hurt me for a while," was the smiling answer.

"Still, why do you do such a foolish act? He is much better off under the care of nurses."

"He shall have nurses here."

"Let him do as he wishes; it is certainly much better that he be not moved at present," and the doctor turned to make arrangements for the wounded man's care until a nurse could be sent. "One of my attendants will remain for the present," he said, "and you can go with your friends if you desire."

So once more, quiet now, and subdued, they started off to the breakfast, full of questions as to how it all happened, and what the fellow had meant to do, to all of which Don Francisco's only answer was that he could not for a moment imagine. Not in any way did he intimate that he had ever before seen the man.

The picture was hung; it was admired, and talked about. In the quiet studio lay José, recovering slowly from his wound, and even more slowly from his constant astonishment at the kindness and almost affectionate care of the man toward whom he had attempted such a great wrong. Not a word of reproach, not a question as to how he came to be in Florence, or what he had meant that morning with his threat and his open knife. The whole meaning had flashed upon the artist in that moment of the fall, but his knowledge was not shared with any one. As strength came again, and healing of the wound, he talked with José of the ranch, the tall yellow mustard and the scurrying squirrels, lambing time, and shearing, the mountains and the sea, and the hate of the listening man turned to a love that grew almost to worship as the roses bloomed and fell, the grain yellowed and ripened in the fields along the country roads where they sometimes drove, the grapes turned to purple and the green olives to black. He thought of it when he heard the fountains splash in the moonlight, and saw the solemn cypresses point upward in the early dawn, and all the time between, until there was only one desire in his mind, to expiate his wrong.

One morning, Don Francisco found lying on his table the knife with which José had attempted to vent his spite, and which he had placed there as a sort of offering of penitence. Not a word did he say of the past as he picked it up, but he called to the porter who chanced to be passing the door: "Here, Pietro, is a knife with which to cut kindlings," and tossed it out to him. José could only look his affection and gratitude. Nothing more was ever said of the matter, but no studio was kept so clean as that of Don Francisco, no other artist in the quarter was so cared for. The freshest fruit was his, the crispest vegetables, and the former ranch hand and truckman developed the ability to make a cup of tea or a pot of coffee that would have rivaled Anita's at her best. Even more to the purpose was the adaptability he showed as a model. He was simply untiring when a tiresome pose was required, and was quick to see and respond to the slightest wish. Another canvas was finished, and a third, each one a successful venture, and all three selling eventually at good prices.

"José," said Don Francisco one night, "do you remember the cliffs by the sea?"

"José flushed red; yes, he remembered.

"And how the sheep used to feed on the lowlands at their feet?" He remembered that, too.

"I will paint one more picture, and then we will go home. In it you shall lead the flock out into the new grass. Do you remember the color of it, the living green? You shall herd the sheep from the trail, and carry the little lambs when they tire." José winced. "And if I succeed, people will hear the roar of the sea far off, and taste the salt tang; they will hear the near-by bleat of the sheep, the song of the mocker and the meadow lark, and the mating call of the tufted quail; the yellow mustard will grow on the canvas as they look, and our sky—José, it is as blue as this Italian sky—will lean above it, while the blue mountains in the distance—blue, mind, not purple—stand to the north."

"You will succeed." There was faith in the tone, a faith for anything that the speaker might attempt, even to the pulling down of the moon, then shining above them, as they stood on a bridge watching the dark water of the Arno glide by.

Well, the picture was painted, and it was a success, the best of them all.

"It is because I had the right sort of a model for the shepherd," said the gratified artist at the farewell breakfast. "I told you that was what I lacked before."

And, although he could never have put his thought into words, José wondered if it might not be that our good deeds and kindly thoughts, our forgiveness, and helpfulness, in some way get themselves into the painted picture and the written song.

It was a happy day for Los Robles ranch when the two returned to the spreading old oaks and the faithful ones who lived under their shade. Guadaloupe had cared for the flock with great devotion, and to him they were still entrusted, while Anita watched the baby lambs. This latest painting was hung on the walls of the adobe house, and was the wonder and admiration of all. No one, seeing how Don Francisco treated him, could harbor ill-will for José; indeed, no one had any ill-will left to cherish. There were long days of happy living and successful work. In time a new art school was erected to the name of Donna Isabel. Her name was spoken always in love, and over the grave on the hill a beautiful damask rose blossoms and drops its petals in fragrant drifts, a rose brought in a pot from Florence, by José, planted and tended with his love, and they do say that this rose has never yet learned that it is not growing in Italy, so rarely blue are the skies that lean over it.

A Window and a Tree.

By my window a magician, breathing whispers of enchantment,
Stands and waves a wand above me, till the flowing of my soul,
Like the tide's deep rhythm, rises in successive swells that widen
All my circumscribed horizon till the finite fades away;
And the fountains of my being in their innermost recesses
Are unsealed, and as the seas sweep, sweep the waters of my soul
Till they reach the shores of heaven and with ebb tide bear a pearl
Back into the heart's safekeeping, where no thieves break through nor steal.

By my window stands Confessor with his hands outstretched to bless me,
And on bended knee I listen to his low "Absolvo te."
Ne'er was mass more sacramental, ne'er confessional more solemn,
And the benediction given ne'er shall leave my shriven soul.

Just a tree beside my window—just a symbol sent from heaven—
But with Proteus power it ever changes meaning—changes form.
And it speaks with tongues of angels, and it prophesies the rising
Of the day star which shall shine out from divinity in man.

When They Built It.

During a history recitation in a Washington public school the teacher put the question:

"When was Rome built?"

The first to answer was a youngster near the front, and his response was "At night."

"At night!" repeated the astonished instructor. "How in the world did you get such an idea as that?"

"Why, I've often heard my dad say that Rome wasn't built in a day," said the boy.—[Harper's Weekly.

FIELD NOTES.

That New Berry.

OUR late correspondence contains much reference to the Wonderberry, the originator of which is supposed to be Luther Burbank. The public should not confuse the old "Wonderberry" fraud with anything Burbank has originated. Some ten years ago, I sent East for fruit specimens of the original fake from Dakota. I received a bunch of night shade. The fruit of this wild berry of Dakota is not poisonous. The berries are as large as our red cherries, about a half-dozen growing on a bunch. When this fraud first started on its career, it was not given out as a Burbank product, but now it seems to be flourishing anew under the Burbank name.

Bees and Pollination.

IT is generally conceded by experimenters that the honey bee is attracted to the blossom by the inflorescence. The results obtained will be a fair index as to the truth of this statement. Out of the 1500 blossoms emasculated, only five set fruit. During the whole period the pistils of these blossoms remained receptive, only eight bees visited the tree. More than twice that number was seen in one-half hour on the tree twenty feet away. Since only a small portion of the emasculated blossoms set fruit, it is manifest that pollen is not transmitted through the air in sufficient quantities to insure cross-pollination. While this experiment demonstrated the fact that bees will visit trees when the floral part of the blossoms is removed, they are not attracted in sufficient numbers to insure perfect pollination. It is apparent that the showy petals of the blossoms aid materially in attracting the bees. The blossom is well supplied with nectar, and the open character of nectary makes it accessible to almost all insects. The bees, in trying to reach the nectar, brush against the anthers and carry away with them, on their hairy legs and abdomen, large quantities of pollen. The insects in visiting other blossoms transfer some of the foreign pollen to these pistils. Since the wind aids a little in cross-pollination, it is evident that the various insects, especially the bees, are carriers of pollen from one variety to another.—[Rural Press.

Sunshine Sweets.

A CORRESPONDENT who says he for the first time has sampled California foothill peaches, asks why foothill fruits are so much sweeter than those raised in the valley. It is not so with all varieties or kinds. Usually the deciduous fruits are of higher quality when grown above the valley plane. I suppose it is because sweetness in fruit is developed largely by actinic forces and not by heat. The sun shines freer from haze and mists in the upland and mountainous localities, allowing the sun to act with greater effect in the production of fruit sugars. With oranges it may be that the actinic rays have less to do than the heat rays, oranges being of a more tropical nature. I passed through a fine strawberry section a few days ago, noted for the fine quality of its berries. It is nearly 1800 feet in altitude.

Starving for Fruit.

ONE part of this great fruit-growing State does not know how another part is suffering for fruit all the time. One has but to look at altitudes, and to the fact that some of the richest gold mines on the continent are far above the area of fruit growing, to understand that a considerable proportion of our people are compelled to live practically without fruit. Go yourself into these high places for just one week and try living on hazelnuts and wild gooseberries for fruit, and you will understand. In the first place, there is not enough level land in a whole township upon which to plant an orchard with which to supply fruit to the public. It costs $20 a ton to freight goods into the district, and fruit would not stand the forty-mile haul. Peaches and apples were selling at 10 cents a pound, but I saw none offering at any price.

These are the fruits that can be grown in one of the high Sierra counties. Winter apples, pears, cherries, hazelnuts, wild plums, gooseberries and elderberries. There is no great security against spring frosts. In fact, only one year in three produces any of these fruits, except in a few protected districts on the lower ranges. These facts apply to more than half a dozen counties of this State—too high for fruit growing, yet owing to the great mineral deposits blessed with a heavy mining population. As the mining interests broaden, some means must be devised for supplying this part of the State with fruit grown in selected locations within the county, for freight rates 40 miles in are too heavy to permit even canned fruits to be sold at reasonable prices.

Growing Filberts.

WE have heard for many years that the filbert will succeed well in California, but I have not been able to find any of the bushes in bearing until I found them recently in Nevada county. I am now prepared to say from actual observation that this nut can be fruited to perfection in the mountainous districts of the State, though the bushes I observed did not have half as many nuts as did the native hazelnuts of Sierra county. I was told that the Felix Gillet nursery in Nevada City is the only place where filbert plants are propagated for the trade. I visited this nursery and saw the process of layering under way. First, in raising plants this way, the mother bush is established and allowed to grow and surround herself with long, willowy shoots. These sprouts are bent down and fastened with pegs, the tops being allowed to resume erect form and remain attached to the parent till fall. At this place I saw fifty to sixty young layers around each mother clump. The plants sell at about 35 cents each, and Oregon takes all this nursery has to offer. The layering is done in the fall, always from the new growth, so the process takes just a year for completion. Filberts can be raised from seed, but the proprietors of the nursery told me it was a long wait to bearing, and that the seed does not come true to name, especially in a country where hazelnuts are grown. New varieties are being imported by the Gillet nursery every year, but there seems very little interest in this nut in a commercial way.

Dying Pine Trees.

SOME months ago I mentioned the fact that a great mortality was apparent among the lesser pine forests of the foothills in Placer and adjoining counties. Large areas of the bull pine were devastated by what was then believed to be the drought of the previous winter and which is now known to have been the cause of the trouble. Last week I traveled over a hundred miles among the pines of Nevada and Sierra counties, and had the opportunity of noting the condition of the timber clear to the top of the Sierras. Along the lower ranges the effect of last season's shortness of water is still apparent among the pine forests of the foothills. All the trees that survived, however, are either recovered entirely or are fast assuming their natural appearance. The trees look somewhat sickened after the drought, but no great devastation has occurred where the owners thought their timber ruined one year ago.

Now about the higher timbered areas. I could see no lack of vigor, or direct injury from dry weather. Both the government reserve and the private holdings are in fine condition, though some of the private lands seem to have been ruined by indiscriminate cutting. When we reached the highest altitude we could plainly see a forest fire just starting in the ranges north of Truckee. The residents of Sierra county would have been alarmed a few years ago at a rising and increasingly threatening conflagration. But things have changed since then. I asked a mountaineer if he did not fear a great forest fire from the big blaze before us, but many miles away. He did not think the fire would get the start of the rangers, he said. "I expect the telephones have been ringing all over the reserve about that fire for the last hour," he said. All the villages and towns that we passed through that afternoon seemed perfectly satisfied that the conflagration would not be allowed to get beyond control. It is certainly a satisfaction to those people that they are protected, and it is a vast deal of assurance to the country that these millions of acres of government lands, covered with six-foot sugar pines and other timber of equal size, are in charge of an efficient lot of men with the experience and determination to protect them from fires. In this eighty-mile drive, I did not see the remains of one new forest fire.

Talk in Billions.

BUT there are billions, and billions are really a factor in the world's progress; it may be worth while to try to become used to them. There is a great deal of British capital being used in the development of California, and so long as we do not have enough of our own, we are glad to get it. At a meeting last week in London of the Royal Statistical Society, Mr. George Paish read a paper on "Great Britain's Capital Investments in Other Lands," and stated that to obtain an income from abroad of nearly $700,000,000 a year, Great Britain had invested a sum of about $13,500,000,000, and was obtaining an all-round return of 5.2 per cent. As soon as the large amount of capital sent out in recent years bore fruit, the annual income would reach a much greater figure, and having regard to the investment of capital in Canada, in Argentina, in India, in the United States, and in other lands in the last few years, before the close of the current year the total amount of British capital invested abroad would probably exceed $15,000,000,000, and there were good prospects that in the seven years from 1905 to 1911, inclusive, the British would place new capital in other lands to the extent of at least $3,500,000,000.—[Rural Press.

Be Careful.

IN the citrus page this week may be seen quotation from a circular issued by Mr. Charles D. Adams, manager of the Upland Citrus Association. That circular calls attention to the necessity for greater care in bringing oranges to the packing-house, and adds that "For all loads delivered after the 20th of June, which come to the packing-house without being covered, there shall be a penalty of a quarter of a cent a box to be charged to the account of the owner of the fruit." Such a penalty is most just and reasonable and is what the careless fruit grower is compelled to undergo, only it is not always so definite of perception. That is, when he carelessly picks and packs his fruit and receives indifferent returns, he proceeds to condemn the transportation company or the commission man. The Cultivator realizes that these agencies or some of their methods, rather, are often worthy of most hearty condemnation, but that should not justify the grower in being careless in his own methods. Let the greatest care begin at home, and save not only the quarter-cent penalty an association may place on each box, but the [illegible] penalty, which often is not so apparent, which [illegible] from illy-prepared fruit.

Amongst the earliest short-topped and bright-colored varieties of radishes are First Crop and Non Plus Ultra, adding to these Drie Brunnen, a famous Erfurt variety. Wurzberg Giant is unexcelled as a variety for cultivating in cold frames. The seeds must be sown thinly, or the plants liberally thinned, in order to get fine-sized roots with tender flesh. The Salvator white radish has been seen years in commerce. It is a summer variety, and is becoming a favorite with the public. The netted Sedan radish has long, pear-shaped roots, smooth as to skin, and netted black on white; the flesh of this, as well as that of Salvator, remains tender for a long period of time, and free from woolliness.

Of runner beans, the variety Ohne Gleichen (Peerless) was introduced in 1907; and judged by the crops of that year, it is a thoroughly valuable variety, which will take a higher rank than the July runner, from which it was raised. The pods are about seven inches long, and very freely produced; as good a bean for the private garden as for the market.

Among dwarf kidney beans, Thuringia is a fine late-cropping variety, with long and broad pods. The white-flowering, white podded conserving variety of broad beans, that originated in Holland, is certainly worth cultivating. The plant has great vigor, it crops heavily, and the pods are well filled and of great length. The seeds may be conserved in the green as well as ripe state. The color, yellowish-white, is appreciated in a preserved vegetable.—[Rural Californian.

Parsley for Home Use.

IT is both convenient and wholesome to have always on hand plenty of fresh parsley, and this the housewife may have even if she has only a window garden, as it is easily grown, and a few plants well cared for will supply a large family, if the leaves are constantly cut, so as to prevent the plant running up to seed. The moss-curled parsley is a most beautiful foliage plant, to say nothing of its culinary virtues. To start a parsley bed that will produce an abundance of this delightful garnish and flavoring, the soil should be spaded deep and pulverized. It is a good plan to remove a foot of the soil and fill in a layer of well-rotted manure or poultry droppings; over this spread a layer of soot saved from cleaning the kitchen stove or pipes. The soot is an excellent fertilizer for this plant, and it also tends to keep away gophers, for which parsley roots have a great attraction. Fill in the bed with sifted soil and sow the seed in drills a foot apart; sift a half-inch of soil over the seed and wet down with a sprinkler. The seed of this plant germinates very slowly, and it will be from three to five weeks before you may look for a sprout above ground. Do not let them dry out in the meantime, or they may not appear at all.—[Rural Press.

The Blue Rose.

A VERY near achievement to the long-sought-for "blue rose" has been attained in the new rambler named Veilchenblau (violet blue.) The following is a very sensible notice of it which is culled from the London Evening News:

"The German rosarians are nothing if not enterprising. How many times have they not discovered the blue rose, to say nothing of the black one? But, however greatly their zeal may have outstripped their actual accomplishments on previous occasions, we have now to acknowledge that, thanks to their acuteness, the blue rose is no longer to be counted among the myths of the floral world. It actually exists, and was exhibited at the Royal Horticultural Society's exhibition by Messrs. William Paul & Son, the famous rose growers of Waltham Cross. Many nurserymen possess plants, it appears, but Messrs. Paul are the first to exhibit it in blossom.

"It was raised by a German grower, who sends it out under the name of Vielchenblau, but it will be known among English gardeners as the Blue Rambler. It is a vigorous climbing rose, with large semi-double blooms of violet blue coloring. The shade is not a true blue, the violet tint is too pronounced for that, but it is an immense step in the right direction, and one can scarcely quarrel with the title of Blue Rambler. It is said, curiously enough, to have originated as a sport from Crimson Rambler. It seems to have been regarded, and rightly so, with distrust by English growers who purchased plants on the strength of the German grower's description of the blooms, which were said to be violet blue. But, happily, in this case their misgivings are scarcely warranted, for violet blue correctly describes it. One or two skeptics scoffingly referred to it as of dull purple coloring, but they must be difficult to please, or perhaps color blind. No one pretends that it is the last word in blue roses, but it may be fairly described as an epoch-making variety, for no variety approaches it; it is a new freak among roses, and quite distinct."—[Pacific Garden.

The Constant Calla.

The "Lily of the Nile" (Richardia Africana, or Ethiopica,) also more popularly known as the "Calla Lily," is one of our most common and generally cultivated plants for winter flowering.

The horticultural world has known it for nearly two centuries, and, like everything else that is subject to the ever-changing caprices of public opinion, it has had its days of popularity and times of almost contemptuous disfavor.

The sages of all ages tell us that "Nothing dies; 'tis only superseded." The calla has not been exempt from this rule, but its ubiquity has been persistent. Consigned to disuse time and again, under the glare for a time, of some more popular star, it has patiently withstood popular opinion and the ever-changing, ever-recurring dictates of Dame Fashion.

Marblehead Lettuce

Crisp, Tender, Solid

This is the most popular lettuce on Los Angeles markets. The heads are unusually solid. The white main ribs curve into the center and act like a truss, making it impossible for the leaves to open outward and expose the center, which is always thoroughly blanched. The leaves are always tender and crisp, whether grown in spring, summer or fall. Now is the time to plant this lettuce for early fall use.

Diseases of Digestion.

IT IS said that "money is the root of all evil." This may be true, although money is a good thing to have, if you know how to make good use of it.

It might also be said that the stomach is the seat of all evil—or of all ill-health. Yet a stomach is a good thing to have, if you know how to make proper use of it. It is true that the enterprising medical slaughterers have of late included the stomach among the superfluous organs. Still, the average man will much prefer to continue to handle his food in the old-fashioned way—by the stomach route.

"Diseases of the Stomach and Intestines" with an account of their relations to other diseases, and of the most recent methods of diagnosis and treatment, is a bulky volume of over a thousand pages by Boardman Reed, M.D., of Los Angeles. Dr. Reed had twenty years of practice among dyspeptics and nervous invalids in Atlantic City, and has had special European training at Vienna and Berlin. This books is a compilation of the substance of lectures delivered by him to his classes in the Department of Medicine of Temple College, Philadelphia, and in part upon the "Talks to General Practitioners" contributed by him to the International Medical Magazine during the five years that it was under his editorial management. It is, however, written in such plain language as may easily be comprehended by all intelligent people who have a smattering of knowledge in regard to health and disease.

Referring to the anatomy of the stomach, Dr. Reed quotes from a medical report on the dog's stomach. Such a suggestion is likely to be misleading. The digestion of a dog is vastly more powerful than that of a man. Then, again, as previously shown here, the formation of the intestine of a dog is different, in the dog the appendix being practically a continuation of the intestine. In this case, the cutting up of dogs has led to the superstition that foreign matters can penetrate into the appendix, and to the consequent gross evils of needless and dangerous operations.

Dr. Reed shows that while the hydrochloric acid of the gastric juice is antiseptic for many bacteria, it does not interfere with the development of the yeast germ. He comments at some length upon methods of testing the quantity of hydrochloric acid present. This is of importance, as the diet must, to a certain extent, depend upon whether there is a surplus or a deficiency of this acid. In the latter case, free fats must be specially avoided. Writing recently on this subject to the editor of the Care of the Body, Dr. J. H. Kellogg of Battle Creek, where probably a more careful study of the subject has been made than elsewhere in America, said:

"I do not know of any simple test for an excessive secretion of hydrochloric acid. The most distinctive symptom of excessive acidity is a burning in the stomach and eructations of acid liquid occurring about three hours after the meal, or it may occur sooner than three hours. The occurrence of a coated tongue, bad breath, etc., are not necessarily indications of deficient acidity. Bad breath, coated tongue, eructations of gas, distention, etc., occur very frequently with excessive acidity as well as with deficient acidity. These conditions are indicative of autointoxication through absorption of decomposing substances from the colon.

"I can generally make a very good guess in looking a case over whether a man has hyperacidity or hypoacidity, but chemical examinations show that I am sometimes mistaken."

A chapter is devoted to personal hygiene, in which good advice is given. Dr. Reed gives a liberal amount of space to the important subject of diet. Indeed, he recognizes the importance of hygienic measures and discourages reliance upon drug medication to an extent that is not usual among members of the "regular" medical fraternity, although there is a constantly-increasing number of them coming out of bondage. He properly draws a strict line between mere stimulants and condiments and foods.

The author refers to a book on diseases of the stomach in two volumes, published in Germany, of which all but a few of the closing chapters were devoted to diet and hygienic measures, such as massage, hydropathy, etc. As Dr. Reed says, in this country a physician runs the risk of being considered eccentric if he doesn't make drug treatment his first principal resource in the management of digestive disorders as well as other diseases. Dr. Reed also truthfully observes that any drug which at first produces stimulation will in the end cause overstimulation, and finally depression of the parts stimulated.

Several details are given of "normal diets," and food requirements under various conditions. He quotes the old exaggerated proteid rations of four authorities, running from 118 to 130 grammes per day. This amount has been reduced at least 50 per cent. by experiments made at Yale by Prof. Chittenden, and almost 75 per cent. by careful experiments made in Germany. Later on in the book, Dr. Reed gives due credit to the experiments made at Yale University.

The suggestion made by Dr. Reed that under certain conditions, patients may for a time demand more nutriment than a well person, is a dangerous one. The less food—or anything less—that is put into a sick stomach the better.

Dr. Reed repeats the old platitude about a "mixed diet" being the best, whereas, as frequently shown here, a mixed diet is the most illogical of all the diets, the only animal following such a diet being the hog, and then only after he has been perverted by man.

Dr. Reed says fasting is usually safe for a few days, but rarely much longer in the case of invalids. Evidently the author has not given the study to this important subject that it deserves or he would know that most wonderful recoveries from chronic ailments, declared by "regular" physicians to be incurable, have been effected by prolonged fasts, extending over weeks. In fact, in some cases of severe chronic diseases this is the only possible means of cure.

The author refers approvingly to rectal feeding in certain cases, also says that some people have apparently gained by being placed in baths of warm milk, although, as he declares, the fact that people may live for several weeks without food at all makes it uncertain whether any benefit can be derived in this way.

Summarizing advice to dyspeptics the author says:

"Let them keep their feet warm, their heads cool, their kidneys active, and their bowels open, by simple natural methods, such as exercise, drinking freely of water between meals, etc., avoiding drugs for these purposes except when especially ordered by their physician."

This is not unlike the advice given by the editor of the Care of the Body in a souvenir card issued last Christmas: "Don't worry, don't hurry, keep your head cool, your feet warm, and your bowels open."

As to drugs, are they any less poisonous when prescribed by a physician than when taken otherwise?

Referring to the use of wines and beer when there is stomach diseases, he includes the possibility of port and sherry. These fortified sweet wines are about the worst thing in the line of liquor that can be put into the stomach of a well person. In a sick stomach they are poison.

Of "zwieback" he declares the particles are too hard and gritty for easy solution in the stomach, in consequence of which there often result from such food increased flatulence and constipation. Most hard crackers are open to the same condition. This is a suggestion that should be considered by food "cranks."

Of sugar Dr. Reed says it is the most difficult point in a difficult subject. Sugar, he declares, is essential to nutrition. Yes, but not refined concentrated cane sugar. All the starch we eat is transformed into embryo sugar before it is utilized. There is not the slightest doubt that the mere dropping of cane sugar from the dietary would, in many cases of dyspepsia, be sufficient to effect the cure.

Writing of salt, Dr. Reed says: "Salt being a necessary constituent of the body, the taste for it is natural—one to be satisfied."

Wrong again. Chlorine and sodium are both found in the body. They are also found in the organic form, in most natural foods, and it is only thus that they can be assimilated by the body, the inorganic chloride of sodium being a slow poison that overtaxes the depurative organs.

The use of alcohol, coffee and tea is discouraged. Milk, as Dr. Reed shows, is very liable to ferment in some stomachs and intestines. Milk is indeed an unnatural and dangerous food for adults, when mixed with other foods.

A number of diet schemes are quoted without indorsement of German sources. One of these includes such altogether unwholesome foods as sweetbread (containing five times as much uric acid as beef,) raw beef, sausage, and tapioca. Von Noorden's directions for cases of catarrh of the intestines, including nine feedings in the twenty-four hourse, reads like a nightmare. It includes thick cream, tea, coffee, cocoa, bacon, Westphalia sausages, brandy, meat and Moselle wine. Now what do you think of that?

Dr. Reed emphasizes the importance of thorough mastication, writing in a respectful manner of Horace Fletcher the "layman."

Altogether, Dr. Reed's ideas on diet are in the main sound, except that he is a little too much inclined to favor flesh food, and that concentrated essence of filth beef "tea."

On the subject of methods of treatment in intestinal diseases the author sensibly says:

"Many failures in treatment occur in cases in which the physician has made a correct diagnosis, but places too little stress in his directions to the patient upon the importance of changing radically the faulty modes of living which produced the disease, and too much upon our remedies, especially drugs." He advises physicians not to hesitate to sanction the use of measures because they may have originated outside of the profession. Here is a significant statement:

"Young physicians, especially, need to be reminded that nature unaided makes innumerable cures, and that a very little assistance at just the right time and place may be all-sufficient; also, that our drugs sometimes harm more than they help. Even the Christian Scientists, faith curists, etc., occasionally produce astonishing results merely by stopping medicines which we had pushed too long or too vigorously."

A chapter is devoted to the remedial value of exercise, games, gymnastics, etc., but the author wisely what is all this but osteopathy? Dr. Reed says has been up to the present time, almost no scien- erature upon the subject. Such a statement will e our osteopathic friends.

Reed writes favorably of the use of electricity, and some detail on the subject. In regard to flush- colon, he sensibly writes as follows:

Reed recommends in place of the ordinary enema, tion of two to six ounces of cotton-seed oil, or ther bland vegetable oil. The suggestion is not a , but is valuable, and should be heeded by those ffer this way.

Dietsic Experiments.

THE following communication has been received from Dr. B. M. Lawrence, of the Old Folks' Home, Boyle Heights, Los Angeles. Dr. Lawrence adds that the published statement of his having refused to run a recent footrace with a man of his age who used tobacco and liquor is untrue, the fact being that the person referred to refused to race:

"While on a lecture tour through the South in the spring of 1860, the question came into my mind: Can we get life out of anything which is dead? If not, why not eat live food? And at once I concluded to make the experiment. In order to do so, I took pure wheat, soaked or macerated it till soft, then mixed it with crushed nut kernels, including pecans, walnuts or almonds. This solid food with any good fruit was my daily bill of fare. Soon I observed I was becoming exceedingly sensitive, so much so that I could not sleep with an old feather bed in my room, and most of the people smelled so offensive that it was very unpleasant to ride with them on the cars. My health was good, and I became very agile, improving mentally as well as physically.

"After a time, however, I felt obliged to give up the experiment on account of extreme sensitiveness. Many years later I met Dr. Tanner, and heard him tell of the benefits he derived from his forty days' fast—how it relieved him of rheumatic pains—and as my shoulders were getting a little stiff, I became more than usually interested in the question of elimination. About the same time I had a correspondence with J. N. Silver of Auburn, Me., in which he informed me that for the past five years he had eaten only one meal per day, using no meat, tea or coffee, that his wife had practiced the one-meal system for three years, and about a score of his neighbors and friends were eating about one-third less than formerly, partaking of only one meal daily. After a little reflection, I came to the conclusion that if Dr. Tanner could live for forty days without any food, and Mr. Silver and his friends were stronger mentally as well as physically by eating much less, and plainer food, I would take only one meal a day for forty days and note results. Soon, to my surprise I found the stiffness left my joints, that my gustatory pleasure was greatly increased, and ever since then I find that one good square meal a day with a little ripe fruit at intervals has been all that my system seems to require.

"My mother and others of her family were victims of the 'white plague,' and as a result of heredity I have always had to combat with scrofulous catarrhal indications, which have impaired my hearing. On reading a statement recently in the Care of the Body about a woman that had cured herself of catarrhal deafness by a long fast, I concluded to see what a short abstinence from food would do for my loss of hearing. The first of May, I quit eating, and for eight days did not take a particle of nourishment. The first five days I tasted nothing but water. The last three days I added a little lemon or other fruit juice to the water with a relish of honey. During the time my strength was about normal, and after two or three days I had no sensation of hunger. I lost about half a pound daily, which I regained as rapidly when I began eating again.

"My theory was that catarrhal phlegm is unassimilated food; a surplus that the system cannot use, that it clogs up the emunctories and is finally forced out through the mucous membrane. If retained, it brings on Bright's disease, liver and lung disorders, terminating in dyspepsia, neuralgia, rheumatism or some other chronic ailment. . . .

"That I am not to be classed with the 'down-and-outs,' I hope to demonstrate beyond question on or before my eightieth birthday, September 13, by running a dash of 50 or 100 yards and have a record made of the time.

"My object in bringing this matter before the public is to impress upon the minds of all, both old and young, that every effect has some adequate cause and that the estimated 8,000,000 of consumptives, the crowded insane asylums, juvenile courts, prisons and penitentiaries are all results of violated natural laws, proving that vice, sooner or later always brings misery, for God's everlasting truth ordains that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Summer Diet.

A PHILADELPHIA correspondent writes as follows in regard to the sufferings endured by people on the Atlantic Coast during the superheated summer season.

"The reason for the suffering nere in a great many cases is that when a man is gasping for breath he will sit down to a two-pound steak and what generally goes with it. Then another man says: 'I'll eat lightly.' He goes up to some lunch counter and orders strawberry shortcake with a large portion of chocolate ice cream on top of the cake. What an awful mess it looks. Others —'small lunchers'—will swallow in a great hurry a quart of ice-cold lemonade and a chunk of custard pie."

This is quite true. If people would only exercise discretion in diet, they would suffer little from extremes of temperature. The office of food is largely to keep up the animal heat. Now, when the temperature of the atmosphere is as high, or higher, than that of the blood, you evidently need very little food, and that of a non-heating kind. To shovel a lot of heating food into the stomach on a hot day is just as senseless as it would be to put on a fur overcoat and sit in front of a blazing fire on the Fourth of July.

Make your summer diet to consist largely of fresh

CANCER

The Dow Cancer Remedy absolutely cures cancer in its earlier stages. Physicians of note, scientists and editors have examined our patients who were either taking or had been cured by this remedy, and have remarked that the remedy will do all and more than we claim for it. In fact, some of our patients who have been cured are eminent physicians.

L. L. Benson, M.D., 383 Ashtabula St., Pasadena, was cured of two cancers on the face after all other known means had failed.

C. P. Buckner, M.D., investigated nearly three hundred cases, and states emphatically that it is the best Cancer Remedy known. Send for booklet. It's FREE.

Care of the Body.

fruits and salads—made with lemon juice in place of vinegar—and notice how much more comfortable you feel.

Dr. Tilden writes as follows on this subject in a recent number of A Stuffed Club:

"It requires very much more food to maintain the body at zero than at 90 degrees. The foods required in the summer are those that are easily digested. Instead of eating wheat bread and the different forms of wheat foods, corn bread, hominy and corn flakes, eat fresh peas, string beans and roasting ears—corn on the cob. Instead of eating beefsteak, eat lettuce, cress and any raw vegetables grown in the garden; in other words, eat grass. Instead of eating the dry, sweet fruits, figs, dates, etc., eat berries and melons. If the weight declines and there is a lack of strength, eat stale bread and butter for a few mornings for breakfast, or every other day for dinner; chops, fish or eggs, with a large combination salad, for the alternate dinner. When the body does not call for food, it is not needed."

Undereating and Overeating.

DR. WOODS HUTCHINSON, the "Little-Apologizer-For-Human-Frailties," continues to break into the magazines, at great length. That he should write the stuff he does is not surprising, because it brings him notoriety and money, but that reputable magazines should be willing to print, month after month, such false and misleading matter, is a subject for mild surprise.

In one of Hutchinson's latest effusions, he goes to the limit of misrepresentation of facts. The article is entitled "The Danger of Undereating." As frequently stated here, for every one who suffers from undereating, ten thousand are sick and die prematurely from overeating. Even a majority of the very poor eat too much, although, as they usually eat of the wrong kind of food, they are often starved.

Why would it not be a good idea to get up an article on "The Danger of Being Too Good?"

* * *

Salt as a Corrosive.

RAILROAD mechanical officials and engineers are struggling with the problem of preventing the corrosive effect of brine drippings from refrigerator cars on steel and iron. One road found that the damage in this way amounted to over $400 per mile during the year. It is intended to make refrigerator cars drip-proof.

If salt in solution will act in this destructive manner on iron and steel, what effect do you suppose it must have on the delicate lining of the human stomach? Yet you find people who regularly consume salted foods of all kinds and wonder that they become sick.

* * *

"Aching Voids."

DR. DISTASA of Paris, according to a London dispatch, indorses Prof. Metschnikoff's idea that the large intestine, in which harmful germs breed, should be cut out, so as to increase the chance of prolonged life.

As previously suggested here, it looks as if the time would come, before long, when human beings will be going around stuffed out with cotton wadding—will become "aching voids"—that is to say, if the enterprising surgeons have their way and the fool people don't revolt. What an awful bungler nature must have been, when she made man. How much better the young medical graduate would have fixed it.

Woman's Works.

MRS. H. RICHARDS, instructor of chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in the course of a lecture before students of the University of California summer school, suggested that a partial solution of the problem arising from the entry of women into business life may be found in a system providing payment for housewives for domestic services rendered. She added:

"We must come to a correct valuation of the work done by women in the home. It is because no economic value has been placed on their work that women have turned to vocations that bring recompense. Women do not seek environments other than the home because they are more pleasant; on the contrary, they take up occupations less agreeable because in them their efforts are appreciated and rewarded."

Mrs. Richards is undoubtedly right. The census bureau recently classified housewives as persons "without occupation." As recently suggested in these columns, men would find housekeeping an arduous occupation, if they had to do the work that women do uncomplainingly, day after day, all the year round.

"A man's work runs from sun to sun,
"A woman's work is never done."

Death From Tight Lacing.

THE following dispatch from Cincinnati was recently published in The Times:

"Miss Elsie Gasser, 18 years old, the beautiful daughter of Attorney and Mrs. John J. Gasser, living at No. 2419 West McMicken avenue, is dead. Dr. Gustave Strohbach, the family physician, says her death was caused by the tight lacing of corsets and clothes.

"Miss Gasser was stricken about ten days ago with what appeared to the doctors to be appendicitis. An operation followed, but the doctors could not trace any harm to the appendix.

"All of the consulting physicians who attended her subject of the danger of premature burial con- to attract much attention. perhaps in some owing to the frequent references to this most subject in the Care of the Body. It has been that there is no absolutely certain test of death the medical fraternity, except decomposition that seldom has a chance to set in before burial, country, where the funeral follows the decease indecent haste. On the other hand, in a re- number of the daily Times, Hector Alliot of Los had a communication in which he mentions tests of death which, he declares are certain. surely "important if true." The following ex- from Mr. Alliot's communication is reproduced, benefit of those numerous readers of the Care Body who do not see the daily Times:

infallible test of death is the injection of fluo- solution. If those to whom this possibility of interred alive is a torturing thought should re- that some hours before their burial their bodies treated, they need have no more fear.

is the most powerful pigment of which knowledge. It is a non-poisonous substance, obtainable. So marvelous is its color that it tints water visibly green in the pro- part to thirty millions. A few tiny grains of water. If, therefore, into the supposedly dead there were introduced by of a hypodermic needle three cubic centimeters fluorescein solution, the result would be conclusive.

case of positive death there would be no whatever in the body's appearance. Should the be still alive, however, should the heart action but for a few moments between the time of the of the fluid and the hour of burial, the blood carry the fluorescein to the skin surface of the en- body, coloring the extremities a saffron hue, turn- the face a yellowish color, and making the eyes as emeralds. Upon the appearance of any of these restoratives would be applied and burial would place. Should the supposed dead be restored to health and strength, the fluorescein solution, being non-toxic, would cause no ill effect except a jaundiced appearance which would disappear in a short time.

"This method, while easy of application in cities, would be impracticable, possibly, in small towns, mining regions and remote places, where a death test is most needed, since premature burials are often the result of haste and ignorance, and lack of medical attention. Two very simple means may be employed of finding out whether or no death has taken place.

"Acetate of lead is obtainable in any drug store. If with a saturated solution of this substance lines are drawn upon a piece of white writing paper they remain invisible. By placing the paper upon which the lines have been made over the opening of the nostrils of the dead person, painted side inward, the lines will in a few hours become black and distinctly visible, should the person be really dead. If no change occurs in the white paper, life is still present. Decomposition first manifests itself in the lungs, and the gases arising therefrom find outlet through the nostrils; these fumes, coming in contact with the acetate of lead upon the paper, form a chemical combination that turns the invisible lines black. Thus we have an absolutely simple and unquestionable proof of death.

"Where the acetate of lead is not procurable, there is still simpler proof which is equally conclusive. Two bright, shiny silver dimes may each have a piece of paper pasted securely so as to cover half of one side; these coins may then be inserted, papered side inward, in the nostrils of the dead. Should death really have taken place these coins will within twenty-four or thirty-six hours become dull and blackened on the exposed portions, while the surface covered by the paper will have remained bright. The same chemical process that made the acetate of lead turn black will also color the silver coin. It is the indubitable proof of incipient decomposition.

"With such simple means at hand, it would seem that no one need fear premature burial. The general, albeit compulsory, use of fluorescein solution by undertakers everywhere would forever remove a dread from those ill and dying, and allay one more fear of suffering humanity."

To Avoid Wrinkles.

A BAKERSFIELD correspondent writes that a man of 56, living at Merced, Cal., whose face is as smooth and devoid of crow's feet as a boy's, assures the correspondent that this is because he habitually rubs his face upward instead of downward, thus discouraging stretching and falling of the skin.

Growth of Temperance.

FOLLOWING is an article by Ada May Krecker in a contemporary:

"There needs no argument to press home the proof of a decline in the use of liquors. It is perfectly evident throughout the country. And in narcotics a similar change of heart is coming about. John J. Hayes, winner of the Marathon race in London, confesses in a magazine article that 'No long-distance runner can smoke either cigars or cigarettes and run. One thing is essential, abstinence from tobacco in any form. I suggest running as a certain cure for the tobacco habit to any one who wishes to break himself of it.'

"Go where we will among the savages and we find drugs powerful and plentiful employed for setting into action men's powers. It is only among the finest types of the most advanced races that we see them discarded in favor of subtler stimuli. Prof. James, the Harvard psychologist, urges the superior claims, as excitants, of morning air and sunlight and fine skies and mountain walks and dewy flowers and great thoughts and sweet aspirations above the frothy hopes of the foaming glass. They are the natural stimulants of refined organisms.

"These need no other. No, not even coffee and tea. An Englishman, E. Baron Russell by name, has been making predictions for the year 2000 A. D., and he has it that by that time the human system will have been so refined that tea and coffee will be placed in the same category that alcoholic stimulants occupy nowadays. The prohibitionists of that remote hour will be campaigning against tea and coffee and teetotalers will sign their pledges in favor of coffeeless breakfasts and afternoon teas without "the cup that cheers but does not inebriate."

That is to say, temperate habits will become more general, through education and training of the people, not by means of prohibitory legislation.

While on this subject, how about discontinuing the use of flesh foods, an unnecessary and unnatural habit, that is responsible for a vast amount of human and animal suffering?
